

Scott to file suit to halt police magazine ad scheme

by LEA TONKIN

Illinois Atty. Gen. William Scott said Thursday he will file suit this morning against the Illinois Police Bulletin magazine operation, which has attracted contributions from businesses in the Northwest suburbs and throughout the Chicago metropolitan area.

The suit, to be filed in Circuit Court, is aimed at halting the operation.

The action follows the arrest Tuesday of a "runner" for the magazine by Buffalo Grove police on a charge of attempted theft. Louis A. DeGrande of Chicago was arrested as he attempted to pick up $25 for an advertisement in the magazine at Rose-Lynn Flooring Store, 16 Ranch Mart.

Defendants named in the suit in addition to the Illinois Police Bulletin, are Thaddeus C. Toudor, Joseph Bianco and James Calona.

THE SUIT charges that Toudor and his associates called Chicago area businesses on the telephone to solicit contributions for advertisements in the "official" Illinois Police Bulletin.

Donald Mulack, assistant attorney general in the charitable trusts and donations division, said the magazine is not circulated among legitimate police organizations. The publication contains 95 per cent advertisements and has no professional content or readership value, he said.

"It's a sham," said Mulack of the magazine scheme. The 100 S. LaSalle St., Chicago address given by the magazine operators is fake, he said. An answering service at the location takes calls for Illinois Police Bulletin.

The runners and the answering service receive instructions in person from the operators, said Mulack, adding that Toudor's base of operations is unknown. One check for a $150 contribution from a Roselle firm was chased at the Crown

Liquor Store on the South side of Chicago.

MULACK said a standard sales pitch was used for the Illinois Police Bulletin ad sales. A man who identifies himself as a state police officer calls a business in the Chicago area. The caller asks whether the business executive would contribute a donation for an issue of the magazine honoring state police. Donations range from $35 to $150. A runner is sent out to collect the money. He keeps 3 per cent of the money and turns the rest over to Bianco or another operator, who hands out another list of advertisers. An additional enticement to advertisers was the offer of an Illinois Bureau of Information identification card by the operators. He name closely resembles the Illinois Bureau of Investigation title, Mulack noted. Advertisers were told that the card would grant access to police files on employees.

Illinois Police Bulletin apparently originated in November, 1972. One edition was published in 1973 and operators claimed that two editions would be published in 1974. The publication consists of advertiser listings (name and address), ads for the magazine and a story on marijuana which Mulack said was taken verbatim from a government publication.

THE SCHEME was designed to attract "patriotic, law-abiding members of the public," leading them to believe that contributions would be "used for police and legitimate police organizations," Scott charged.

The suit asks that the Illinois Police Bulletin operators be restrained from further solicitations. Scott also seeks an accounting for funds collected by the operators and that the funds be placed in a "constructive trust." The "large" amount of money collected by the group is unspecified.

Bicycle thefts soar as pros reap big profits

by JOHN MAES

Bicycles are disappearing from backyards, porches, and garages in the city at the rate of about four to five per day, said Traffic Safety Officer Robert Neil of the Des Plaines Police Dept.

Thieves have pilfered 41 bikes this month and have cost local bicycle owners a total of $3,500, statistics show. Only six of the stolen bikes have been recovered.

Although local authorities do not keep annual or year-to-date figures on the number of bicycle thefts, more than 8,200 bikes have fallen victim to thieves in Cook County so far this year, 1,500 of those in the suburbs.

Neil said organized bike thieves and theft rings, some of whom reap huge profits for their work, are responsible for the majority of the bike thefts reported in the city.

SUCH THIEVES usually are out to put the bike up for a quick resale and gain a clear profit, Neil said.

"They're stealing for profit, most of them," said Neil. "Many of the bikes stolen are stolen for resale."

He said it is not uncommon for a stolen bike purchased for $150 to appear at a flea market sale for $30 or $35.

Neil said bike thieves come from all over the Chicago area. Some do nothing more than cruise neighborhoods looking for unattended bicycles to steal.

"They're just looking for a loose bike and once they find it, they throw it in their car or truck and off they go."

LAW-ENFORCEMENT officials estimate that 3,000 bicycles will be stolen from suburban residents this year, an increase from the 2,551 suburban bike thefts reported last year in Cook County.

The problem is just as bad for police who say they usually have nothing to go

Negotiators 4 per cent apart

Teacher pact discussions hit roadblock over salaries

Teacher contract negotiations in Des Plaines Dist. 62 have hit a snag over salary, say representatives of the board and teacher negotiating teams.

John Pacay, president of the Des Plaines Education Assn., said the two sides are about "4 per cent apart on the salary schedule." He said teachers had reached agreement with the board on "a good portion of the non-money items."

Stuart Kisten, chairman of the board negotiating team, said "the main issue left to be resolved consists of money items."

"I think once we get settled on salary, everything else will fall into place," he said.

Pacay said teachers are asking for a cost-of-living increase. He said both sides agreed that the cost of living went up 10 per cent.

"We can't ask teachers to take home less spending power than they did this year," he said.

Representatives of the board and teachers met Wednesday night to iron out details for the 1974-75 contract. The next negotiations session is set for Aug. 12.

DESPITE THE LACK of agreement on money items both Kisten and Pacay termed the meeting "congenial."

"It's hard to say whether we'll get negotiations completed by fall, but we hope to get it resolved before school starts," Kisten said.

Negotiations for the 1973-74 contract dragged on for 11 months last year when the board and teachers failed to reach an agreement on non-salary items.

The board and the DPEA reached a settlement last November, narrowly averting a threatened teachers' strike.

Preschool helps kids get ready

Jane Obolkowitch sits down on a piano bench and begins weaving a tale about a mother cat and her three adventurous kittens.

Kneeling on the floor in front of her, a small group of 5 and 6-year-olds listen intently, occasionally piping up with accounts of "my kitty at home."

To the children, the 1½ hours spent with Mrs. Obolkowitch weekday morning is a time of fun and games. To the teacher, it's a little more time to prepare the youngsters for first grade and the challenge of reading and writing.

THE SUMMER school class — entitled post kindergarten — was drawn up by Mrs. Obolkowitch two years ago because "there was nothing available in summer school for the kindergarten child." Post kindergarten classes are now in operation at four Des Plaines Dist. 62 schools — Terrace, Cumberland, Central and South.

"I really feel kindergarten is an important grade — there is so much work to get the kids ready for reading," she said. "There's quite a bit to learn — it's far from being just a playtime."

Post-kindergarten classes are made up of youngsters who will enter first grade in the fall and need additional help to catch up with their classmates, according to Richard Ruffolo, director of instructional resources.

"These youngsters are what we used to term slow bloomers," he said. "The maturation rate of each child is different — these children's blooming rates just don't fit the regular pattern."

RUFFOLO NOTED that an extra month of work with a teacher over the summer is often enough to catch the youngsters up with their peers.

"The children are maturing all the while — we're just assuring that at least part of the day is given over to the activities that help them get ready for first grade," he said.

Every child participating in the post-kindergarten class has his own individual needs, Mrs. Obolkowitch said. One child may have trouble learning phonetic sounds while another has problems with eye-hand coordination.

"During the year, a kindergarten teacher has 20 some children. It's hard to get to spend a great deal of time with every day with a child," she said. "Children in this program need extra time — an hour and a half of pretty much con-

Committee to decide how to fund city budget hike

The other shoe probably will drop next week for local residents, when city officials sit down to decide how to pay for wage increases and additional manpower approved in the 1974 city budget.

The Des Plaines City Council's finance committee has planned two working sessions next week to determine what the 1974 tax levy will be. The committee will meet at 11 a.m. Monday in the city hall conference room and stage a committee-of-the-whole session Wednesday at 8 p.m.

The city council approved a record $12.5 million budget last March, but reached no final decision on how to pay for the 5 per cent increase over 1973's budget.

CITY COMPTROLLER Duane Biletz said Thursday he could not release any information regarding possible tax increases until after the meetings with the aldermen.

Residents may not see an increase in property taxes if the council decides to create some new means of raising money. They have held preliminary discussions on the possibility of raising garbage collection fees or instituting a utility tax throughout the city.

Besides the normal cost increases prompted by inflation, the city also will seek means to finance an 8.5 per cent salary increase for city employees and additional manpower and equipment provided for the police, fire and public works employees.

No formal action on the tax levy could be taken by the council until its next (Continued on Page 5)

County begins furnace probe

The Cook County Dept. of Building and Zoning is investigating whether defective furnaces and faulty heating systems have been installed in unincorporated Cook County. The investigation, announced Thursday by county officials, follows stories that appeared in The Herald about widespread furnace defects in Elk Grove Village. The investigation comes at the request of County Board Comr. Carl Hansen of Elk Grove Township.

10-story complex 'alive'

Plans to build a 10-story office building and train station over the Chicago and North Western Ry. tracks in Mount Prospect are "alive" but temporarily stalled because of high interest rates, according to the developer. ## 'Pigeon drop' strikes again

A Hoffman Estates woman fell victim to a get-rich-quick "pigeon drop" scheme in which two confidence women bilked her of $1,500 at a shopping center in the village. The two women told the victim that they had found $30,000 belonging to a gambler and that they were going to consult an attorney about the legality of the find. The victim, who asked not to be identified, was asked to contribute a $1,500 share toward "legal fees."

Incorporation hearing delayed

A public hearing on the incorporation of Prospect Heights, originally set for today, has been continued to Aug. 8 and 12. The hearing was first continued in May, when it was thought a compromise might be possible between the Prospect Heights Improvement Assn. and various objectors. However, that compromise effort fell through last month when the village of Arlington Heights and Northbrook would not go along with an agreement. Jack Gilligan, PHIA president, said his group will present population figures to support his contention there are enough residents in the area to qualify it for incorporation.

Three Elk Grove Village families contracted for sod, paying more than $400 per home and now have alternating rows of green and yellow grass. One resident, Mrs. Sue Conroy, said Northern Nurseries of Niles sold and door-to-door when she moved into her home in March. The company promised the homeowners a guarantee at that time, but the contract she signed has no guarantee. The owner wants his money, and Mrs. Conroy is talking to her lawyer.

'Music in the Night' coming

"Music in the Night," a gala music competition sponsored by the Illinois American Legion at Elk Grove High School, will take place Saturday as part of the 54th annual American Legion convention now being held in Chicago.

The competition will feature the ten leading junior and senior drum and bugle corps which will compete for the coveted Illinois state championship. There will also be exhibitions by state champion bands, color guards and drill teams. Preliminary eliminations will begin at 8 a.m. at Elk Grove High School, with concert band competition following at 9 a.m. Competition will take place all day and will climax at 7 p.m. with the "Music in the Night" spectacle.

Bensinger answers 'murder' allegation: 'it's gutter politics'

by AL MESSERSCHMIDT
The pain showed in Peter Bensinger's eyes. The anger came next.

"Gutter politics," said Bensinger, the Republican candidate for county sheriff. "Libel . . . dirty tricks . . . I could not believe that Cook County politics would sink to this level."

Bensinger stood Thursday before Chicago television cameras, before a roomful of reporters and campaign backers. Bensinger denied that he was "involved in a murder 10 years ago in England," but said that in 1964 an English heiress died after her car collided with his at a London intersection.

FOR BENSINGER, the educated, picture candidate of dignity, the "murder" charge was a bomb dropped on television Wednesday night by Cook County Corrections Director Winston Moore and was "impossible to believe."

"It was my hope and belief that the sheriff's race would be run on facts, not fiction," Bensinger said. "I cannot find words strong enough to describe this incredibly unfounded, malicious charge."

The GOP candidate, a former head of the Chicago Crime Commission, said he will file suit against Moore and Sheriff Richard Elrod.

Moore swung the "murder" charge at Bensinger during a live television broadcast on WLS-TV, Channel 7, Wednesday night. Moore was answering questions about a federal grand jury investigation of a county jail prisoner and of jail financial operations.

"Peter Bensinger is behind this investigation," Moore said, adding that the investigation was designed to "steamroller" Bensinger's election over Elrod.

"I NEVER SAID this in the past, but I'm going to say it now. You know, I never killed man nor animal. I'm not a big-game hunter. I don't hunt. I don't fish. I never killed anybody," Moore said.

"The question is, I wonder, whether Peter Bensinger can say that he hasn't ever killed anybody, voluntarily or involuntarily, and I wish somebody would check and see what happened when he was in England, whether he killed anybody. There was a woman killed, and

PETER BENSINGER

RICHARD ELROD

Peter Bensinger was involved in the murder."

When informed of the statement Wednesday, Bensinger rushed to the television station and refuted the charge at the end of the news broadcast.

Bensinger and Moore did not meet at the station.

"I think Sheriff Elrod was aware of this situation," Bensinger said when asked why Elrod will be named as a defendant in the libel-slander suit. "He made no effort to stop it. I'm saying shame on the sheriff."

AT A LATE PRESS conference Thursday, Elrod said, "I have never urged Director Moore or anyone else to make statements about or against Mr. Bensinger. As my record reflects, I have always attempted to campaign on positive issues and programs."

Bensinger said that "individuals who have direct connection and close political affiliation" with Elrod threatened to use the London car accident against him if he joined the GOP ticket last fall to oppose Elrod.

"To call the charge irresponsible does not begin to describe Mr. Moore's action well enough," Bensinger said. "To say that I murdered a woman is a vicious, calculated, premeditated and libelous attack."

Bensinger distributed copies of a British police report and British newspaper clippings to show innocence of wrongdoing in a two-car auto accident April 13, 1964, in Chelsea, England. An heiress, Valerie Dawn James, was killed in the early morning collision.

"London Coroner Gavin Thurston ruled April 23, 1964 that Miss James' death was 'accidental,'" copies of a coroner's jury report state.

TESTIMONY AT THE inquest showed that Bensinger, then England sales manager for the Brunswick Corp., was driving his 1963 Jaguar through an intersection green light when an Austin Mini-Cooper driven by Miss James drove through a red light. The collision between Bensinger's Jaguar and the Mini-Cooper threw Miss James from the wreckage.

A witness, who was driving behind Bensinger, told the coroner's jury that "the Jaguar definitely went into the junction when the lights turned green, not on the red or amber." Other witnesses said that Miss James was wearing new contact lenses before the accident.

The accident was reported in Chicago newspapers in 1964 and "I have made no effort not to discuss it," Bensinger said.

"The first time I saw Miss James, she was lying on the pavement in London. I put my coat over her after the accident. I tried to call an ambulance," Bensinger said when asked if he knew Miss James before the collision.

Bensinger then denied that he fled from England after the accident, saying that he became European sales manager for Brunswick and worked in Germany.

BENSINGER is rated as the strongest GOP candidate in the county election. Publicly-released financial reports indicate that Bensinger has raised more money than other GOP candidates combined.

"I am no wheeler-dealer politician. My opposition has called me a white knight and a crusader. They have used these terms in a cynical manner. This kind of personal vendetta only makes me more determined."

When asked if Moore should be fired, Bensinger said, "Let's ask the sheriff . . . the board of Corrections . . . the federal grand jury." Moore's charge indicated that the Democratic party "will go to the very end to hold on to this important political office."

Elrod said, "My primary concern is his (Moore's) professional ability and not his personal opinions." A reprimand of Moore can, under Illinois statute, only come from the five-member County Board of Corrections. "I had no prior discussion whatsoever with Director Moore about his statement," Elrod said.

Last November, Moore accused Bensinger of influencing a John Howard Assn. report that criticized county jail operations. The federal investigation reportedly focuses on misuse of commissary funds and embezzlement of money from an inmate's trust fund.

Carey wants Daley license revoked

Cook County State's Atty. Bernard Carey said Thursday the state insurance broker's license of William Daley, son of Chicago's mayor, should be revoked. He said Daley received his license through a "raw display of political clout" and warned that others concerned in the case would be prosecuted. Former state insurance examiner Robert Wills was found guilty Wednesday of perjury for denying he changed answers on state insurance examinations for Daley and others.

Congressman threatens Kerner impeachment

Rep. H. R. Gross, R-Iowa, told Congressmen Thursday in a floor speech he would institute impeachment proceedings against Federal Judge Otto Kerner unless Kerner resigns as a member of the U.S. 7th Circuit Court of Appeals in Chicago. Gross noted that Kerner, former governor of Illinois, has been convicted of fraud, conspiracy and tax evasion, that all his appeals have been exhausted and that he has been ordered to start serving a federal prison term on July 29.

Environmentalists win strip-mining vote

The House Thursday defeated an attempt by opponents of a strong federal strip mining law to substitute a less restrictive measure. It was a major victory for environmentalists seeking to end devastation to surface-mined land which has scarred much of Appalachia. The House also killed another bill to outlaw such mining entirely, leaving it with a relatively strong measure approved by the Interior Committee.

Coastal marshlands endangered: Saxbe

Attorney General William B. Saxbe Thursday urged federal prosecutors to give top priority to fighting "Twentieth Century buccaneering" by real estate developers whose projects illegally destroy coastal marshlands. He said destruction of the marshes could drastically reduce food supplies and doom coastal fishing.

Dye firms indicted for price-fixing

A federal grand jury in Newark, N. J., indicted E. I. du Pont de Nemours and Co., Allied Chemical Corp. and seven other firms Thursday on charges of conspiring to drive out competition in the multi-million dollar dye industry. The firms, which accounted for 60 per cent of total dye sales in the U.S. in 1971, were charged with conspiring to fix prices at "artificial and non-competitive levels" in violation of the Sherman Anti-Trust Act.

Moratorium on genetic tests urged

A National Academy of Sciences panel appealed to scientists around the world Thursday to postpone certain kinds of genetic experiments for fear they might create new drug resistant germs or possibly spread cancer viruses. The panel asked for a voluntary six-month moratorium so theoretical dangers could be evaluated and discussed at an international meeting planned for next February.

U.S. declares war on the cockroach

Hoping to rid the nation's slums of a repulsive pest, the federal government has declared war on the cockroach. In the first grant of its kind, the Environmental Protection Agency has awarded the Texas Agricultural Extension Station $94,956 for a three-year study of the insect and its movements — including answers to why the indoor cockroach is not breeding as frequently as it once did and why the outdoor cockroach may be moving indoors to take up the slack.

Northern Irish vigilante groups proposed

A militant Protestant member of parliament called Thursday for the immediate formation of armed vigilante groups to protect Northern Ireland from Irish Republican Army attacks. Ernest Baird said the vigilantes should be created with or without the consent of the government of Northern Ireland.

Tourist film may aide probe of bombing

Hundreds of persons who were visiting the Tower of London gave rolls of film to Scotland Yard Thursday in hopes they can supply leads in the fatal bombing Wednesday at the popular tourist attraction. The blast, blamed on Irish Republican Army guerrillas, killed a British woman librarian and injured 39 persons, seven of them children under the age of 10.

Red China seeks crackdown on violence

Communist party leaders in China's most densely populated province, Kiangsu, have called for stricter public security measures to control "bad elements who have seriously sabotaged social order." A provincial radio broadcast from Nanjing said gangsters and other criminal forces were responsible, but that some anti-party elements were taking advantage of the situation to stage disruptions.

U.S. economy may limit Israeli aid: Simon

Treasury Secretary William E. Simon, winding up a two-day visit to Israel Thursday, said he expected a new economic aid agreement with Israel to be signed in November. But he also warned of possible restrictions on U.S. aid because of America's own economic troubles.

Lukewarm performance for stocks

The stock market started out hot and ended lukewarm with only a small gain Thursday on the New York Stock Exchange. Trading was moderate and the average price of an NYSE common share gained six cents. Prices closed higher in moderate trading on the American Stock Exchange, and the average Amex common share gained 20 cents. The Dow Jones Industrial average closed at 789.19, a gain of 4.22 from Wednesday.

Cyprus crisis called 'very grave'; Greece to replace island officers

From United Press International
Greece put its military units near the Turkish border on full alert Thursday and was reported moving up soldiers and armor. Turkey said the confrontation between the two countries in the wake of the military coup on Cyprus was "very grave."

Bowing to pressure from its NATO partners, Greece did agree to replace the 650 Greek army officers on Cyprus who led the military coup Monday. The decision was announced in Brussels at the end of a meeting of the council of the 15 NATO ambassadors — the second meeting in two days called to discuss the Cyprus crisis. The effect of the action — described as a good faith gesture — wasn't immediately clear.

Ousted Cypriot President Archbishop Makarios, in a dramatic mission halfway across the world, arrived in the United States to make a personal appeal to the United Nations Security Council Friday. He told newsmen at Kennedy Airport in New York he does not favor U.N. military intervention, however.

U. S. Undersecretary of State Joseph Sisco, dispatched by President Nixon to try to defuse the crisis, prepared to fly to Athens after meetings with British diplomats and Turkish Premier Bulent Ecevit in London. He later will fly to Ankara.

"The situation is very grave," the Turkish premier told a news conference after the three-hour meeting. He said Turkey was "prepared for every eventualities."

In northern Greece, witnesses reported movements of troops and armor toward the Turkish border. Diplomatic sources in Athens said military units in northern Greece had gone from partial to full alert.

In Mersin, Turkey, UPI correspondent John Lawton reported thousands of troops, tanks and camouflaged artillery guns along a 310-mile stretch of the southern coast. He said warships and amphibious landing craft stood at anchor.

But with 50,000 Turkish troops massed off the southern coast — 50 miles from Cyprus — the threat of an invasion appeared to be eased when the Turkish parliament, considering legislation to give Ecevit a free hand to order an attack, recessed in Ankara until Saturday.

Makarios stopped at London en route to the United States, where Great Britain, whose military forces had rescued him after the coup and flew him to safety, announced its support of his government and condemned the rebels.

But the United States has not done the same, and diplomatic sources in Washington reported the U.S. has not ruled out the possibility of recognizing the rebel regime.

In San Clemente, Calif., White House Press Secretary Ronald A. Zeigler said that the American line is to reach a peaceful solution.

In Nicosia, victorious rebel leader Nicos Sampson made his first public appearance since the coup and said he was "in full control of the situation." He said the 120,000-member Turkish minority, which makes up about 20 per cent of the population, was "in no danger at all."

The rebel government partially lifted curfew restrictions Thursday as green bereted soldiers armed with Russian-made rifles manned roadblocks and guarded strategic buildings.

A REBEL ARMY land-rover patrols the streets of Nicosia, capital of Cyprus, Thursday after a partial lifting of the curfew. Unofficial reports of casualties in the Cypriot military ranged as high as 2,000.

Ehrlichman quote says Nixon OK'd Ellsberg burglary after the fact

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A sworn statement by John D. Ehrlichman that President Nixon approved of the burglary of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist when informed of it after it had occurred was published Thursday by the House Judiciary Committee.

The statement was part of the evidence the committee published on political spying, which included a suggestion for lie detector tests of 400,000 employees and the fear expressed by one high FBI official that J. Edgar Hoover might try to blackmail the President.

Meanwhile, the House Rules Committee voted, 10 to 3, Thursday to permit live television coverage of Judiciary Committee debate next week on whether to recommend impeachment of the President. The Judiciary Committee is expected to allow broadcast coverage.

The rules group approved a resolution that will be taken to the House floor for a final vote Monday. The measure does not order the committee to permit television; it simply allows it if the committee has no objection.

The Judiciary Committee plans to open debate on the impeachment issue Monday, with a vote scheduled by July 29.

Ehrlichman's sworn statement, made last May 26 for possible use in Ehrlichman's trial on charges springing from the burglary, was the first testimony that Nixon had sanctioned the search of Dr. Lewis J. Fielding's office in 1971.

Ehrlichman never used the statement in the trial, because the judge had ruled out the use of national security as a defense. Ehrlichman was convicted last week of conspiracy to violate Fielding's civil rights and of two counts of perjury.

In the affidavit Ehrlichman paraphrased Nixon as saying "While I did not know of the break-in attempt in advance, I surely recognize the valid national security reasons why it was done."

The committee published five volumes of evidence on political spying as part of its release of the testimony it has taken in the presidential impeachment investigation.

Much of the committee's 139 paragraphs of particulars on "White House Surveillance Activities" dealt with events in mid-1971 following publication of the so-called Pentagon Papers.

Nixon told his top aides in 1971: "I don't give a damn how it is done, do whatever has to be done to stop these leaks," according to former Special Counsel Charles W. Colson.

Colson since has pleaded guilty and been sentenced for having attempted to defame Ellsberg, who leaked the papers to the New York Times and other publications.

The evidence also indicated that Nixon was so angered by leaks of "classified" documents that he considered ordering 400,000 persons with top secret clearance to take polygraph tests. He was dissuaded when reminded that polygraph evidence could not be used in court.

But the big surprise in the 2,314 pages of evidence came in a sworn statement given FBI agents on May 10, 1973, by Robert Mardian, former assistant attorney general who has been indicted in the Watergate cover-up conspiracy.

He told the agents that William Sullivan, Hoover's deputy at the FBI, came to him in July 1971 and said he feared he was going to be fired because of policy differences with Hoover. Sullivan said he wanted to give Mardian wiretaps ordered by Henry Kissinger. Mardian said Sullivan felt "Hoover could not be entrusted with this information . . . because Mr. Hoover had used wiretap information to blackmail other presidents of the United States and was afraid he could blackmail Mr. Nixon with this information."

St. Clair ends defense

WASHINGTON (UPI) — White House attorney James D. St. Clair ended many House Judiciary Committee members Thursday when he concluded President Nixon's impeachment defense by releasing a long-sought transcript which he said disproves that Nixon authorized Watergate hush money.

"I couldn't believe it, I couldn't believe it," said Rep. Barbara Jordan, D-Tex., expressing the outrage of many Democrats and some Republicans that the transcript had been withheld until the end of the 10-week impeachment inquiry.

"It focuses on the utter contempt the President holds for the House of Representatives," she said.

St. Clair's 90-minute summation of Nixon's defense opened the way for the committee to debate articles of impeachment next week — probably opening its sessions to live TV cameras.

St. Clair said the 2½ page transcript he provided of a March 22, 1973, conversation between Nixon and his former chief of staff, H. R. Haldeman, proved Nixon had no part in the "blackmail" payments to Watergate conspirator E. Howard Hunt. The conversation "took place the day after Hunt received a final $75,000."

The White House previously refused to surrender a tape of that conversation under subpoena from the committee, claiming it was not relevant. But St. Clair said it suddenly became relevant when former White House counsel John W. Dean III "changed his testimony" before the committee about a meeting held on the previous day.

St. Clair said Dean once testified that "nothing was resolved" after a March 21 meeting in which he informed Nixon of Hunt's demands for money. But St. Clair said, Dean told the Judiciary Committee last week that "something was decided."

Economy in another dive; show signs of recession

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. economy slumped for the second straight quarter between April and June, the Commerce Department reported Thursday, frustrating administration predictions of a healthy comeback from effects of the energy crisis.

The 1.2 per cent drop in economic growth in the past three months followed a 7 per cent decline in the January-March quarter. The figures were at seasonally adjusted annual rates.

It was the first time since the 1969-70 recession that the economy, taking into account the effects of inflation, had failed to grow for six consecutive months.

A six-month decline in the Gross National Product is a popular definition of recession and the latest government figures were bound to raise suggestions that President Nixon had failed to live up to his State of the Union promise last January that "there will be no recession in the United States of America."

Contract expires for 550,000 phone workers; talks on

About 9,400 telephone workers in Illinois and 550,000 nationwide are working without a contract today as negotiations continue between the Communications Workers of America and American Telephone and Telegraph.

Bargaining efforts during the past two months on two levels — national and local — failed to produce a new contract, which expired Wednesday night.

The union Wednesday rejected management's latest three-year contract offer and immediately made plans to seek membership approval for a strike. But indications are that the procedure will be used more as a ploy to force a better settlement rather than a firm commitment to walk out because members are being polled by mail, which may take two weeks.

(Another 200,000 telephone workers, represented by the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers and several other independent unions, also are without a contract. This includes about 20,000 employees of Western Electric Co. operations.)

DESPITE THE SOMEWHAT muted strike threat, contract talks still are going on. Union leaders in Illinois are scheduled to meet this weekend to discuss the situation.

While union and management are struggling with money items — wage and major benefits proposals — in meetings in Washington, D.C., local officials throughout the nation are discussing issues common to them to be fitted into a separate agreement.

"Some of the problems peculiar to Illinois don't apply elsewhere," said a spokesman for Illinois Bell Telephone Co. "We have to work out an agreement on a national level first, then wrap up the local, critical items," said a union spokesman.

Though the contract has expired, both sides have agreed to a limited extension of the pact with either side able to abolish this agreement upon 48-hour notice. The Illinois Bell official sounded an optimistic note in describing negotiations.

"Things are proceeding on a rational, normal basis," he said. "There are good intentions on both sides."

GLEN E. WATTS, president of CWA, said Wednesday that even if a strike is called, "we will not be counting on closing the business down." He said the public would see a general decay in service after a few weeks, but that the company "could keep going for a while."

Until now, there has been a blackout of information coming out of the contract talks, which began with a May 15 agreement that there would be no public disclosure of details.

Watts told a press conference in Washington there was little chance of a settlement within the next two weeks.

County OKs buying voting machines

by AL MESSERSCHMIDT

A news analysis
George Dunne began the county board meeting with his usual nonchalance. He ignored the unusual crowd. And, without changing tone from his monotone "come to order" call, the county board president said that voting machines were the topic of Thursday's board meeting.

County Clerk Stanley Kuser stepped to the front microphone and within 45 minutes loyal board Democrats, joined by two Republicans, had squelched recent critics and had approved purchase of 400 new county voting machines.

The cost was $880,000. The promise was elimination of paper judicial ballots in the Nov. 5 election. The decision was preordained.

Kuser was magnificent Thursday. He cooed quietly when saying that Republican criticism of the vote machine purchase contained "political overtones." He smiled politely when addressing Comr. Carl Hansen, the TOP candidate for board president and the only "no" vote against the machine purchase. Kuser carefully avoided any reference to his GOP opponent, Lola Flamm, who charged Wednesday that he rigged bidding on the voting machines to favor International Election Systems Corp. of New Jersey.

IES was awarded the contract Thursday.

"I am not afraid of having this matter investigated by everybody," Kuser told the board. "I'd like it if someone walked into court and got a declaratory judgment on this bid."

KUSER OFFERED the big promises and few alternatives during his argument for machine purchase. "Procrastination can do nothing but destroy the election system. We have a horrible time problem" — adding that the machines must be built, received, tested, and ballots must be printed before the Nov. 5 election.

"I will hold the bag for it," Kuser said. If paper ballots are used in November.

Kuser's promises of good things included a "savings of hundreds of thousands of dollars," a prediction that election judges will finish at "9, 10, 11 o'clock and we'll be able to attract more judges," and another prediction that "results from judges of election — signed and sealed — certainly will come to us more rapidly."

ONLY HANSEN fired critical questions at Kuser as Mrs. Flamm sat silently in the audience. Were an estimated $100,000 in parts to increase current vote machine ballot space purchased without bidding? Hansen asked. "I am not aware that they were let for bid," Kuser replied.

Because the purchase was more than $1,000, county board procedures require bidding, Hansen said. "You'd have to take that up with the purchasing agent," Kuser said.

"Are any persons other than the county clerk to speak?" Hansen asked.

George W. Dunne

Ransom F. Shoup II

"You know gentlemen (from an IES competitor) is here and you know that he requested..." Dunne said.

"I don't know that," Hansen said and quicker than a machine vote, Comr. Charles Chaplin, a Republican, moved that the county transfer $880,000 from a revenue sharing to a voting machine account. Even Hansen voted "aye."

WAS THE contract for purchase of the machines sent to the state's attorney for approval? Hansen asked. "That isn't normal procedure," Comr. Jerome Huppert answered.

"Can I be heard before..." Ransom F. Shoup, head of R. F. Shoup Corp., an IES competitor, said.

"No, you cannot," Huppert said and the board quickly voted to defeat a Hansen motion to defer purchase of the machines.

Mr. chairman, before this roll call is taken..." Shoup began from the audience. "You're out of order," Huppert said. "I'm not recognizing you" and the board passed through two, quick parliamentary votes approving purchase of the machines.

SHOUP repeated his contention that "you have awarded the contract and haven't heard all the facts. This proceeding is very irregular. I'm still confused."

Monday, Shoup said after the regular board meeting that he could produce the machines for $1,800 each. Thursday, he said that estimates for converting the current 3,000 county machines may be low by as much as $340 per machine.

"We're delighted to have heard you this morning," Dunne interjected as Shoup continued to argue before the board. "This meeting now stands adjourned."

County to check on faulty furnace repairs in area

by DOROTHY OLIVER

The Cook County Department of Building and Zoning is investigating whether defective furnaces and faulty heating system installations exist in unincorporated Cook County.

Deputy Comm. Raymond J. Welsh of the department of building and zoning has contacted a local heating contractor for information on furnace repairs which may have been made in unincorporated areas.

Welsh is conducting the investigation at the request of County Comm. Carl Hansen. Hansen was alerted to the furnace problem, which exists in Elk Grove Village and possibly other suburbs, by stories in the Herald.

"Originally, it was my impression that the furnace problems were limited to Elk Grove Village. After reading an article July 9, I realized that it was not isolated to Elk Grove Village and that this problem could exist elsewhere," Hansen said.

Hansen asked the department to investigate if the furnace models that have been turning up with defects have been certified for installation in unincorporated Cook County.

"If it exists in the unincorporated areas, I think we (the Cook County Board) should know about it," he said.

Hansen added he does not know what the board will do with their information at this point. "We have to wait until we see what the problem is. The county does have home rule power and we have jurisdiction over areas which don't have a health department. We can take action on any faulty installation but we don't yet know the dimensions of the problem."

WELSH HAS contacted Robert Wing of Wing Heating and Air Conditioning, Elk Grove Village, who was one of two local heating contractors who brought the furnace problems to the attention of Elk Grove Village officials. Wing is working with Thomas Rettenbacher, Elk Grove Village building director, in gathering information from the county.

Welsh said that the county has not received any complaints from citizens who have experienced furnace problems "but I would be hopeful that anybody with any information would contact us."

He added his agency would be willing to work with local officials when the cause of the failing furnaces has been determined.

RETENBACHER said Thursday that the village has completed 248 inspections of furnaces in the village. Only 16.5 per cent, or 41 furnaces have been found to be completely problem-free.

Thirty furnaces, or 12 per cent, were found to be positively defective; another 177 furnaces, or 71.4 per cent, were listed as doubtful.

"WE TERM a furnace doubtful when we aren't positive that it is OK," Rettenbacher said. Inspectors suggest people call a private heating contractor for a more thorough inspection if they are not sure whether a problem exists.

Rettenbacher added that officials from both Arlington Heights and Palatine have sent people to Elk Grove Village to go out with inspectors and familiarize themselves with how the inspection is made.

THE HERALD disclosed June 18 that furnaces that may be leaking deadly carbon monoxide fumes are installed in as many as 1,700 Elk Grove Village homes. The furnaces, manufactured by the Johnson Corp. of Bellevue, Ohio, have heat exchangers that crack or corrode, allowing the fumes to escape into the home rather than through the chimney.

The Herald also learned that many of the furnaces were installed in violation of the Elk Grove Village building code. Installations were made by Servaire-Metropolitan Co. of Berwyn.

A number of heating contractors in the area have stated that the problem is not isolated to the village or to Johnson furnaces but can be found in other project-type housing developments where a lesser quality, "flimsily constructed" furnace is used. Contractors have pinpointed Arlington Heights, Buffalo Grove, Hoffman Estates and Schaumburg as suburbs with furnace problems.

Officials are waiting for a technical report from a Chicago consulting engineer that may explain the cause of the furnace breakdowns.

'The Daughters' Ex-suburbanite-turned-writer wanted to be a teacher until...

by BETTY LEE

Peggy Anderson never thought she could make a living writing books. In fact, she never thought much about writing until a dynamic college professor convinced her to give it a try.

Those college days were years ago and since then Miss Anderson, now 36, a former Arlington Heights resident, has authored "The Daughters," which examines one of the most venerable groups in the country — The Daughters of the American Revolution.

She takes an in-depth look at the Daughters of the American Revolution (DAR), the largest hereditary patriotic organization in the country, and touches on everything from racism to socializing.

"It never occurred to me to be a writer," Miss Anderson said, when contacted in Philadelphia by The Herald. "I was bent on teaching emotionally handicapped children until I got in a crackling good comp (composition) course."

MISS ANDERSON now is promoting the book, which came out earlier this month. Her first attempt will be on NBC's "Today Show," where she will be interviewed at 7 a.m. Monday.

"I hope to talk about a few things that the book doesn't say," Miss Anderson said. The DAR, she added, has been the target for unfair criticism for many years because of the ultra-conservative stands it takes. The book does not glorify the DAR, but provides a more objective view, she says.

She graduated from Arlington High School with no definite career plans except to enroll in Augustana College in Rock Island. Her mother, Mrs. Kay McMillan, still lives at 334 S. Belmont in Arlington Heights.

With an English degree in hand, Miss Anderson made rounds with a publishing company and then decided to join the Peace Corps.

She taught English in Togo, West Africa. "It was much harder teaching English than writing a book," she said.

IT WASN'T UNTIL she began evaluating overseas Peace Corps programs when she discovered she wanted to write. Her job in New York was to write lengthy governmental reports, which wasn't as dry as it sounds, she said. "It was more like magazine writing."

The job took Miss Anderson to several parts of the world, including India and Thailand. "I felt very lucky then," she said. "I really had a good time in 1968."

After her work at the Peace Corps, Miss Anderson joined her boss, who departed the Peace Corps to start the Washington Monthly Magazine.

She was a feature writer for the Philadelphia Inquirer when she was assigned to interview the president general of the DAR. "Six months later I got a letter from St. Martin's press," Miss Anderson said. "They said they were looking for someone to do a book on the DAR and asked if I was interested."

WITH A LITTLE advance money from the publishing company and "lots of money from home," Miss Anderson spent a year researching the DAR and interviewing some of its members.

How does the public feel about her book? The author thinks it's too early to tell, but she did hear from the new DAR president. "She said I had done a fair job," she said.

"It did raise DAR eyebrows," she added. "One DAR member said she was disappointed, and another said it was candid."

Miss Anderson is planning another book after promoting "The Daughters." In the meantime she is living in a century-old house where she likes to entertain guests with gourmet dinners and folk songs.

Committee to decide how to fund city budget hike

regular meeting Aug. 5.

THE LAST TIME the council discussed financing the increased costs, it was thought a combination of several tax and fee hikes might be instituted to spread the additional financial burden more evenly between residents and businesses in the city.

A 50-cent boost in the city garbage collection fee was formally proposed last March but the city council deferred action on the measure until a fuller picture of over-all financial need could be determined.

It is possible the city might be able to get by without any tax increase this year if the quadrennial reassessment of Maine and Elk Grove townships boosts the assessed valuation high enough to produce enough revenue to fund city programs.

It is expected this matter will be high on the finance committee's considerations at the meetings next week.

Both of the committee's meetings on the 1974 tax levy are open to the public.

Oakton College plans U.S. lecture program

Oakton Community College will present an American studies lecture program Monday at the college's temporary campus in Morton Grove.

Poet Rus Gregory of Ann Arbor, Mich., will lead morning, afternoon and evening discussions on American heritage, American literature, history and geography. The writings of Henry David Thoreau will be discussed and Gregory will read from his own book, "Sassafras."

The sessions will be held from 9:45 to 11:30 a.m., 1:30 to 3:30 p.m. and 7:45 to 9:45 p.m. in rooms 603-605 at 7900 N. Nagle Ave., Morton Grove. The sessions are open to the public and there is no admission charge.

Bicycle thefts soaring on because the stolen bikes are sold so fast.

He pointed out that in most cases, owners who fall victims to thieves never see their bikes again.

Few are recovered, and unless they are registered with city, police are unable to locate the owners, said Neil. "Every one we have picked up though with city registration has gotten back to its owner."

MOST OF THE TIME, however, recovered bicycles are held by police until sold at periodic auctions. About 40 such bikes will be auctioned off by police tomorrow at 10 a.m. at the department's garage, 1412 Miner St.

Bike owners can do a few things, Neil said to aid chances of finding a stolen bike and deter bike thieves:

- Sometimes stolen bicycles turn up in other towns and residents should check with neighboring police departments to see if their bike has been recovered there.
- Des Plaines residents should register their bikes with the city. Neil said owners may also borrow police engraving tools and should record their own or parents' driver's license number on the bike. When police find a bike, the driver's license number can be checked and the owner can be located more quickly.
- Locks do not stop bike thieves but "a hard steel chain and a good heavy lock," will make stealing a bike that much harder, Neil said.

Drama workshop presents 3 shows

The Maine East High School summer drama workshop will present three productions this weekend — including a Broadway comedy, a musical spoof and a children's play.

The workshop kicked off its weekend performance today with "The Giving Tree," a student-directed production featuring mime and sign language. The story of a tree that gives love is directed by Janice Rettenbacher, a June graduate of Maine East. The play will be presented in conjunction with "Snow White."

Performances of the children's plays will be at 3 p.m. today and at 1 and 3 p.m. Saturday at the high school.

"Little Mary Sunshine," the musical spoof of the good old days of goodness and virtue will be presented at 6 and 8:30 p.m. today in the Maine East theatre.

The Broadway comedy "Howevarant and Golden-Jean Are Dead" will be presented at 8:30 p.m. today and 6 p.m. Saturday at the high school. Mickey Connor and Larry Kleinstein will play the title roles.

Tickets for all performances are available at the door.

Patrolman gets honor for saving baby from fire

Patrolman Thomas Richard, 25, of the Des Plaines Police Department has been given departmental commendation by Police Chief Arthur Hiltz for rescuing a 14-month-old infant from a burning porch last April.

Richard was cited for taking "immediate and positive action" in the April 19 incident when he broke through a window of the enclosed porch at 1369 Brown St., and pulled the child, Tyson Mundi, to safety.

The fire, which was quickly extinguished by Des Plaines firemen, started when the boy's mother, Mrs. Michael Mundi, accidentally threw a flaming can of charcoal lighter fluid on the porch.

The woman was trying to light an outdoor fire for a cookout when the can caught fire.

Richard, patrolling the neighborhood, saw the burning can on the porch, broke the window and pulled the child out.

Attends forestry camp

Wayne H. Fuhlbrugge, of 433 Vassar Ln., Des Plaines was one of 40 Southern Illinois University at Carbondale students enrolled in the forestry camp program.

The program is a two-week out-of-doors field and forest experience in which students put into practice what they have learned in the classroom.

Blood donors are needed this Saturday

In an effort to boost blood supplies during the usually slow summer months, city officials have scheduled a blood driving session Saturday.

Officials have noted there is a need for fresh blood throughout the area, primarily due to the summer vacation period. The Bloodmobile will be at Trinity Lutheran Church, 675 Algonquin Rd., Des Plaines, from 9 a.m. until 2 p.m.

Besides looking for donors with all blood types, city officials also noted that a Des Plaines family is hoping to obtain donors with type B-positive blood to aid with the replacement of blood needed for an open heart surgery operation on their 7-year-old son next week.

Officials at Children's Memorial Hospital said sufficient blood supplies are available to perform the operation, but replacement blood which would help reduce the cost of the procedure, is needed.

Qualified donors must be free of colds or fevers, sore throats and hay fever for at least a week. Donors are also advised to avoid eating for four hours prior to giving blood.

Additional information about the blood donation program can be obtained by calling Kay Wall at the Des Plaines Health Dept. at 824-3136.

Strike aftermath

One year after 28 Hoffman Estates public works employees were fired, some remain out of work

by NANCY COWGER

One year ago today, 28 men who worked in the Hoffman Estates Public Works Dept. made one of the most crucial decisions of their lives.

They struck their jobs for one day after village officials allegedly made last minute language changes in a contract ready for ratification, resulting in what the men felt was withdrawal of union recognition.

The entire department was fired as a result of the strike.

A year later, some men still are not working. The tragedy of their lives is measured in unpaid bills and young families living with their parents and abandoned pride.

THE FIRINGS WERE a boon to others of the men — like Bob Ackerman, who now earns more money in the Rolling Meadows Streets Dept. than he would if he still worked in Hoffman Estates. And Norman Simons, a Teamster hauling steel cross country in a semi-tractor trailer.

The men have changed in the last 12 months. Young, hurt and confident, they screamed obscenities at Hoffman Estates Village Pres. Virginia Hayter a year ago, comparing her to Hitler. While they still maintain they were wronged, few have nursed their hatred of the village officials who tossed them out onto the streets.

If their acrimony has dulled, their desire to return to old jobs has not. In all but a few cases, their certainty that they will return has ripened to an assurance that justice will be on their side, if only they are patient.

The former village employees, members of Local 2041, American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, AFL-CIO (AFSME), filed suit against the village last fall. They demanded their immediate reinstatement and back pay. Nothing happened in the suit until last month, when it was assigned for trial to Circuit Court Judge Daniel Covelli, and lawyers paid by the union national requested reassignment to a new judge. The request was approved, but the new judge has not been chosen. Attorneys predict the case could go to trial by fall.

EVEN IF THE JUDGE orders the men rehired, they are not likely to regain their jobs in the near future. Both the village and the union have pledged to appeal if the court decides against them. Appeals take time.

The wait has tried the patience of many of the men. Simons, at 37 the oldest and most mature of the strikers, said his initial estimate was it would be three months before he was back on the job.

Before the three months had expired, Simons changed his forecast. Once the matter went to court, "I knew almost from the outset it would be one to 1½ years before it was settled," said Simons.

Simons said his income is "much higher" than it was with the village, higher even than current salaries for his old job, which have been increased twice in the year. With three children at home, he immediately looked for a new job, and found his first position driving a bus for Cook County School Bus Co., Elk Grove Village. He had worked for them before.

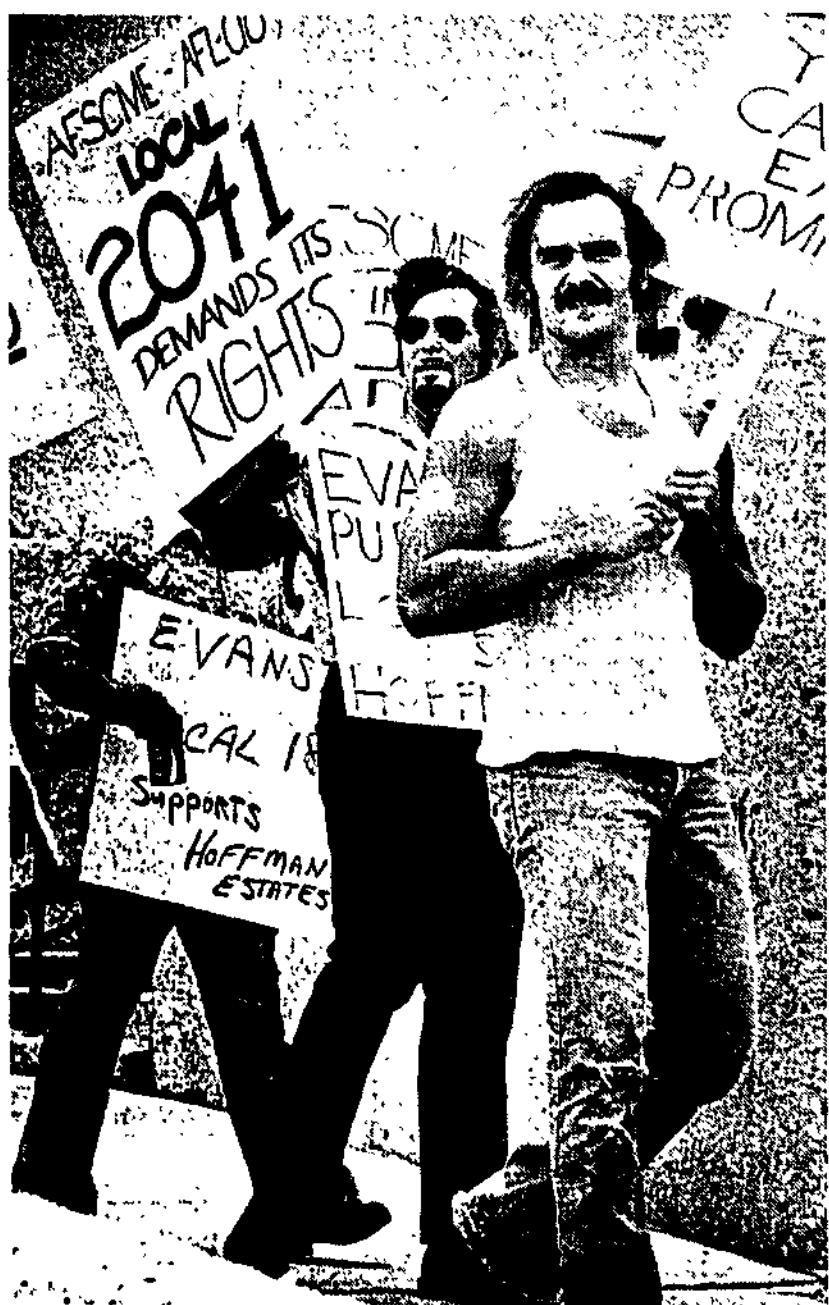

ALTHOUGH HE HAD a job almost at once, Simons still came close to losing his home. He was paid $3 per hour but was guaranteed only four hours work per day. He scraped through by taking charter calls and odd jobs for extra money, until a few months later he landed the Teamsters position.

"I'm getting there," said Simons. "It has taken me this long, and I'm still not completely straightened out financially," he said. He's not so sure he would take his job back now, even if it were offered.

Of the events last year, Simons said, "I don't feel our demands were so terrible, and apparently the village board didn't either." The salaries the men asked for, the training programs they sought, the safety equipment and tools they bargained for before the strike, all have been given to replacement employees.

What happened, said Simons, happened because people over reacted — the men were "hasty" in calling in sick, a drastic action. The village responded with too much, too fast when it fired an entire department.

BARRY T. SHEALY, one of those most vocally bitter about the firings, said he does "not have any animosity" toward one year ago today. Their lawsuit still is pending, and most still nurse hopes of returning to village work someday.

Mrs. Hayter now. Although he does not believe she was open-minded with the men, if she "did what she felt was right" he is no longer angry. But Shealy maintains the village was wrong, no matter what its officials felt, and will be proven so in court.

"It's the time" that's been hard, said Shealy, the courts "are slow." But he adds, "the longer it's been, the more I believe we were right in concept."

Shealy's financial situation has deteriorated over the year. "My output is more than my input, money wise," he said. He too is on his second job since leaving the village. He still does "not come near making what I did with the village."

Facing even worse problems is Daniel Hedlund, who now lives in Elgin and says he's "doing a slow backfloat — going downhill." He drives a truck for a landscaper. Hedlund said Pres. Hayter was dead wrong, "but she did what she thought was right and necessary," and he feels no bitterness.

Both men want to return to village work.

SO DOES DAVE Eversole, who is earning much more now than he did with the village but doesn't like truck driving for a construction company, and fears the layoffs of seasonal work. But Eversole would return only if Mrs. Hayter quits, he said. Village officials "should be able to stay cool and judge things," he said.

Mrs. Hayter was in "a controlling position with a lot of responsibility," and she over reacted, he feels. Eversole agrees the men made mistakes in their dealings with the village, but "the village got terrified," he said. "I don't think any one party is completely at fault," he said.

Bob Mundo has held several jobs since the village fired him, and started a new one Thursday. He worked at gas stations, and was laid off during the fuel shortages. He worked in construction, and was laid off during the cement strike. Still single and living at home, Mundo was hurt less by loss of income than were some of the men.

JOHN DeSHON and Steven Gorlinski are in much the same position as Mundo. Young, single and able to live with their parents, they have not been financially crippled by being out of work, and Gorlinski has not even sought a permanent job. When he needs money, he does odd jobs. Otherwise, he plays hockey for the Woodfield Wildcats and is waiting for the village to hire him back. He will try again this fall, as he did last year, for a position on the Chicago Cougars.

DeShon feels the union and the village should have "worked something out for both sides," he said, and the crisis was "more or less the fault of everybody's bullheadedness."

Mike Ludwick, who had been injured on the village job and underwent knee surgery after the firings, collected workmen's compensation until February. He now works in a warehouse, sales and display office in Elk Grove Village, and has been able to buy a new home in the past year. He wants to go back to village work because he would be serving people he knows, "friends and neighbors."

PERHAPS THE true success story of the Hoffman Estates employee dispute is Ackerman, totally deaf but holding a higher paying and more satisfying job in the Rolling Meadows Public Works Dept. than he did in Hoffman Estates. Ackerman and his wife, who also is deaf, are about to move into their own apartment for the first time since their marriage and treasure their coming to independence. Ackerman has just received a raise, and considers himself "better off" now than he would be had the strike never occurred. What happened was "a very big misunderstanding all the way around that was carried too far."

Though most of the men are determined not to cry "uncle" in their lawsuit against the village, they also are more prone now to say they contributed toward their own downfall.

Hedlund's statement that he's "learned to think before I act, to take more time in contemplating the situation," was expressed this week by nearly all of them.

Law won't settle special ed question

State laws governing learning-disabilities programs set no teacher-student ratios for the type of program run in Elk Grove Township Dist. 50, a state school official said this week.

Margaret Phee, an education coordinator of the Office of the Superintendent of Public Instruction, said there is no law limiting class size in learning disabilities programs that "work on a resource basis."

Dist. 50 currently has 17 full-time teachers who work with students with learning problems on a supplemental basis. The youngsters are assigned to regular classrooms but meet with the LD resource teachers several times a week to work on individual problems.

The question of the district's legal responsibility to youngsters with learning disabilities arose at Monday night's school board meeting when the board declined to provide money for four additional learning disabilities teachers in the 1974-75 budget.

BOARD MEMBER Emil Bahnmaier said the board has not "completely canceled out" the hiring of the additional staff but wants a "legal definition" of what special education services it must provide.

Phee said self-contained classrooms for learning disabilities students are limited to 10 students but there "basically isn't a limit" for resource type programs.

"There is no percentage — nothing says there has to be so and so many teachers," she said. "In terms of the district, if they can provide service with 17 teachers, then it's OK."

Supt. James Ervitt requested the additional LD teachers — who would work with students at Dan Cook and Grant Wood schools and Lively and Friendship junior high schools — because more youngsters with learning problems were identified in a screening program last spring.

The Accepted Influence in the Northwest Suburbs

Northwest Suburban Health Services • Northwest Suburban Health Services • Northwest Suburban Health Services

Students become 'aware' of life

One of the students had never eaten artichoke hearts before so he looked a little skeptically at his salad.

A girl from Elk Grove High School meanwhile was busy telling everyone the virtues of shrimp cocktail. "I just tried it for the very first time about two weeks ago," she said.

A boy from Arlington High School brandished a professional milkshake maker like a club and told the group that when they were finished eating he'd make milkshakes for them. "I'm going to make milkshakes because my Mom's not home and I can't cook," he said.

The scene might have been from a class in advanced eating, as students shared pizzas and spaghetti in addition to the shrimp and milkshakes.

IT WAS, HOWEVER, one episode from a class in "Awareness: Exploring, Experimenting and Experiencing," a social science seminar taught by Paul Fornell for summer school students in High School Dist. 214.

Students in the class, in addition to sharing ideas about food, have discussed philosophy, religion and the search for meaning in the world. About 17 students from throughout Dist. 214 signed up for the class, which met three times a week at Arlington High School and the Arlington Heights Memorial Library for six weeks.

The students' reasons for taking the class varied. "I needed one more class to graduate," a boy from Wheeling High School explained. "I'm really glad I took this class."

A shy blonde girl said she will be a freshman at Arlington High School this fall. The class attracted her, she said, "because it was a way to get started."

FORNELL, WHO during the regular school year teaches in the Wheeling High School-Young Adult Program, a night-school program for students who are no longer in the regular school, said he decided to teach the class this summer because "high school age kids do a lot of self examination, but they don't get very much support. Since they are already doing it, they may want somebody to listen or help them with questions and answers."

In addition, Fornell hoped that offering a class which brings students from several schools together would be beneficial. But shortly after the class started, he said they had surprised him. "I expected the kids to talk about their differences," he said, "but the kind of kid I've got here is so unbiased that they don't want to talk about that."

For the class, students keep a journal of their thoughts and questions, can do individual research into various philosophies and participate in group discussions and some exercises borrowed from courses in human relations.

FOR ONE CLASS, for example, Fornell assigned reading from an Indian philosopher and recommended the students watch a film by Ingmar Bergman shown on Channel 11. The idea of bringing food in and sharing with another class was brought up by the students and endorsed by Fornell.

The dishes the students shared varied, and each student had an explanation of why he had chosen to bring that particular thing, ranging from the girl who had just discovered shrimp to a fuzzy haired boy who made a green bean casserole because "I'm really into vegetables."

For the class, each student will get one-half credit and they will be graded, Fornell said, based on his evaluation, their own evaluation and the group's evaluation of them.

Bi-state unit bill signed, region plan uproar ends

A long-term controversy over regional planning for the Chicago area ended Thursday when Gov. Daniel Walker signed a bill establishing the Illinois-Indiana Bi-State Commission.

The bill confirms an executive order issued April 4 by Walker with only minor changes, and virtually guarantees certification of northeastern Illinois and northwestern Indiana for federal grants.

Federal officials had made grants conditional on a bi-state agency being formed separate from the existing regional planning agencies. However, all six Illinois members of the new commission will be chosen from the Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission. Two will be chosen by Walker, two will be named by Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley, and NIPC will select two of its own. James McClure, president of Oak Park, and Cyril Wagner, president of Tower Lakes, were selected Thursday as the NIPC-chosen representatives.

The commission also dissolved its interstate planning committee, which will be replaced by the bi-state commission. Indiana already has prepared its half of the organization.

STATE SEN. Howard W. Carroll,

D-Chicago, who is legislative liaison for NIPC, also promised Thursday that further legislation regarding NIPC will be introduced this week.

The new bill will clarify Walker's power to appoint members to NIPC, which has been disputed this year. The governor was originally allowed to appoint eight members, but a new state law reduced that to five. Walker interpreted the law as adding members. With two expired terms to remain unfilled, Walker appointed a total of 11 members, and NIPC commissioners challenged the new positions.

Carroll said the intent was clearly to reduce the governor's total to five. His bill will give the governor six appointees until 1975, when one term will expire and only five positions will continue.

County Heart Assn. bike-a-thon winners

Winners of medals and trophies in the June 2 bike-a-thon sponsored by the North Cook County Heart Assn. in conjunction with the Wheeling Wheelman Bike Club were announced Wednesday at Heritage Park in Wheeling.

Tandem bikers Alex MacDonald and Dean Mac of Libertyville accumulated the bike-a-thon's top mileage — 269 miles in 12 hours.

Bill Meyer, 51, of Forest Park, had the top individual mileage of 190 miles. Vince Shanahan, 16, of Mount Prospect, was second with 173 total miles.

Eugene Schmitt, 26, of Chicago, was the top money earner in the bike-a-thon. He earned $1,020 with 207 sponsors and 142 miles. Schmitt was a special rider in the bike-a-thon because he had major heart surgery.

Our sports staff: A league-leading line up

It takes team effort and an all-star line-up to rank number one five years in a row, and the Herald sports staff has what it takes. Complete local coverage, excitement and variety of sports make the Herald's coverage unbeatable. Herald Sports have been named first among northern Illinois dailies by the Northern Illinois Editorial Association, Northern Illinois University Journalism Department, in 1969, 1971, 1972 and 1973. Named first in state, too, by the Illinois Press Association in 1970, 1971 and 1973. That's a won-lost record that keeps the Herald's sports staff at the top of the league.

THE ENERGY CRISIS is over, at least as far as the Illinois Capitol's dome is concerned. After more than eight months of darkness, the dome lights have been turned on to illuminate the skyline. State officials said the darkness had a negative impact on "the character of the capitol building."

Energy crisis over? State thinks so...

SPRINGFIELD (UPI) — the floodlights shone on the dome of the Illinois Capitol again Wednesday night after more than eight months of darkness.

Norb Johnson, head of the Capitol complex buildings and grounds division, said the lights were ordered back on because, as far as he's concerned, the energy shortage is over.

"It appears the shortage is over," he said. "In our opinion it is."

Johnson also said the state saved only a small amount of energy by shutting off the lights and that darkness interfered with "the character of the Capitol building."

Sec. of State Michael Howlett cut the power to the banks of lights Nov. 8 at the height of concern over the energy crisis.

Records tell of theft of Lincoln coffin

SPRINGFIELD, (UPI) — It shed no new light on the life and times of Abraham Lincoln, but archivists say it is history all the same.

Sangamon County Circuit Court clerk employees found the county law record 1876-77 while cleaning out old files for microfilming. They happened on to part of the official record of the two men who took the coffin containing Lincoln's body from the Oak Ridge Cemetery election night, 1876.

Authorities charged Terence Mulla, alias T. Durnan, and John Hughes, alias J. Smith, with "unlawfully, wickedly, knowingly and feloniously conspiring to steal the body of Abraham Lincoln and his casket, worth $75."

Judge Charles S. Zane sentenced the two to a year prison term, with one day in solitary confinement and the rest at hard labor, and assessed court costs. They were imprisoned at Joliet Penitentiary.

The present clerk of the court, Edward Ryan, offered the official record of the well-known incident to the Illinois state archives. A spokesman said that although it may not shed any light in terms of historical facts, any document bearing on Lincoln has tremendous historical value.

After the attempted removal of Lincoln's body, the present tomb was prepared and Lincoln's body was reinterred there.

Voter registration at Randhurst

Residents of Cook County will be able to register to vote next week at the Randhurst Shopping Center in Mount Prospect.

The Cook County clerk's office will provide a van for voter registration from noon to 8 p.m. Monday through Friday on the mall, Rand and Elmhurst roads.

Potential voters must be at least 18 years of age and residents of their voting district for at least 30 days. Naturalized citizens must provide citizenship papers.

Free Hearing Tests Set at New Location

Free electronic hearing tests will be given at Belstone Hearing Aid Service offices on Monday and Tuesday.

Factory-trained hearing aid specialists will be at all of the offices listed below to perform the tests.

Anyone who has trouble hearing or understanding is welcome to have a test using the latest electronic equipment to determine his or her particular loss. Diagrams showing how the ear works and some of the causes of hearing loss will be available.

Everyone should have a hearing test at least once a year if there is any trouble at all hearing clearly. Even people now wearing a hearing aid or those who have been told nothing could be done for them should have a hearing test and find out about the latest methods of hearing correction. The hearing test will be given Monday and Tuesday. If you can't get there on Monday or Tuesday, call one of the numbers below and arrange for an appointment at another time. Shut-in service is available in your home. Just phone the Belstone Hearing Aid Service listed below.

Herald opinion

One-member districts a good idea

A recommendation that county board commissioners face election from single-member districts has merit and deserves further study.

The Cook County Home Rule Study Commission has surprisingly recommended the reform — aimed at increasing responsiveness of board members to local voters — in a preliminary report. The final report may reach the county board in August or September.

We urge quick, decisive action on the proposal and support the concept if problems of redistricting can be overcome.

A simple board vote will end the current two district set-up where five, soon to be six, commissioners are elected from the suburbs and 10 commissioners are elected from the city. State law would not require a referendum.

Unfortunately, any decision will not influence the Nov. 5 board election and impact of a change to single-member districts will come in four years.

The proposal deserves approval for two reasons:

- Board members would be accountable to a smaller, easily defined constituency. Commissioners would be pressured to meet local needs and could become more familiar with the smaller district areas.

- District elections would encourage more candidates to seek county board office. The county board has become a retirement ground for faithful Democratic machine politicians, and has become a "safe" repository for loyal suburban, Republican committeemen. An independent in the suburbs has found little chance of challenging the state picked by the GOP committeemen and independent John Kneafsey discovered in the March primary that campaigning successfully countywide against an organized, party slate is nearly impossible.

Any hesitancy in supporting the concept comes from lack of specifics from the study commission.

Chicago Democrats have opposed in the past the idea of single-member districts. The commission was named by a Democrat, County Board President George Dunne. The author of the proposal was Circuit Court Judge Daniel Conan, another Democrat.

Any redistricting attempt should not become a plan to gerrymander Republicans from the board.

Hopefully, the proposal is a sign that Democrats and the county board have discovered a new awareness of their constituents and that mismanagement, waste and inefficiency in county government is coming to an end.

Impeachment alternative?

Nixon censure possible

by GEORGE J. MARDER

WASHINGTON (UPI) — There is now talk in the halls of Congress of censuring rather than impeaching President Nixon.

It could turn out to be nothing more than idle talk, indulged in mostly by reporters and some congressmen, but the possibility has surfaced, with a variety of arguments, pro and con, on censure as a substitute for impeachment.

Some say censure would be a cop-out. Almost everyone is aware of the difficulties of reaching a decision on impeachment. The reluctance of members of Congress to vote for impeachment is understandable. It's hardly like passing a rivers and harbors bill.

It also is understandable that censure is being suggested by some as a means of ending political bickering in the House Judiciary Committee, which is nearing completion of its impeachment investigation. It is an inviting thought to find some compromise which Republicans as well as Democrats might support — a compromise perhaps much of the nation could support.

But this would merely paper over problems, say those against censure. They say the President deserves a direct answer from Congress, yes or no, on impeachment; that the nation, too, deserves a clear verdict whether he is guilty of innocent of high crimes and misdemeanors.

Those favoring censure say this course could be the more appropriate punishment to fit the offenses charged to the President. Their argument goes like this:

Impeachment is an awesome power. It can lead to removal of a president lawfully chosen by the people. It should be used only when the crimes are of a magnitude so as to undermine the government, perhaps weaken it fatally, before the people had a chance to speak again. The crime should be gross and the evidence overwhelming before tampering with the people's choice.

This, of course, is for each member of Congress to judge based on the evidence before him. But if the decision is that the crime and the evidence are insufficient for impeachment, should Nixon get off scot free?

Would it mean that Congress was approving his conduct? Would it tempt future presidents who might be similarly inclined?

Those favoring censure say this would be an adequate deterrent. Censure has been used by Congress itself against its own members who strayed from the straight and narrow, but not sufficiently to be expelled. Thomas J. Dodd of Connecticut was censured by the Senate for an offense similar to one of the charges against Nixon — misuse of campaign funds.

Is censure a practical action?

There is nothing in the Constitution about censure of a president. But Congress can speak out on anything by resolutions. They have no force of law but reflect a state of mind.

Resolutions can be passed by either the House or Senate separately, or jointly by both. They do not require the signature of the president and are not subject to veto.

Scavenger lauds survey

We greatly appreciate The Herald initiating a recent customer "poll" on Arlington Heights garbage service, and we want to thank the 439 persons who responded, including those with complaints as well as those who voiced approval of our service.

Refuse disposal is known nationally as a complaint-prone business — particularly, with so-called "back-door" service, which involves the crew entering upon the customer's property, creating a situation where mistakes and misunderstandings easily occur.

With 5,000 homes to cover daily, six days a week, and an average of one minute and 10 seconds to serve each home, it would be a miracle if the service were 100 per cent perfect every day, and the only way we can maintain a satisfactory "balancing average" is by being informed of recurring problems so that we can correct them.

For example, as the result of your passing on to us these customer "ballots," we have been able to check on all situations where the customer is identified.

Fence post

letters to the editor

Frankly, considering the time needed to fill out one of these ballots and to deliver it or post it (at 10 cents postage) we would have anticipated that most people bothering to respond would be customers who had experienced difficulties.

To have, in contrast, 72 per cent of respondents term our service "excellent" or "good," plus another 18 per cent checking "fair," is indeed gratifying, and again reflects the unusual perception and understanding typical of community residents in general.

Educator 'shares honor'

I want to take this opportunity to express my heartfelt thanks to all the people who selected me as one of the ten outstanding educators. I realize that there are many teachers just as "sharp" as I am; therefore, I accept this highest of honors with a deep sense of humility and modesty knowing full well it could have gone to other outstanding pedagogues as well!

If the following sounds like an "oscar awards" acceptance speech, I cannot help it. I must share this great honor with the following people — My late parents, whose main aim in life was to have me educated. My conscientious sixth grade teacher, Miss Mary Stanton — who was a dedicated soul and a lover of children. The boy friends of my youth, who organized a basement science club and instilled in me a desire to experiment with a desire to "find out" about the world around us, and finally my wife, who has encouraged me all along the way.

A salesman that does an outstanding job for the company receives as a reward a trip to Hawaii. Some ball players receive an extra bonus. These are remunerative forms of recognition but I feel that your newspaper coverage of the teachers story is recognition that money cannot buy. May this idea become an annual searching for the 10 outstanding teachers of the northwest suburban areas.

Nixon 'insecurity'

Although I voted for Nixon twice I now feel that he is an insecure man motivated only by an egotistical thirst for power and petty greed. The bungling of our economy is a direct consequence of haphazard fluctuating decisions designed more to indicate that he is doing something than to solve long range problems. For this reason Congress should act swiftly to prevent his making deals with foreign nations lest we find in time that we were secretly sold out to bolster one man's popularity. Then it is time to forget our pride and admit that we made a mistake before this man's image rubs off on the office.

County's Kusper draws Flamm's fire

by AL MESSERSCHMIDT
Metropolitan Affairs Editor

Poor County Clerk Stanley Kusper. Hell flamed from all sides this week as the county plotted the purchase of 400 new voting machines, and the county clerk is in the middle of the fire.

Republicans are charging that Kusper rigged the bidding and that he secretly ordered modification costing between $100,000 and $200,000 on county-owned machines.

Lola Flamm, who is running hard for Kusper's job, needs issues to challenge the aloof Democratic machine. This week she blamed Kusper for:

- Secretly converting about 3,000 county-owned machines from six or seven columns to 10 columns. The project will cost between $100,000 and $200,000 and was not bid publicly.

- Rigging bid specifications for purchase of 400 county machines to eliminate all bidders but International Elections Systems Corp. IES offered to sell the 400 machines to the county in time for the Nov. 5 election for $880,000.

New political candidates often lack political perspective. In her effort to challenge Kusper, Mrs. Flamm has overlooked other flare-ups over voting that have resounded from the county board since 1972. Some of those problems were created by GOP board members.

The conversion of current county machines was mandated by demands of county board Republicans. When Kusper was appointed county clerk last year, he faced grumbling over the use of paper ballots, mainly for judicial elections, in the suburbs.

Lola Flamm

Comr. Floyd Fullie, county GOP chairman, repeated the argument at Monday's board meeting: "We always seem to have paper ballots, even with the machines. We have trouble getting judges because they have to count the paper ballots."

Kusper determined that conversion of the current machine, with six or seven columns, by adding more columns could reduce chances of paper ballots.

His plans were not secret. On May 21, Kusper told The Herald, "We're trying to find a way to adapt them (the machines). There's a possibility . . . but I'm not guaranteeing it."

He found that "possibility" and he set his voting machine mechanics, plus summer workers, to work on the conversion.

Mrs. Flamm criticized Kusper for using a "supervised crew of part-time workers — schoolboys — who were allowed to tinker with the delicate voting machinery."

However, the problem cited by Mrs. Flamm originated with the GOP. In 1972 a newspaper study found widespread waste. One finger of blame pointed to the election division for employing too many voting machine mechanics.

Fullie responded quickly, recommending reduction in the county budget of voting machine mechanics from 27 to four, saving $174,000. Fullie's budget amendment permitted then-clerk Barrett to hire 24 part-time workers for a total of one month a year.

Strangely, the board's city Democrats, who vote on Chicago's machines, and are immune to complaints of suburbanites, didn't block the Fullie amendment. Now, Kusper is using that part-time labor to prepare the machines for November.

The claim of rigged bidding is also two-sided. Only one firm manufactures

'White' House?

Many Americans just don't seem to have the heart to visit 'their' property; maybe the energy crisis is to blame—and maybe not...

by IRA BERKOW

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Tourism at the White House reportedly is down about 50 per cent.

"The line of visitors waiting for the doors to open used to wind from the east entrance on 18th Street near Pennsylvania Avenue all the way 'round the back to 17th and Pennsylvania," said J. W. Lee, a White House guard. "Now it's usually only half that long. Maybe it's the energy crisis that's keeping folks away."

And maybe it's not. There is a trust crisis, too. One wonders if many Americans just don't have a strong enough stomach — or heart — to take such a tour anymore. Even if the building is supposed to be our property. And even if the tour is free, no small matter considering there is an inflation crisis too.

Recently, I took the tour. I had never done so before. It begins at 10 a.m. I arrived at 9:15 and already there was a pretty long line. A family of four from Denver was at the head, having staked out at 7:30.

THE FEW PERSONS I passed the time with seemed more concerned with Washington sights than with politics. In front of me, a prim lady from Kansas with sequined earrings rumbled through a map with her lady friend, and then turned to me. "Do you know where Ford's Theater is?" she asked. "I heard it's something to see, too."

We waited quietly alongside the tall, iron-shafted fence separating the maple-and-magnolia-lined street from the manicured White House garden. It was just about 10. Suddenly, there was a great clash of cymbals. I almost jumped. The ladies were startled. The sound was immediately followed by a blaring orchestration of "America the Beautiful." It came from small speakers half hidden in the shrubbery on the White House side.

When my nerve chords had begun to unjangle, I wondered if President Nixon had installed those speakers when he put in his bugging system. I soon came to terms with something else: Although this is the "people's house," I had much trouble separating the premises and edifice from the current occupant.

The line started moving. One grows up learning of the majesty and awesomeness of the White House. As I entered the white-columned double doors, the first president to greet me was William Howard Taft, all 300 pounds of him and his walrus mustache.

I REMEMBER learning two facts about President Taft. One, he did not like being president and, two, he had an immense problem trying to navigate his bulk in and out of the zinc-lined, mahogany bathtub in the White House. I never learned whether one fact had anything to do with the other.

I felt that my musings on the portrait of President Taft were getting my tour off on an irreverent foot, so I decided to buy all three of the guide books sold at the end of the first corridor.

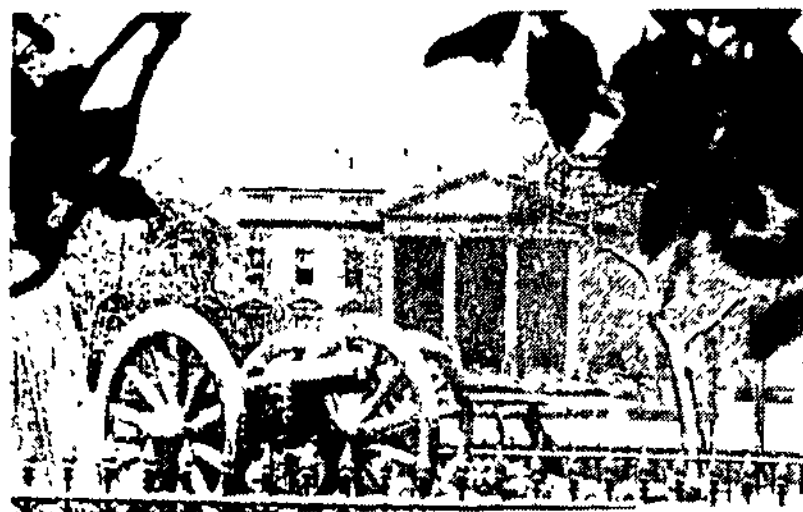

Now as I went through the East Room and the Red Room and the Blue Room and the Green Room and the State Dining Room, I was dustily aware of the historic background of the cut-glass chandeliers, the various Americans, the chinoiserie (European furniture in Oriental style), the savonnerie (tapestries inspired from a French soap factory), and the gifts from aliens such as the howdah ladder — for getting on and off elephants — from Asian Indians, and the feathered headdress from American Indians.

One could feel the sense of history all around. President Teddy Roosevelt said, "I think of Lincoln, shambling, homely, with his strong, sad, deeply furrowed face, all the time. I see him in different rooms and in the halls ... he is to me infinitely the most real of the dead Presidents."

AFTER PRESIDENT Lincoln signed the Emancipation Proclamation, and after shaking hands for three hours at a reception here, he said, "I never felt more certain that I was doing right. But my arm is stiff and numb. If they find my hand trembled, they will say, 'He had some compunctions.' But anyway it is going to be done!"

Coincidentally, I read recently that President Nixon's hands have begun to shake very much in the last two years.

President Lincoln and President Nixon also shared a problem with spending too much of the taxpayer's money on home improvements. Mary Lincoln, on her own, spent $8,700 to spruce up the living quarters. "Angrily," said a guidebook, "Lincoln refused to ask for a deficiency appropriation, saying: '... it would sink in the nostrils of the American people.'"

The White House has been the scene of several scandals and near-scandals. For example when President Benjamin Harrison ascribed his narrow victory to Providence, Boss Matt Quay of Pennsylvania exclaimed that Harrison would never know "how close a number of men were compelled to approach ... the penitentiary to make him president."

The difference between then and now is that President Nixon knows.

SUCH A MELANCHOLY realization of the historic corruption at the highest levels of the government can truly choke one up as he walks in a pack through the magnificent and — one wishes — hallowed halls. The echoes of faith sound through the corridors:

"May none but honest and wise Men ever rule under this roof," said President John Adams.

"James Monroe is so honest that if you turned his soul inside out there would not be a spot on it," said President Thomas Jefferson.

"I never forget that I live in a house owned by all the American people and that I have been given their trust," said President Franklin Roosevelt.

THE WHOLE TOUR takes about half an hour, and 174 years. As I walked outside, I looked back at the great white mansion. I felt a mingling of outrage about this building and love for what it symbolizes: strong, trustworthy leadership in a free and humane society.

It was Silent Cal, of all people, who shed the clearest perspective. The guidebook "The Living White House," relates how President Coolidge and a guest, a Missouri senator, strolled outside the grounds. As they returned to the White House, the senator joked, "I wonder who lives there?"

"Nobody," replied the President. "They just come and go."

It is simply the presidency that remains.

Senate votes to deny U.S. amateur athletics subsidies

From Roll Call Report

Following is a summary of key votes by members of the Illinois congressional delegation for the period from July 8-10. Included in the summary are votes by Illinois' two senators, Republican Charles H. Percy and Democrat Adlai E. Stevenson III and Northwest suburban congressman U.S. Rep. Philip M. Crane, R-12th and U.S. Rep. Samuel H. Young, R-10th.

House

NUCLEAR ACCIDENT INSURANCE: An amendment to set a 1978 expiration date for a law relating to accident insurance at nuclear power plants, rejected 267-138.

The U.S. Treasury now is liable for compensating victims of nuclear accidents.

The effect of setting the 1978 date would have been to force more congressional oversight of safety procedures at nuclear power plants.

Supporters argued that all the facts on reactor safety are not yet known, and that Congress should not, therefore, clock the nation into insurance procedures.

Opponents argued that the amendment was an attempt to block construction of nuclear power plants.

Crane ..... No

Young ..... No

Others: Ralph Metcalfe, D-1st; Robert Hanrahan, R-3rd; Cardiss Collins, D-7th; Sidney Yates, D-9th, and Paul Findley, R-20th, voted yes.

Morgan Murphy, D-2nd; Edward Derwinski, R-4th; John Kluczynski, D-5th; Don Rostenkowski, D-8th; Frank Annunzio, D-11th; Robert McClory, R-13th; John Erlenborn, R-14th; Leslie Arends, R-15th; John Anderson, R-16th; George O'Brien, R-17th; Robert Michel, R-18th; Thomas Railsback, R-19th; Edward Madigan, R-21st; Melvin Price, D-23rd, and Kenneth Gray, D-24th, voted no.

Harold Collier, R-6th, and George Shipley, D-22nd, did not vote.

Senate

AMATEUR ATHLETICS: An amendment to deny federal subsidies for amateur athletics, such as the Olympics, passed 47-44.

The amendment was attached to a bill to create a five-member federal sports board to arbitrate disputes between the feuding National Collegiate Athletic Association and the Amateur Athletic Union.

Supporters of the fund cut argued that athletics should be privately financed.

In opposing the amendment, Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., said, "This is a one-shot proposition to get this amateur sports program going." Sen. Russell Long, D-La., said, "I am sick and tired of seeing America beaten" in foreign athletic competition.

Percy ..... No

Stevenson ..... Yes

ATOMIC AID: An amendment to make it easier for Congress to veto the sales of nuclear reactors to foreign nations, such as sales recently announced to Egypt and Israel, defeated, 49-46.

Crane

Young

Stevenson

The amendment would have given either house the power to block such agreements.

In rejecting the amendment, the Senate voted to keep the bill's original language, which permits the blocking of such agreements, but only if both houses vote against them.

Supporters argued that the amendment would restore Congress' role in conducting foreign policy.

Opponents argued that the amendment would be too restrictive on the President's foreign policy powers.

Percy ..... Yes

Stevenson ..... Yes

Stevenson unit chief named

Mrs. Lorena Stevens of Arlington Heights has been named chairman of the Citizens for Stevenson Committee for Wheeling Township in the reelection campaign of U.S. Sen. Adlai E. Stevenson III, D-Illinois.

Mrs. Stevens served five years as president of the Wheeling Township Democratic Women's Organization.

ANOTHER ORDER for a snow cone. Donna opens the freezer and gets one out. Over 15 different items are available, ranging in price from 12 to 30 cents. She gets to keep 25 per cent of what she makes during a day.

THE BIMBO TRUCK is a familiar sight in the northwest suburbs. The tingling melody played over and over attracts children. Donna drives close to the curb at a very slow speed in order to draw out all her customers.

The lady is pretty

They scream for ice cream

by GENIE CAMPBELL

I'm an ice cream freak. Consequently, hardly a day goes by that I don't eat my quota. It's hard to function without it.

And during the summer my need becomes even more fierce as ice cream is more readily available. How is one to resist the vendors who bring it right to the front door?

"What's your preference today? Ice cream bar or sundae?"

"I'll have one of both, please."

And I had one of everything in the freezer the day I accompanied Donna Smith as she made her daily scheduled rounds in the Bimbo truck.

When I wasn't eating, I was watching it being distributed out the side door. A perfect way to spend the day . . . for people who date on ice cream, that is.

IT USED TO BE that only men got credit for making little children smile on a hot summer day. Turning on the music boxes in their trucks or wagons; slowly cruising the streets, and frequently stopping curbside to trade an ice cream cone for a dime or 15 cents, was a masculine occupation. Not anymore.

Prices may have risen, even popsicles are now 12 cents, but the greatest change was made behind the wheel. Women today are also "ice cream employed," which might not make any difference to the children but seems to please many adult men who suddenly developed a taste for the frozen dessert they never knew they had.

"Hi! What's your name, cutie?"

"My name is Bimbo. That's what I always tell them," laughs Donna who drives the Bimbo truck throughout the neighborhoods in Rolling Meadows every day except Monday.

BASED IN Barrington, Bimbo is a new firm that includes a caravan of 15 trucks that covers the entire northwest suburbs.

Donna was not the first woman driver hired by the company but the only one to have stuck it out this long into the summer. She doesn't plan to give it up either until into September when the demand for ice cream slackens and the trucks are stored for the fall and winter season.

Long hours, from 10 a.m. until 9 p.m., frightened off many would-be female drivers. But Donna, who enjoys driving a truck, has no difficulty in maneuvering the large van that contains a chest freezer stocked with ice cream.

Once the battery on her truck stalled and another time a fuse blew overnight in the freezer, so when she came to work her entire supply was melted. But every truck driver expects to run into some maintenance problems.

A 1972 WHEELING High School graduate, Donna, who resides in Mount Prospect, likes her summer job very much. Being outside during the summer is one big advantage. And every night she takes home money.

Her cut is 25 per cent of what she sells and, though sometimes the turnover is slow, when weather is bad or extremely hot (no one will leave their air conditioner), the snow cones, popsicles, fudgesicles, ice cream bars and push-ups can add up. On her best day, Donna grossed $179.

Knowing her route well, she often stops along the way for regular customers to appear. Rarely do they disappoint her.

TURNING ONE corner, two little girls came flying down the sidewalk followed by a Dad who treated both daughters and himself to push-ups. Other little kids cast long sad glances at the truck as it passed by them. They have no money with which to bargain.

Sometimes the children are not as cute . . . asking for free samples or throwing fire crackers into the truck for spite. Donna has learned from experience that the money must be counted before the ice cream is handed out. It makes for better business.

Even so, her little ones are still her best customers and they seem to prefer the snow cones and bomb pops most of all.

WHILE ON MY third purchase, Donna admitted the worst part of her job is disciplining herself from eating up all the profits.

"I love fudgesicles," she said.

The hours no longer bother her since her boyfriend started driving a Bimbo truck in Palatine. The two drive back and forth to work together, and on their one day off each week, frequent the beach where ice cream is just as plentiful.

And who makes more money?

Donna sadly admits he does. But she tosses her head, "He also has a bigger territory, too."

DRIVING THE BIMBO truck presents no problems for Donna Smith who enjoys this job much more than her old one. She used to work in a factory. And if there are a lot of ice cream lovers out, the pay isn't so bad either.

SOMETIMES IT'S DIFFICULT to decide. Donna waits patiently while the children make up their minds. After thinking it over they usually decide upon either snow cones or bomb pops which are two of Miss Smith's biggest sellers during the day. The best day of the week for the lady driver is Sundays when both parents and children are looking for a treat to top a big noon meal.

THE AFTERNOON IS HOT so why not. This man has decided to trade his pipe for an ice cream bar. Though he just happened to be out in his yard, Donna often has customers pull over and stop in their cars.

Tracing your family tree can be fascinating hobby

Genealogy is a subject that fascinates many, but I'm afraid that if I go looking up my family tree, I may get zonked with a bad apple, so to speak. Still, my trade papers are filled with genealogy, "how to," state histories and related topics, and you might be interested in some of the fine points of such a hobby.

First of all, there is a Query Index, that is, last names of those families on which some information is printed in the particular publication. In these columns people give what information they have on their family and request more, or hope to find others with the same surnames with whom they can trade information.

One has to have a certain amount of know-how even to read these ads, for they are quite abbreviated. For instance, "Ane" is ancestors, "b" stand for born, "ch" for children, "m" for married, "Rev" for Revolution (the desired end of all queries is to find a Revolutionary hero in the family), "w" is for wife and "h" for husband. Also, one is cautioned, since language is not a static thing, old records may not mean the same then as they do today. Terminology in "in-law," "stepson," etc., change over the years. In the old days a wife's son by a previous marriage was considered a "son-in-law." It does make a kind of sense!

FAMILY COATS of arms are advertised all over the place, but here is a new one — "Your Dog's Coat of Arms!" I would think "coat of legs" more appropriate. Anyhow, your dachshund, poodle or bloodhound can get a bona fide plaque showing his ancestry to hang over the doghouse door, for a fee, of course.

New books on genealogy are being printed constantly. One of great historical interest is "King and Queen County, Virginia" by the Rev. Alfred Bagby, which studies the Tidewater, Va. area, ancestral home of many of our country's pioneers and statesmen. Families included in the genealogical section with considerable information are these following.

Collecting with Grace Carolyn

Perhaps yours is included. If it is and you are interested in the book, it may be ordered from Genealogical Publishing Co., 521 St. Paul Place, Baltimore, Md. 21202. The price is $13.50, ppd.

Acree, Bates, Bagby, Bird, Bland, Boulware, Brooke, Byrd, Carlton, Cornwell, Collins, Cook, Corbin, Corr, Clsby, Council, Courtney, Cox, Crittenton, Dickey, Diggs, Des, Dudley, Eubank, Fauntleroy.

Fleet, Gaines, Garnett, Goven, Gresham, Gwathmey, Hall, Hamilton, Hampton, Harless, Harwood, Haynes, Henley, Henshaw, Hill, Hutchinson, Kidd, Latane, Lumpkin, Lyne, Motley, Muir, Munn, Pendleton, Pollard.

PORTER, PUNCELL, Purks, Richle, Rives, Roane, Robinson, Roy, Ryland, Saunders, Scott, Semple, Shackelford, Smith, Stephens, Street, Taylor, Todd, Vaughan, Walker, Ware, White Williams, Wright.

One of my trade papers will answer questions and suggest approaches to family tree problems at no charge. If you have an ancestor's name and wish to research further, they can suggest various genealogical societies, county records, libraries, etc. which might help. I will supply the address for such queries. If you write Grace Carolyn Dahlberg, in care of Suburban Living, Padlock Publications, Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006. Since such queries are answered only in the columns, one would need to subscribe to the paper mentioned. But if you are genuinely interested in family research, this would be a good way to start.

Kate Millett's 'Flying' not up to first book

"FLYING,"
by KATE MILLETT
Knopf, $9.95

People who write books can be assigned one of two arbitrarily named categories — authors and writers. Writers are word craftsmen, authors are point makers.

For instance, in her first and widely hailed book, "Sexual Politics," Kate Millett was an author making a point about how various writers handled literature. As an author she was discussing people such as Norman Mailer, certainly best known for his mastery of words, not ideas.

Now we see the emergence of Millett as the writer of a long stream of consciousness autobiography on the year after the publication of "Sexual Politics." She is an author in need of a subject.

She complains about being used or manipulated by the media, but really no one is forced into being a talk show guest. It is for fun or profit and both are voluntary. If Millett was manipulated by anyone it was her sisters in the radical, lesbian end of the feminist movement who may have forced her into making public the lesbian side of her nature.

But if that were true, no one has forced her into the intimate, sometimes interminable, details of those lesbian relationships that she reveals in her book in prose that would have been better left unwritten.

Kate Millett is capable of clear, instructive and even insightful writing on a subject, but she should steer clear of the subjective.

"THE LAST STAND,"
by DANIEL R. BARNERY
Grossman, $7.95

A Ralph Nader expose that chronicles the plundering of our national forests by the commercial logging industry. Pressured by the sly tactics of the lobbyists and public relations men, the author says, Congress and the Forest Service have caved in often so that "the last reservoir of timber resources left to be drained is endangered."

"DANCING IN THE DARK,"
by HOWARD DIETZ
Quadrangle, $10

One of Broadway's beloved lyricists, Dietz recalls a lively life among the luminaries of the stage, screen and opera from Mrs. Patrick Campbell to Richard Tucker and Judy Garland. He writes with wit of his long collaboration with composer Arthur Schwartz, one of show business' happiest pairings.

"WRAPPED FOR ETERNITY," by MILDRED MASTIN PACE
McGraw-Hill, $4.95

For anyone with a fascination for Egyptian mummies, here is a definitive study of the preservation and wrapping of the dead that was so successful we can look today on 3,000-year-old faces we would have recognized had we known them.

The book stall

"THE HOUSE OF DAVID,"
by JERRY M. LANDAY
Saturday Review, $11.95

A former correspondent in Israel and student of Middle East history illuminates the epic story of Israel's founding kings which still lives in the imagination of millions today. Photographs and art from many eras are lavishly used to illustrate this handsome book.

"WHEN YOU PAINT,"
by WARD BRACKETT
McGraw-Hill, $17.95

A veteran in the field of commercial and repertorial art and painting discusses the basic concepts of picture making in a fresh, practical manner that should help the beginner as well as the more experienced artist. The illustrative layout is beautifully organized.

"BLOOD OF MY BLOOD,"
by RICHARD GAMBIRO
Doubleday, $7.95

An educator of Italian extraction has written the first in-depth study of the least understood, most alienated of ethnic groups — the Italian-Americans. This is a milestone document in destroying the American "melting pot" myth, which Gambino believes should be replaced by creative ethnicity.

"ROLL YOUR OWN,"
by JODI PALLIDINI and BEVERLY DUBIN
Macmillan, $7.95

This is the do-it-yourself book on camping in which the authors write about homemade recreational vehicles and inside accessories.

They tell how to plan a home on wheels in trucks and buses and how to build showers and iceboxes. They also give information on installing skylights, windows and bubble domes. One chapter is devoted to exterior storage, another on how to travel with children.

The book is easy to read and of considerable practical value.

"ENERGY, THE NEW ERA,"
by S. DAVID FREEMAN
Walker, $14.50

The recent energy crisis makes this book one of the most timely of new publications. A Ford Foundation expert outlines a broad program for more frugal, simple use of energy sources without hardship or danger to the environment. A valuable reference work.

Music for lazy summer afternoons

Looking for music for a lazy summer afternoon? Here's a batch of new releases.

Sly & the Family Stone's latest album, "Small Talk" (Epic records), is a smooth extension musically of last year's "Fresh" album. Lyrically, though, the new album is a bit poorer. Sly's still into the light, jazzy rock that he's had in his past two albums and with that funky bass beat it makes for good listening.

"Say You Will" is the best of the tunes that are part of Sly's social-consciousness lyric writing. Its theme is involvement. As for a ballad, nothing can top "This Is Love" with the lush strings, Fifties piano beat and group vocals.

The album also has the latest Sly single, "Time For Livin'," which features a good bit on violin by Sid Page. (For an annoying bit, though, there's the baby crying on the album's opener, "Small Talk.")

Another good song is "Loose Booty" which harkens back to the sound of "Thank You" and "I Want To Take You Higher" (those smash hits of yesterday from the group) with its chuggin' bass, punchy horns and repetitious sound/lyric "Sha-

Playback

by Tom Von Malder

drack Meshack Abednego."

Although "Small Talk" is not Sly's best album, much of it is worth several listenings.

Grateful Dead guitarist Jerry Garcia has turned to several diverse songwriters and several diverse musical sounds for his second solo album, "Garcia" (Round records — the second Grateful Dead independent record label).

The album is pretty good (after all, Garcia is one of rock's better guitarists) even though I prefer a couple of the songs in their original versions over Garcia's. Best of the lot is Garcia's rendition of Van Morrison's "If I Ain't Give You None." Garcia manages nicely on the song with a smooth, dreamy vocal, backed by power-voices Clydie King and Merry Clayton.

Other good songs are the Orleans flavor of Dr. John's "What Goes Around," the Stones' "Let's Spend the Night Together" with vocal assist by Maria Muldrum, the bluesy "That's What Love Will Make You Do" and Smokey Robinson's "When the Hunter Gets Captured by the Game" (for a great version, though, hear Ella Fitzgerald's).

Throughout the fine album, Garcia is backed by more than a dozen skilled musicians.

Also on Round records is the first solo album by Robert Hunter, the Grateful Dead's chief lyricist.

Hunter's album, "Tales of the Great Rum Runners," is full of well written songs, as you'd expect it would be. The surprise is that Hunter isn't that bad a singer and even sounds good on a couple of the cuts. (One minus point is the absence of a lyric sheet.)

Musically, the album ranges across a wide spectrum. There is the uptempo and often lilting "The Train," a folksy "Dusty Road," the wild fiddling on

"Rum Runners" (a highlight song; and the bagpipe arrangement on the slow-paced "Children's Lament." He even goes a cappella on "Boys In the Barroom," which sounds a bit like an old sea chanty.

Elsewhere on the album, Hunter gets into a bit of jazz, country music, Latin music and lush romantic music. The album is a good one, and I hope it gets heard a lot.

Santana has not been involved with much heavy rock lately. That's one reason it was so good to hear the newly released "Santana's Greatest Hits" (Columbia records).

This powerhouse album has the hits you'd expect — "Evil Ways," "Black Magic Woman" and "Oye Como Va" — plus two good songs you may have overlooked — "Hope You're Feeling Better" and "Jingo." Of the 10 songs, eight are from the group's first two albums and the other two are from the third album. (Albums four and five probably have the fuel for a second volume of greatest hits.)

Anyone who has missed the early Santana albums should pick up on this one quickly.

"Wonderworld" is the second Uriah Heep album on its new label, Warner Brothers. It continues the softening of the Heep sound — an obvious ploy for greater sales.

I prefer the older Heep material, and the new album doesn't excite me too much. Still it has enough bits that appeal — like the title track — to make it worth a listen or two.

Theater courses at Oakton

Area residents interested in acting might consider two sequential eight-week theater courses being offered at Oakton Community College this fall.

The courses mark Oakton's first step toward modular scheduling that give the student a choice in semester length.

The first course, Beginning Acting, begins Aug. 26 and will meet for eight weeks for a double time period. At the end of the eight weeks (Oct. 16), the course will be completed and grades distributed.

The second course, Intermediate Acting, will begin Oct. 21 and continue for another eight weeks through Dec. 18.

A STUDENT MAY take both courses or only one. Registration is required at the beginning of the semester for both courses.

Carole Kleinberg, instructor in theater communications, and Denis Berkson, assistant professor of theater communication, will meet with the classes, Monday, Wednesday and Friday, 12:30 to 2:30 p.m.

Questions should be directed to either person at Oakton Community College, 7900 N. Nagle, Morton Grove, (667-5120, ext. 2091).

Tohl Abrams is having a one-woman show of her paintings and drawings at the Suburban National Bank of Palatine, 800 E. Northwest Hwy. in Palatine, now through the end of this month.

Mrs. Abrams holds a bachelor of science degree from Northern Illinois University and has done graduate study at Western Illinois University and the National College of Education. She is a member of the Mount Prospect Art League and the Community Arts League of Wheeling and Buffalo Grove.

This weekend is the final weekend for the Chicago Renaissance Faire sponward Alboe and "Double Solitaire" by Robert Anderson. The musical "I Do! I Do!" is on stage Saturday, again July 26 and 28, during Des Plaines Theatre Guild's Summer Festival of Theatre.

Masque and Staff casts spoof of mystery movies

The play that spoofs mystery movies of the '40s, "Any Number Can Die" will be presented at Elk Grove High School July 26, 27, 31 and Aug. 3 by the Masque and Staff community theatre group.

Included in the cast are Art Hassel and Cris Trafford of Arlington Heights, Ginny Lobaugh of Schaumburg, Scott Lebin of Hanover Park, and Bill Cannon, Mary Murphy, Pam Nolan, Lois McKelvey, Karen Leksander, Bruce Weaver, Paul Denney and Bob Johnson, all of Elk Grove Village.

The play, first presented by Masque and Staff five years ago with many of the same cast members, takes place on a deserted island off the coast of the Carolinas in an old abandoned mansion in which the owner died. He had stipulated that his heirs be gathered together in the same house for the reading of the will. What then takes place is a farcical case of false identities liberally sprinkled with murder. Tickets at $2 are available by calling 437-0786.

AT THE GROUP'S annual banquet, Masque and Staff awarded its version of the Oscar to members who had been notable in one or more categories during the previous season. The award, called "The Enema," is a miniature, gold painted Buddha.

Winners were: for best Deleted Expletive, Bill Cannon; plumbers, Pat Soderlund; let's make this perfectly clear award, Bob and Sharon Farber; 18-minute gap, Lois McKelvey; coverup, Kyleen Wilson; wire tap, Art Hassel, transcript, Shirley Johnson; and Rosemary Wood's tape look-alike, Clarence Petersen.

As a special tribute for their many years of fine acting, a "Big Enema" was given to Bob and Sharon Farber.

New board members include president, Bob Johnson, Elk Grove; vice president, Ginny Lobaugh, Schaumburg; secretary, Loretta Tomaselli, Elk Grove; treasurer, Lois McKelvey, Elk Grove; social chairman, Pat Soderlund, Rolling Meadows; publicity, John Grayson, Arlington Heights; members at large, Guy Marsh, Mount Prospect, Art Soderlund, Rolling Meadows, and Bob Farber, Hoffman Estates.

Exhibit of Eskimo Art Now Open at Ravinia

A rare exhibition of ancient through contemporary Eskimo Art, assembled throughout the United States and Canada, is on display at Ravinia Festival's Casins Gallery in Ravinia Park on Chicago's North Shore through Aug. 17.

The unusual show, the Festival's 18th annual art exhibit, is entitled "Ulu/Inu — Form and Fantasy in Eskimo Art." The concept of presenting art of America's indigenous cultures was successfully introduced by Ravinia last season with the critically acclaimed "Bosque Redondo Remembered . . . The Navajo Blanket," a historical, yet timely, exhibit of exquisitely designed 19th century Navajo wearing blankets.

Objects are identified and listed in the following categories: masks, finger masks, headgear, carvings, weapons and utensils, containers, combs and pipes, engravings on ivory, baskets, carvings and prints.

AMONG THE MASKS are those representing the moon, whales, walrus, birds, wolf and red fox. Finger masks, trimmed with fur, feathers or caribou hair, were worn on the tips of fingers.

Ivory carvings include seven seals that might be attached to the clothing of the hunter or the harness of his dog sled, to increase his powers over the animal; a killer whale, fish, female figures and charms.

The art gallery is open free to Ravinia's audiences one-and-a-half hours before Festival performances and at intermission Tuesday through Sunday. Films of Eskimo artists at work are shown in the Casino Theatre 15 minutes after the gallery opens. Titles are "Ken-ojuak"; Eskimo Artist; "Pictures Out of My Life"; Pitseolak.

There are gallery talks one-half hour after the gallery opens.

'Gypsy,' a sensational show

by GENIE CAMPBELL

One of the most enjoyable, sensational productions to be talked about and remembered this year in Chicago theater will be ANGELA LANSBURY in a bubbly, fun revival of "GYPSY" at the OPERA HOUSE. Too bad the engagement is only two weeks. Not enough people will get to see it.

It was already common knowledge that Angela Lansbury would be a safe bet in the role of Rose, Gypsy's headstrong mother who pushes her backward, shy daughter into show biz after her baby-faced favored daughter runs off to live her own future. Yet the actress' performance is even more forceful and dynamic than one might even have expected. It is no wonder she was voted "Best Actress of 1973" in London last year when she played Rose there.

Though she grabs and demands center attention throughout the fairly tale-like story, she is backed by a talented, strong cast including REX ROBBINS in the role of Herbie and ZAN CHARISSE in the role of Louise, who later becomes the famous Gypsy Rose Lee. BONNIE LANGFORD makes quite a hit too as Baby June.

Another full-fledged production, "Lorelei," recently staged at the Opera House, was memorable for the enchanting performance by Carol Channing, though the rest of the production fell flat for lack of color and real gusto.

"No No Nanette" reinstated the flavor of a Broadway musical with no holds barred on costuming or sets.

But "Gypsy" is able to capture everything, a fine leading lady, gorgeous costumes and great sets that are ingeniously and smoothly changed. Songs are highlighted by the original Broadway direction and choreography of JEROME ROBBINS.

Most amusing are numbers by Rose's two daughters and company and one by a trio of strippers in Gypsy's first burlesque house. But nothing takes away from Angela Lansbury when she lets loose at the end of both acts, for "Everything's Coming Up Roses" and "Rose's Turn."

Altogether "Gypsy" is a bright, joyous package of entertainment that doesn't come along very often. Don't miss it if you can help it.

"YOU'RE A GOOD MAN, CHARLIE BROWN," a musical based on the Charles M. Schulz comic strip, "Peanuts," opened at COUNTRY CLUB

Angela Lansbury

THEATRE in Mount Prospect last night.

The production being directed by TOM VENTRIS and produced by ARNOLD GIEDRAITIS, stars many familiar faces including MIKE SIMS as Charlie Brown, KAREN MASON as Lucy, KEN JOHNSON as Snoopy, BRIAN WILSON as Linus, TOM WAGNER as Schroeder, and MAGGIE SCHMIDT as Patty.

The OSCAR LINDSAY TRIO will be performing through this month at the GREENHOUSE OF COUNTRYSIDE RESTAURANT, 1200 W. Baldwin Road (Rt. 14) in Palatine.

Showtimes are Wednesday through Sunday, 7:30 p.m. until 1:30 a.m. (2:30 a.m. on Saturday).

Also featured in the GREENHOUSE LOUNGE is HOWARD DINNING.

THE 5TH DIMENSION is at MILL RUN through Sunday along with the HUES CORPORATION of "Rock the Boat" fame.

JOHNNY DESMOND opens Tuesday in the TOP OF THE TOWERS penthouse restaurant and the MARY PASTOR SHOW is currently at ALLGAUER'S FIRESIDE LOUNGE. At another nightclub spot, the BLUE MAX in the HYATT REGENCY O'HARE, comedian GEORGE GOBEL will be spotlighted beginning Monday, along with singer DANNY MARONA.

LEE PELTY, a favorite of CANDLELIGHT DINNER PLAYHOUSE audiences, has returned to the suburban dinner playhouse as Capt. Von Trapp in the musical, "THE SOUND OF MUSIC." Opening this week, it marks Candlelight's 13th anniversary year presentation.

"FORTY YEARS ON," the satirical comedy now at the FORUM THEATRE through Sunday, has received three Jefferson award nominations including WILLIAM FULLINSI for direction; MIKE NUSSBAUM for best actor, and LOLLY TRUSCHT for supporting actress. The play is being replaced on Tuesday with "SOLITAIRE DOUBLE SOLITAIRE" and will feature Chicago actor RAY RAYNER.

KIM and DAVE, THE SINGING STRINGS, appear each Friday and Sunday evenings at HANS BAVARIAN LODGE on Milwaukee Avenue in Wheeling. Kim plays the zither and Dave strums the guitar. Together they yodel.

Managing director of Arlington Park Theatre, DAVID LONN, has announced that BARBARA RUSH will return to the theater Aug. 15 in a play to be later named. Early last year Miss Rush starred at Arlington with Louis Jourdan in "Private Lives."

On Sept. 17, British actor ROY DOT-RICE will perform again in "BRIEF LIVES" for a two-week-only engagement ending Sept. 28. The one-man show is a fine, dramatic evening.

Then on Oct. 3, SID CAESAR and IMOGENE COCA will premiere a new comedy, "24 HOURS A DAY." Lonn plans to produce the show on Broadway following its engagement here.

Two final reminders. "STATUS QUO VADIS" comes back to the Ivanhoe Theatre on Tuesday, and KAY BAL-LARD opens Wednesday at the First Chicago Center in a new musical, "SIEBA," based on the prize play "Come Back, Little Sheba."

SUE ROBERTSON, Wheeling artist, shows watercolor she will give away at outdoor art fair Sunday, Aug. 4, in conjunction with Wheeling Historical Society's Brat and Bear Fest. Irving Shaperio of American Academy of Art will give a watercolor; Christi Hanson, Mount Prospect, an acrylic painting. Wheeling-Buffalo Grove Community Arts League is sponsoring the fair, which opens at noon on parking lot at Routes 45 and 68.

100 artists, craftsmen at Northpoint festival

The fourth annual arts and crafts festival at Northpoint Shopping Center, Arlington Heights, takes place Sunday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. The center is located on Rand Road between Palatine Road and Arlington Heights Road.

It goes on, rain or shine, as the artists and craftsmen will have cover overhead for themselves and the visitors.

Over 100 exhibitors from the Midwest will be there to show a full range of paintings, sculpture, etchings and other graphics, plus a variety of crafts from glass blowing to decoupage.

The show will carry ribbons and cash awards and will be judged by Chester Roseen of the Randhurst Art Gallery in Mount Prospect. Irene "Rae" Partridge of Barrington is the festival director.

There is no admission charge and features ample parking and refreshments.

EXHIBITORS FROM Arlington Heights will be Dorothy Anderson, acrylic paintings; Fran Boeck, oils; Mildred Hamrin, oils and paper tole; Esther Lockhart, watercolors and acrylics; and William Teske, antique copper repousse.

Palatine artists include Nathan Acherman, hard-edge geometric modern paintings; Deena Albers, Oil; Rosemary Faetz, tole painting on wood; Dorothy Kruse doing "spot" portraits and showing oils; Nick Nero, stoneware and pottery; and Milt Woolsey, plants in driftwood and macrame.

Those showing from Wheeling will be Sue Robertson, watercolors and oils, and Susan Ugolini, mixed crafts.

Ron and Sandy Fredrickson of Schaumburg will show gem cutting and lapidary. Prospect Heights artists are Karen Hinton, showing sculptures on wood, and Betty Kondrat, oils.

MOUNT PROSPECT exhibitors are Maryann Haapioja, repousse plaques and mixed crafts; Arlene Flora Kargacos, modern oils; and C. Laurine Schaefer, watercolors.

From Buffalo Grove, Herb and June Haasler will show mixed crafts; Pat Ketz, pottery and stoneware; Elizabeth Rezek, oils; and Sylvia Westgard, watercolors and acrylics.

Des Plaines will be represented by Charles Anderson, graphics and block-prints; Clay Anderson, etchings and monographs; Joy Anderson, etchings; Nancy Blakely, fabric flowers; Thomas Grill, oils; Lillina Jahnke; acrylics; Kathi Klester, ceramics on wood; Victoria Locascio, wood sculpture; Thomas Lynch, watercolors, Henry McAlevy, oils and watercolors; Halcyon Peters, colored ink paintings; Merrill Peterson, fake fur children's pictures; and Maria Nyndak, oils.

Chicago is famous for its many fine, large museums. Did you know Chicago also has a treasury of fine, small museums? Here are some worth visiting:

Oriental Institute, 1155 E. 58th St. (Phone 753-2474) has fascinating antiquities from the Far East, including mummies, jewelry more than 3,000 years old, and a Dead Sea Scroll jar and fragments. It's open daily except Mondays from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Free.

Polish Museum of America, 984 N. Milwaukee Ave. (Phone 384-3352) has everything Polish, from dolls in folk costumes to wycinanki (intricate paper cutouts) to a model of Paderewski's apartment. Open Monday through Friday from 1 to 4 p.m. Free.

DuSable Museum of African-American History, 57th St. and Cottage Grove (Phone 947-0600) shows the many contributions black people have made to the world's art and technology. Open Tuesday through Friday from 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. and weekends from 1 to 5 p.m. Small donation requested.

Balzekas Museum of Lithuanian Culture, 4012 S. Archer Ave. (Phone 847-2441) is full of old Lithuanian art, medieval weapons, and a fine collection of amber. Open daily from 1 to 4:30 p.m. Free.

A wedding in her future

Lynette Wall

The engagement of Lynette Elaine Wall to Bill J. Van Pelt is announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth W. Wall of Mount Prospect. Lynette and Bill, son of Mrs. Clarence Van Pelt of Des Moines, Iowa, are planning a late summer wedding.

Lynette, a 1970 graduate of Forest View High School, recently graduated from Illinois State University where she became affiliated with Delta Zeta Sorority. Bill is an entertainer currently touring the United States with the group, Glass House.

Barbara De Witt

Mr. and Mrs. Jasper De Witt of Rolling Meadows announce the engagement of their daughter, Barbara Jo, to Keith Chulpek, son of the Elmer Chulpeks of Des Plaines.

A May 31, 1975 wedding is planned.

A '73 graduate of Fremd High School, Barbara works for Kassuba Development. Her fiancé graduated in '72 from Elk Grove High School and attends the University of Dubuque in Iowa.

Cindy Grosnick

A Mount Prospect couple, Cindy Grosnick and Gary A. Hames are engaged and planning to be married next summer. Their announcement comes from Cindy's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Grosnick, 12 N. Louis St. Gary's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hames Jr., live at 305 S. William.

The young couple graduated from Prospect High School in 1972. Cindy attends Lutheran General Hospital School of Nursing where she will graduate next year. Gary is with Bruce Automotive in Mount Prospect.

Next on the agenda

THE SPARES

The July party sponsored by The Spares Sunday Evening Club will be held at 8 p.m. Saturday at the Cedar Run Clubhouse, Wheeling. Biddy Persaud of Wheeling will be hostess for the swim and dance party. Cost, including food and beverages, is $6, and reservations may be made through Phyllis Weldon, 763-0893.

The club is an organization for single, widowed, divorced and legally separated adults living in Cook and surrounding counties.

WOMEN ACCOUNTANTS

Chicago Chapter of the American Society of Women Accountants, which includes women from the northwest suburbs, will be hostess Saturday for All Illinois-Wisconsin Day at O'Hare International Tower Hotel.

The program will include technical sessions by airline personnel, tours through the control tower and flight kitchen and dinner and entertainment by a hypnotist.

What to do about biting insects in swimming pool

Dear Dorothy: Surely by this time you have also become an expert on home swimming pools. We've often had water insects of various kinds, but lately we seem to have a new type that stings us. I'd appreciate knowing if you've heard about this insect and what we might do to get rid of it. — Mrs. Robert Martinson.

My remote control guess is that you've got back swimmers in your pool. I wrote about the kind called water boatmen last fall. These feed on algae and other aquatic organisms and do not bite humans. Back swimmers, however, are similar in appearance but feed on other insects and occasionally on tadpoles, and they do bite when touched. The bites aren't dangerous, but they are annoying. Since insecticides cannot be used in pools, the only things I can recommend are proper water treatment and dip of skimming nets.

Dear Dorothy: Thought you might like this hint. After I went through a pantry infestation with weevils, I wondered what to do about the cookbooks which I was sure had flour scattered through the pages. I put them in the freezer along with some packages which I thought were okay but was a little doubtful about. Left these there for two weeks. No further trouble. — Alice Richardson.

Have heard about this but would think you'd have a double check if each item was enclosed in a plastic bag. No evidence of the little intruders in the bags would be a double check.

Dear Dorothy: The youngsters were always taking out their shoelaces until

Married on her birthday

June 22 was Patricia Eggers' birthday and henceforth it will also be her wedding anniversary, for on that day she became the bride of Raymond McDermott Jr.

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Eggers of Buffalo Grove, Patricia and Raymond, son of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond McDermott of DeKalb, were married in St. Theresa Church, Palatine.

Maid of honor was the bride's niece, Debbie Kearns of Buffalo Grove, and three other nieces were bridesmaids.

Best man was the groom's brother, Harold.

The service was followed by a dinner reception for 110 guests in the Casa Royale, Des Plaines, and a honeymoon in New Orleans.

A graduate of Northern Illinois University, Patricia teaches continuous progress intermediate classes at St. Theresa. Her bridegroom is a photo engraver for the Waukegan News Sun.

The newlyweds are making their home in Buffalo Grove.

They honeymoon in Florida

Jean Leslie Herrmann and her bridegroom, Larry Lee Carter, honeymooned a week in Venice, Fla., and are now making their home in Clay City, Ind., where Larry is with the Clay County Farm Bureau Co.

Larry, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack L. Carter of Fairmount, Ill., received his B. S. degree in agricultural economics from the University of Illinois. Jean, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William L. Herrmann, 411 S. Yale, Arlington Heights, received her B. S. degree in home economics, foods and nutrition and hospital dietetics from the University of Illinois in 1974, but is not yet employed.

THEIR WEDDING TOOK place June

15 in First United Methodist Church of Arlington Heights during a 4 p.m. candlelight service. Joyce Herrmann, sister of the bride, was maid of honor, and bridesmaids were Joan Herrmann, also a sister of the bride, Gay Herrmann of Barrington, a cousin, Marilyn Carter, sister of the groom, and Mrs. Barbara Ignatowicz, Wheeling.

John Didier, Elkhorn, Wis., was best man, and ushers were the bride's cousin, Gerry Herrmann, Barrington, Darrell Myers, Fairmount, and two cousins of the groom, Ron Sanford, Grand Rapids, Mich., and Steve Blidill, Indianapolis, Ill.

A dinner reception for 150 was held at Allgauer's Fireside in Northbrook.

A French and English service

The service was in both French and English June 10 when Nancy Joan Dunlop of Arlington Heights became the bride of Corneliu Kirjan of Quebec City, Can.

The double ring service was held in St. Andrews Church, the oldest Presbyterian church in Quebec. It was founded by the Scottish garrison.

Nancy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Dunlop, 1115 Mayfair Road, and Corneliu, son of Mr. and Mrs. Constantin Kirjan of Bucharest, Romania, were attended by Lucie and Michel Gaumand of Quebec.

A '69 graduate of Prospect High School and a '73 graduate of Knox College, Nancy was employed in Cuernavaca, Mexico until her marriage. Her bridegroom received his masters degree in archaeology at the University of Bucharest and is employed by the minister of cultural affairs in Quebec where the newlyweds are making their home.

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond McDermott Jr.

Christmas in July Arab-American women will meet on Monday evening

There are only 188 shopping days until Christmas and Job's Daughters of Bethel 105, Des Plaines, are planning ahead as they stage their Christmas in July bazaar Saturday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Masonic Temple, Prairie and Grace-land, Des Plaines.

Coordinating the event are Mrs. Mike Huffaker and daughters Tammy, Kathy and Connie. The Christmas bazaar will feature handmade items from 25 cents to $5 including ornaments, candles, decorated pine cones, wreaths, crocheted and knitted articles, ecology boxes and terrariums.

Co-chairmen, Mrs. Jay Kuechel and daughter Karen are making plans for Mrs. Claus' Kitchen highlighted by homemade baked goods. Weather permitting, Santa will pass out free gifts to the children.

Mrs. Marilyn Shaw, Arlington Heights, will be hostess for Monday's meeting of the Northwest Arab-American Woman's Club. All area women with an interest in the Arab world are invited and those needing transportation to the 7:30 p.m. meeting may call Marlon Khayyatta, 398-8585.

The club took part in the Mount Prospect Fourth of July parade.

Still Whistler's mom

The proper name for the famous "Whistler's Mother" painting is "Arrangement in Grey and Black — The Artist's Mother."

For a Happy Life

It's fun in July to:

1. Pack an old-fashioned fried chicken supper and go to a band concert.
2. Consider if you are giving your youngsters enough responsibility.
3. Take shoes to the repair shop and make them last through the summer.
4. Engage in some sport, game or activity that you and your husband enjoyed long ago.
5. Go through every drawer and cupboard just straightening and discarding.
6. Try a shade of nail polish that is new to you.
7. Plan some special activities for late in the summer when the children are getting restless.
8. Ponder this by Rev. W. A. Nance: "Failure can be divided into those who thought and never did and those who did and never thought."

Small women have trouble with weight

I hope you have some advice for people like me. I was fascinated that you consider 1,300 calories a day as low. I've belonged to TOPS International for years and in that time I've seen many women who lose weight on 1,300 calories either fast or slow. There are many of us who eat less to maintain our weight and much less in order to lose. I eat 1,000 to 1,200 to stay the same weight and only 900 to lose weight very slowly.

I'm female, small boned, 32, five feet six and weigh 145 pounds. A blood thyroid test proved slightly low but didn't warrant medication. I'm reasonably active and eat balanced meals. I'm always tired. I get up tired and must push myself at all times. Is there any hope for people like me? Must we struggle on fat, tired and hungry? All we have to look forward to is additional and more difficult dieting as we grow older.

Small women do have a problem in preventing or eliminating obesity. The problem is that your body doesn't use many calories.

The main use of calories, unless you are very active, is to run your body at rest (basal metabolism). Energy is required to move chemicals through cells. The movement of chemicals is the main use of calories. Right here is the neglected part of weight control. Your muscles use more calories at rest for this than fat tissue. If you have a lot of muscles, you will use more calories just sitting than you will if most of your body weight is fat. Small women, even if they are active, often fail to develop enough muscle.

How much energy you use at rest is affected by disease, and a low thyroid can mean your body runs at a lower level using less energy. An overactive thyroid has the opposite effect. In your case perhaps you do need some thyroid. Most overweight women, though, have normal thyroid function.

The doctor says

by Dr. Laurence E. Lamb

THE SECOND use of energy is by physical activity. Walking, jogging and many activities are calorie burners, but you must do a lot of them to use many calories. Most people fail to use exercises that build muscles. I think even women with your problem would be smart to do some strength exercises, even mild weight lifting, to build muscles. With more muscles the body will use more energy at rest and the diet problem won't be so difficult. That may be the secret to your problems — not enough muscle.

When you develop muscles you are building tissue that literally generates the energy mechanism of the body. Many fat and tired people have so little muscle mass that they don't process food to energy.

Those individuals who use very little energy, and hence get fat if they don't markedly restrict their diet, must use ways to increase the body's ability to convert food calories to energy rather than store them as fat. If you are one of those rare people who have low-thyroid function, then that should be corrected. But, if you are one of those people whose busy type of activity doesn't build muscles, perhaps you need to concentrate on building muscles. It doesn't take a lot of work each day to build muscles. And, it is the missing formula most people need to lose weight.

Briefly on business

Job opportunities increase for grads

WASHINGTON — Job opportunities for 1974 college graduates are expected to be up considerably from last year's level. This is the basic conclusion of several surveys summarized in an article in the latest issue of the U.S. Dept. of Labor's Occupational Outlook Quarterly.

The article states the surveys — made by the College Placement Council Inc., Frank S. Endicott of Northwestern University, and several Bureau of Labor Statistics regional offices — found the strongest demand is anticipated for engineers and accountants. Job prospects appear least favorable for liberal arts and education majors.

The College Placement Council survey, based on information from 697 employers, indicates that employment of new graduates in all disciplines and degree levels is expected to be 11 per cent higher than overall hiring in 1973. A total of 92,000 job openings are anticipated this year by employers surveyed, about 18,000 more than were reported in 1970 which was considered the last "good" year for recruiting.

While the survey indicates that employment increases will vary considerably from industry to industry, employers expect to hire 32 per cent more new engineers this year than last. Employment of graduates in business administration is likely to increase 9 per cent at all degree levels. Only graduates from non-technical programs other than business — mostly in the humanities and social science — will not be getting their share of the upward trend in employment.

Information surveys made by BLS offices in Boston, Atlanta and San Francisco also indicate an increased demand for engineers and accountants. They also reported that job competition is likely to be keen for new teachers, particularly those in elementary education and in English, history and social sciences.

Opportunities appear more plentiful for teachers in specialized subjects such as industrial arts, special education, and early childhood education, as well as for graduates willing to teach in inner-city or rural areas.

No-warrant investigations

Compliance investigators for the Occupational Safety and Health Administration can enter a work site for inspectional purposes without so much as a "by your leave," notes a Commerce Clearing House report.

They do not need search warrants to enter workplaces to investigate job safety and health conditions, according to a U.S. District Court judge for the Southern District of Georgia.

The firm had refused admission to an inspector until the company's attorney — whose office was 200 miles away — was present. The Secretary of Labor had filed for an order allowing the inspection, and the application was approved.

Also, the firm's efforts to stay the judge's decision until appeals are completed were denied by the U.S. Appeals Court and three Justices of the U.S. Supreme Court, according to the report in CCH's Employment Safety and Health Guide.

Unannounced inspections do not constitute warrantless searches within the meaning of the Fourth Amendment (prohibition against unreasonable searches and seizures), according to the judge.

"The existence of necessity of probable cause in order to inspect would practically nullify the objects of the legislation," he continued. Such a requirement would compel employers to report violations in order for investigations to be made.

Sola results reported

Record first quarter results for the Sola Basic Industries were reported recently by chairman and president Frank H. Roby.

Addressing shareholders at the company's recent annual meeting in Milwaukee, Wis., Roby reported earnings for the three months ended June 30 of $1,651,038 or 48 cents a share. The figures represent a 34 per cent increase of over 1973 comparable figures of $1,233,840 or 36 cents a share.

Sales for the quarter increased 26 per cent from $33,053,079 in the first quarter of 1973 to $41,766,267 in the same quarter this year.

Roby pointed out that a recently settled six-week strike at the Sierra Electric plant in Gardena, Calif., limited output at that location. Other labor contracts scheduled for negotiation this year involve two relatively small bargaining units in Canada.

Roby indicated that a large backlog and substantial incoming order rate give promise of reasonably strong Sola Basic operations for at least the next two quarters, but felt that the longer range outlook is necessarily dependent on general business conditions which are very uncertain at this time.

Milwaukee-headquartered Sola Basic Industries has 19 domestic and 11 international plants, all making electrical and electronic equipment for the distribution, control and use of energy in electric form. The Sola Electric Division of Sola Basic Industries include a plant in Elk Grove Village.

Yugoslavia more open than ever to Western investors

by BARRY WATERS

BELGRADE — A current Yugoslav joke tells of a Communist manager leaving his factory full of gleaming Western machinery, getting into his Mercedes and getting stopped by a policeman who asks: "Are you aware that your left indicator is shining even though you keep turning right?"

The story applies particularly to firms which have co-production or joint venture agreements with Western companies, pooling capitalist knowhow and money with local labor and investment.

Despite a three-year campaign by President Tito to tighten up the ideological front, strengthen the influence of the Communist party and purge its more liberal members, Yugoslavia is more open than ever to Western investors.

THIS YEAR alone about 60 agreements for foreign capital investment already have been concluded and the pace is likely to step up if, as promised, Yugoslavia eases controls on foreign investors.

At a recent mixed economic commission meeting with West Germany — the largest investor — Yugoslavia agreed to look into relaxing controls on profits and the capital investment.

A Western diplomat said: "With some of the Warsaw Pact countries rapidly increasing commercial and trade links with the West, Yugoslavia obviously feels it must go that bit further to stay ahead of the field."

So far, however, lack of guarantees have made foreign businessmen wary of close collaboration in countries like Romania which also have been trying to woo Western capital for joint projects.

IN ADDITION, the state-controlled economies of East bloc nations are less attractive to the potential investor than the decentralized Yugoslav system. Since 1965, it has, in large measure, been regulated by market forces. Yugoslavia has been courting foreign capitalists since then and last year passed a law simplifying the legal procedures involved. A total of 120 joint venture and 400 co-production agreements have been made.

The biggest foreign investors to date have been West Germany, Italy and the United States, with the biggest single investment made by Italy's Fiat in the Kragujevac "Zastava" car plant. Preferred fields for investors are the metal-processing, chemical, non-ferrous metal and electrical industries.

Even though Yugoslavia goes to considerable lengths to attract capital and technology, no concessions are made to the West in the running of the factories. It must conform fully to Yugoslavia's system of worker self-management communism.

Some foreign investors are less than enthusiastic about such self-management.

A GERMAN business consultant who spent two years as an adviser at a joint venture plant said, "It's all right as long as you make a profit. Then everyone's happy. When you get losses, nobody cares. It would be fine if workers were supermen but they are not and can be very short-sighted when it comes to medium or long-term planning."

As a result foreign firms have been pushing for greater autonomy to pull out capital or withdraw profits and a general easing of the regulations, including taxation. At present it is usually only possible to withdraw when a joint project makes losses for two consecutive years or when results fall well below expectations.

"But despite everything, low labor costs, proximity to Western Europe and tariff-free access to the EEC for 50 per cent of industrial goods make Yugoslavia an increasingly attractive investment prospect," the consultant said.

Managing your family's money

Inflation calls for financial planning

by MERLE E. DOWD

Inflation running in double figures yearly calls for changes in financial planning for today and tomorrow. Using the "Rule of 72," if inflation runs at 10 per cent a year, prices will double in 7.2 years. Not a bright prospect.

Money normally serves two functions — as a medium of exchange and as a store of value. Money's exchange role in commerce continues, but its role as a store of wealth is losing credibility. Our inflation differs from that in Germany after World War I when wheelbarrows of paper currency were hurriedly cashed in for goods before prices escalated only in degree.

Inflation is called the "cruellest tax of all" because it taxes those least able to afford the loss — retired persons, low-income workers, and middle-income families who attempt to save.

Money could formerly be set aside for future use with some assurance that it would retain its buying power. Interest compensated savers for deferred use of their cash. Today, there is a world-wide "flight from currency." Money managers scurry to find ways of converting "promises to pay" into a store of value — something real whose value is likely to keep pace with inflation.

IS A HOUSE you buy for $20,000 and sell several years later for $40,000 a better house? Or has the value of the dollar declined to half its earlier value in terms of purchasing power? With the idea of preserving purchasing power rather than dollars, note the following:

• Gold prices world wide are bouncing around $165 an ounce. Gold remains one of the recognized "stores of value" by rich and poor alike where it's legal.

• Silver bullion is being sold as a hedge against inflation, but it does not qualify as a monetary metal.

• Land and real estate have a history of value appreciation generally as money decreases in value.

• Antiques in a bewildering variety along with other collectibles from paintings to Jim Beam bottles are being acquired as a hedge against currency deterioration.

How can you preserve your asset base and add to it to achieve long-range retirement, investment, or educational goals? There are no easy answers, but investigate these alternatives:

• Examine your total asset base — equity in a house, savings, stocks, bonds, insurance cash values, and personal property. A personal balance sheet will help you assemble a list of known assets and their current value.

• Determine which of these assets are working — that is, which are keeping up with inflation and which are losing purchasing power. One good hedge against inflation is the family home. If and when the house is sold, it will likely reflect the rising prices due to inflation. Do not pay off low-cost mortgages early.

• Look closely at those assets not working or working at rates less than inflation. Those are the assets that are losing value today. Stocks were formerly considered a hedge against inflation. As prices increased, so would corporate profits, or so the thinking went.

However, as prices escalate, costs increase and profits are squeezed. Institutionalization of the stock market and companies' reliance on retained earnings for expansion appear to have removed many stocks as a viable hedge against inflation. Companies that rely heavily on assets acquired at low prices may prove better values than labor-intensive companies.

• Passbook savings, insurance cash values, and similar low-interest fixed dollar investments are "safe" only in terms of dollars. They offer little protection from erosion of buying power through inflation. An exchange of low-yield fixed dollar holdings for higher yield instruments helps to avoid part of the loss in real purchasing power.

Our federal government, business, and labor appear to share the fault in causing inflation. Unless the spiraling effects of inflation are somehow broken, we all stand to lose — and lose heavily.

The most expensive liturgy in history

Most Congressmen are by now so used to talking in terms of billions that the cost of maintaining salaried chaplains for both the Senate and House is regarded as petty cash.

Yet considering the nearly $40,000 per annum which the taxpayers are obliged to pay for these two chaplains to open sessions with two-minute prayers (or arrange for guest clergy to do so), these mini-devotions may well constitute the most expensive liturgy in all ecclesiastical history.

These two chaplains do counsel occasionally — but those Congressmen who are at all religiously inclined almost invariably have their own local pastors, or make a habit of going home to their districts every weekend.

Without question, one part-time clerk could easily recruit volunteer chaplains from the priests, ministers and rabbis who abound in the metropolitan area of Washington.

ANOTHER ANOMALY is the fact that while this legislative branch of the U.S. government has two chaplains, neither the Judicial (the Supreme Court) nor the Executive (the White House) have paid chaplains — even though Billy Graham and Norman Vincent Peale seem to be recurrent volunteers at 1600 Pennsylvania Ave.

The Congressional chaplaincies have been around since 1793. (Only a little less venerable — and more outrageous — is another Congressional institution, The Capitol Architect. The Capitol Architect need not necessarily be an architect — an absurdity which motivated one wagish Congressman to introduce a resolution that therefore the Congressional physicians need not be doctors.)

In 1793, however, James Madison had warned that the institution of such chaplaincies would violate the First Amendment prohibition of an establishment of religion. Such a prohibition would not apply regarding chaplains provided for those people isolated by the Government in armed forces, hospital or prison — for chaplains are in many denominations essential for the free exercise of religion.

But Congressmen can by no stretch of the imagination be considered isolated.

AND WHILE THE Catholic Church has for some time had the largest number of Senators of any denomination, there has been only one Catholic Senate chaplain — and never a rabbi in this post. (16 Methodists, 15 Episcopalians, 13 Presbyterians, 8 Baptists, 2 Unitarians, 1 Lutheran and 1 Congregationalist.)

This list fulfills James Madison's prediction that Congressional chaplaincies would be unfair to both Catholics and Jews.

What might well have rendered Madison apoplectic, as the principal architect of the Constitution, was a recent appearance and benediction by the Chaplain of the House of Representatives, retired Methodist minister Edward Latch.

THIS $19,000-SALARIED officer of the House appeared at a rally conducted by the so-called "National Citizens Committee for Fairness to the Presidency."

He was listed on the program by his official title and he listened while Nebraska's troglodytic Republican Senator Carl Curtis — a potential impeachment juror — announced what he concluded as President Nixon's total innocence, in advance, charging Presidential critics with "lynching."

Chaplain Latch, an officer of the same House of Representatives that is seriously considering the possible impeachment of President Nixon, blessed this event by praying for "more stars in the crown of his (Nixon's) noble endeavors."

Controversial anti-racism campaign ends fifth year

At the end of the year, the World Council of Churches controversial "Programme to Combat Racism" will have completed its five-year mandate to transform pious platitudes to action.

Ecumenical religious declarations condemning racism began in the western church as far back as 1924 with the publication of J. H. Oldham's "Christianity and the Race Problem."

But the transformation from declaration or confession to action or penance is another matter.

It was precisely to close that gap that the WCC established the Programme to Combat Racism.

IN AN ANALYSIS of the five-year history of the PCR, Elisabeth Adler, head of the Evangelical Academy in East Berlin, Germany, notes that the PCR came into being both because of a changed world — including such things as the civil rights movement in the United States and the liberation movements in southern Africa — and a changed World Council, where churches from the Third World, as the victims of racism, were becoming more influential.

Her analysis, entitled "A Small Beginning," is published by the WCC headquarters in Geneva, Switzerland.

"It was deemed imperative," Adler said of the 1969 Nottingham, London consultation which resulted in the PCR, "that they (the churches) no longer concentrate attention on improving race relations at an individual level but on striving for racial justice and a new balance of power at the level of institutions."

IT WAS PRECISELY this kind of premise that led to the PCR's most controversial component — the Special Fund, which has distributed more than $1 million to groups working for "a redistribution of power."

The most widely debated grants, both within and without the church, went to the liberation movements of southern Africa.

Of the slightly more than $1 million granted so far, some $688,000 has gone to southern Africa organizations, particularly the liberation movements in Guinea — Bissau, Angola, Mozambique, Namibia, South Africa and Zimbabwe.

"The grants to liberation movements were a small step across the line which has been drawn between charity, traditionally regarded as Christian, and solidarity, which had seldom been risked by the churches," Adler said.

The WCC and the churches had always tried to avoid becoming identified with particular political aims or groups," she added. "But they had begun to learn that seemingly neutral positions had political significance, and that they had in fact been identified with oppressive structures."

AT THE SAME TIME, however, Adler said the WCC "should be modest about the impact of its action."

The grants did, she said, give at least symbolic solidarity with the oppressed, particularly because they were given "without strings" and the WCC exercised no control on how they were spent except that they were not to be used for military purposes.

"The impact of the Programme to Combat Racism has not achieved anything by itself but in a modest way has strengthened the liberation forces and alerted the world's conscience.

"It has thus begun to correct the churches' complicity with racism and witnessed to Christ as Lord of All," she added.

IN THE United States, PCR grants have gone to such groups as Malcolm X Liberation University, Southern Election Fund, Inc., the Free Southern Theatre, the United Farm Workers and the American Indian Movement.

The PCR has perhaps had less impact in the United States than it has had elsewhere — but as church people debate both the donation of funds to the Programme and the strategies of the groups receiving grants it has served as a means of raising the ongoing problems of racism, a problem still beginning for a solution.

New programs focusing on real medical problems

NEW YORK — Television cameras are pulling back from the show business medicine of "Dr. Kildare" and "Ben Casey" and are now focusing on many real medical problems and techniques. And some of the knowledge may save your life.

In New York alone, one local station showed a live broadcast of a kidney transplant. Another is following the life of a person who received an intestinal bypass operation to see how much weight the subject will lose over a period of months. Just this Wednesday ABC aired a documentary on the inadequacies of medical care for the children of poor families.

Sunday night at 9 p.m. (CDT) "NBC News Presents: Heart Attack," an examination of the new advances in the diagnosis, prevention and treatment of heart attacks — the largest single cause of death in this country.

"You'll have to pay attention to this show," said Paul Cunningham, producer and reporter for the show. "But you'll learn a hell of a lot about having a heart attack and how to prevent it."

ACCORDING TO the statistics, 27 million persons are affected by heart disease in the United States, one million will die this year and 700,000 will have damaged hearts.

Cunningham said his research — which was done in 11 cities and 23 interviews — showed that nearly one-half of the victims died before getting to the hospital.

"A lot of people don't like to admit they are having a heart attack," said Cunningham, who doubles as the "Today" show's roving correspondent. "They think it's indigestion. At least 60,000 persons could be saved if they knew they were having an attack."

"And so time is crucial — most deaths occur in the first hours after a heart attack, perhaps as many as three quarters of them. Because heart attack often involves a disturbance of the rhythm of the heart beat — it's called arrhythmia and it can kill — many of its victims wait too long before calling for help. But arrhythmia can be corrected with drugs and emergency equipment."

CUNNINGHAM suffers from a disturbed rhythm of the heart and he takes pills to regular the beat. However, he admits he smokes too much, but he thinks hypertension — high blood pressure — will be more destructive to him.

"The three big causes of heart attacks," he said, "are smoking, high blood pressure and fatty substances in the blood, including cholesterol."

Among the many heart doctors interviewed by Cunningham were Michael DeBakey, Methodist Hospital, Houston; Richard Ross, chief of cardiology, Johns Hopkins Medical Institute, and Donald Harrison, Stanford University Medical Center.

Harrison noted that nearly half of the heart attack victims go to a doctor in the months prior to their fatal attack.

"Many of these people," Cunningham said, "complain of either depression or fatigue or restlessness or lack of sleep before their attack. But it's not the standard heart symptoms and it takes a good doctor to know and suspect the patient may soon be a candidate for an attack."

DESPITE THE high death rate from heart disease, Cunningham said there was a bright side to the story.

"The odds for preventing heart attack at an early age — and for recovery are improving. One reason is improvement in the techniques for early diagnosis and recovery."

"One of the most exciting aspects of the whole problem is the new approach to rehabilitation of heart attack victims. With proper care and gradual exercise, most of them can be back at their jobs, the damaged heart muscle having been healed."

No clear favorite seen in state 16-inch softball tourney

by MIKE KLEIN

The defending world champion Evanston Bobcats won't be around and last year's winning Buffalo Grove Bruins have undergone a major facelift that leaves them unrecognizable.

But that just makes for a more exciting and wild-o-p-o-n race in this weekend's Illinois State 16-Inch Softball Championships.

Co-sponsors for the ninth straight year are the Illinois Parks and Recreation Society plus the Des Plaines park district.

The Bobcats and their famous pitcher Eddie Zolna will be downtown on Sunday for the Kelly Park Masters Tournament.

They passed up an Evanston park district playoff, giving the powerful Strikers a free ticket into the State Championships. The Strikers were not entered last summer.

Technically, manager Bob Campbell's Buffalo Grove Bruins are the defending champs, having beaten Berwyn last year, a club that is not entered in action which begins tomorrow morning at four Des Plaines parks.

But all that's left of that Bruins team is manager and catcher Campbell plus pitcher Don Welker. The club split after last season, most players sticking under the management of Gene Freeze, not the same who played many seasons of major league baseball.

Freeze has renamed his club the Big Banjo Bruins and they'll represent the Wheaton park district although they also play in Evanston and at other sites.

Campbell's club is mostly a conglomeration of last year's Bensenville Chiefs. They've played to a 3-15 record which can only be termed disappointing. The "old" Bruins of last year ... really, Freeze's Bruins ... were 80-7.

Campbell's club won the McHenry County Tournament this summer and has fourth places in the Windy City Classic, Ivanhoe Tournament and LaCrosse, Wis. Tournament.

Big Banjo also played in the LaCrosse and Windy City events. They're 4-4 in the tough Evanston league and hold a 6-1 record in Wheaton.

It's likely the 1974 team title will rest with Freeze's Bruins, Campbell's Bruins, the Strikers or Turner's Tap of Burbank. All those clubs except Turner's have first round byes.

Turner's Tap is the old South Stickney team which won top spot two years ago and is a thorn in most everyone's record book.

Other clubs who've gained strong respect this season and could pull upsets include the Villa Park Worthington Steelers and Wilmette Flames.

Aside from the Bobcats, another missing Chicagoland powerhouse will be So-

Shearer (85), Ahern (68) both nervous in U.S. Open

by PAUL LOGAN

LA GRANGE — Getting the jitters in a major golf tournament is par for the course, especially when you're playing in your first as Paula Shearer is doing.

"Oh, nerves!" exclaimed Mrs. Shearer of her trying experience in the first round of the United States Women's Open yesterday at La Grange Country Club. Although struggling to an 85 (42-43) this resident of Mount Prospect still managed a smile.

The Herald area's only Open competitor said her main problem in this 22nd annual event was "pulling shots. Sometimes it happens under pressure." Dragging her into the much-hated 80s were a pair of double bogeys on each nine.

As an alternate to this exclusive tournament, Mrs. Shearer had to wait it out until last Monday before finding out she had made the field of 150, including 41 amateurs. On one of her two practice rounds over the testing par 72, 6,266-yard layout, she posted a one-under 35. "So I know I can do it," she said positively.

This two-time Illinois Women's State Amateur champ had played in a national tournament twice — the U.S. Amateur, but teasing it up with the greatest golfers in the world is something else again. Still, Mrs. Shearer added, "I'm going to come back tomorrow."

So will leader Kathy Ahern. Playing right behind Paula's threesome, this young professional blistered the south-west suburban turf with a four-under 68 despite light rains. It was not only her best round this season, but it tied last year's Open record for the lowest first-round score.

"I was a nervous wreck out there today," admitted Ms. Ahern, a 24-year-old who has been on the tour eight years as well as playing in a like number of U.S. Opens.

This tall, green-eyed blonde out of Fort Worth, Tex., carded 34s on both nines, just three strokes off the men's course record at LaGrange. Asked when she started feeling the pressure, Ms. Ahern said, "Around No. 8. I started thinking about my score a little bit. I haven't been in this position in a long time."

She was referring to 1972 when she led two tournaments at the end of play and totaled over $39,000 for the year. "I was playing super in '72, but somewhere over the winter I lost it."

Ms. Ahern's earnings dropped to only $15,800 last year. "I got to a point where I didn't know if I ever would pick up a club again." But she was picking 'em up and putting 'em in yesterday.

She one-putted eight greens and avoided any three-putts en route to five birdies and just one bogey, coming on the par 5, 135-yard fifth. Settling up this only blemish on her scorecard was a misfired wedge — one of only five times that she missed greens.

Ms. Aherns tied for second in the '72 Open. Asked if her opening day play was comparable to that point in time, she added, "Not yet, but I think I'm getting close."

The closest to Ms. Ahern is Donna Young, two-time U.S. Open champ, and Ms. Deborah Massey, the low amateur, with 71s. Mrs. Young survived a four-putt green on the par 3, 187-yard fourth hole for her one-under score.

"The golf course is so tough that if you let one or two holes get to you, you can shoot 85," said Mrs. Young. "I four-putted and completely ignored it. I knew I had 69 holes to play."

This Open champ of '69 and '70 bounced back with birdies on seven and 17.

Ms. Massey, 23, toured the front nine in 35 with an even par back nine. At one time she appeared to be threatening the lead, dropping three-under par after 12 holes. Then she bogeyed 15 and 17 to tie Mrs. Young for second.

Among those who fired even par rounds was Carol Mann (34-38), one of the all-time leading money winners.

Right behind at 73 are Susie Berning (34-39), U.S. Open champ the past two years; Sandra Haynie (36-37), a two-time tour winner this year; and amateur Peggy Conley (37-36).

Plenty of baseball's stars to go fishing on Tuesday

by ART MUGALLIAN
Guest Columnist

Baseball's millions of fans have again decided which players will take fishing trips next week when the 45th All-Star Game is contested at Pittsburgh's Three Rivers Stadium on Tuesday.

Some pretty good players are going to go fishing.

Since Commissioner Bowie Kuhn returned the franchise to the fans in 1970 after the players had done the voting for 13 years, there have been some complaints about the All-Star selections. And there has been some consternation over the computerized method of balloting introduced by Kuhn.

But it's hard to criticize the fans this year — they picked a couple of strong teams. They could have been stronger, but every All-Star team ever chosen could have been stronger.

No matter who chooses the All-Stars and no matter how the balloting is done, there will always be a few deserving players passed over. They can soothe their egos by telling the reporters they're going fishing. Then they actually may even go fishing.

The National League squad is an interesting one — half All-Star veterans and half newcomers. The American League team is almost entirely the same outfit that dropped last season's game, 7-1, to the National.

Bob Frisk is on vacation. His column will resume upon his return.

Baseball fans selected an impressive N.L. squad — Steve Garvey of the Dodgers at first, Joe Morgan of the Reds at second, Larry Bowa of the Phillies at short, Ron Cey of the Dodgers at third, Hank Aaron of the Braves, Jim Wynn of the Dodgers, and Pete Rose of the Reds in the outfield, and Johnny Bench of the Reds behind the plate.

Of course, in doing so, the selectors neglected some pretty able talent, including Atlanta's Ralph Garr, the league's leading hitter for most of the season; Cesar Cedeno of Houston, the league's RBI leader; and Mike Schmidt, the Phils' slugger who wasn't even on the ballot.

It seems logical that if a player is good enough, he can overcome nearly any obstacle in the All-Star voting, even his absence from the ballot. Los Angeles first sacker Garvey made it the hard way this year — he collected over a million write-in votes.

PAULA SMITH SHEARER of Mount Prospect carded a 42-43—85 yesterday in the 22nd Women's U.S. Open at the LaGrange Country Club. She'll tee off at 1:26 p.m. today in second round play on the 6,266-yard course.

Fire should have scored 50!

by MIKE KLEIN

SOLDIER FIELD, Chicago—Let's put it right upfront where the fact belongs. All those dramatics our World Football League Fire went through here Wednesday night in beating Jacksonville shouldn't have been necessary. No question about it!

They waited until nine seconds remained for rookie kicker Chuck Ramsey to finally make good on a field goal after two previous failures.

Certainly, Ramsey's 26-yard right-legged boot culminated their best offensive drive of the short season, one that began some 94 yards away with four minutes remaining and the score tied, 22-22.

Buffone on strike—P. 6

But it never should have taken that long! The Fire had enough opportunities to score 50 points! On four occasions they were inside the 25-yard line and came away with nothing!

Fumbles (one apiece by Virg Carter and Cyril Pinder) killed two drives. And Carter endured his only interception in 28 pass attempts when Alvin Wyatt, who played a great game, tore the ball out of Jack Dolbin's hands on the goal line.

On yet another occasion, Fire linebacker Rudy Kuechenberg gave Chicago field position at the Jacksonville 24 when he stole a Kay Stephenson right sideline pass and returned it 33 yards.

Out of that happiness resulted two Pinder rushes for six yards and a Carter pass incompleton before Ramsey came on to boot one wide right from 35 yards. Fzzz!

So how fortunate was head coach Jim Soavital's Fire to come away 2-0 in the WFL Central Division before road games next Wednesday in Portland and the following Sunday in Hawaii?

"The Dallas Cowboys couldn't win here tonight!" chortled former Bear defense-man Ed O'Bradovich during the fourth period when pass interference against the Sharks paved the road for Mark Keller's second pro touchdown and a tie score.

That was the celebrated fourth down play where Carter sent wide receiver Jack Dolbin busting down the left sideline. He was five yards open. And it looked like a perfect pass that went fumbling off Dolbin's fingertips in the northern endzone.

But would you believe pass interference at the four-yard line? Finally, someone had called the bump-and-run! That's one of those foxy, new WFL rules that says no bumping the intended receiver past the line of scrimmage.

You know the rest: Two plays passed before Keller lunged forward with one of those seven-point WFL touchdowns that made it a 22-22 game. Ramsey would change that later.

Chances are good the Chicago Fire would have sent home 29,308 unhappy fans if pass interference hadn't been called against Jerry Davis on Carter's attempt to Dolbin. But that wasn't the only friendly officiating and it played an important part in Chicago's victory.

Jacksonville's Wyatt, probably dealt a low blow when writers gave the defensive star award to Chicago's Kuechenberg for a second straight week, had an apparent first quarter interception near midfield. It was called back, and correctly so, because Shark linebacker Rich Thomann was clearly offside.

Later, in the second quarter with Chicago trailing 8-7, the Fire faced third down and six at Jacksonville's 11-yard line. Scrambling wildly because his pass protection crumbled, Carter hit Keller with a little rightside pass. But it lost seven yards.

No big deal, though, since pass interference was whistled at the four-yard line where Chicago inherited a new set of downs. They eventually scored when Joe Womack, Ramsey's placekicking holder, picked up a bouncing ball, ran right and gave the Fire a 15-8 lead.

That's the kind of night the Fire had. As Spavital said on Thursday at his Maryville Academy press conference, "We got our share of the breaks." He said it with a smile.

23 yearlings will go up for auction at Arlington Park

Going once... going twice... Sold!

Congratulations, you are now the proud owner of an Illinois-bred yearling.

The controlled stammer of an auctioneer will follow from the paddock area at Arlington Park Race Track Friday Aug. 16, in a miniature version of the much-publicized Keeneland Yearling Sales in Kentucky.

The Illinois Thoroughbred Breeders and Owners Foundation (ITBOF) will stage a public auction of 23 one-year-olds beginning at 7:30 p.m. in another attempt to promote breeding enthusiasm in our state.

The unique thoroughbred activity, the first in the state in some 10 years, will showcase 11 fillies, eight colts and a gelding to prospective buyers in sales guaranteed to consummate thousands of dollars.

The event will be conducted by the Fasig-Tipton Sales Company of Kentucky — experts in the market — which last year handled sales nationwide and sold over $50 million worth of horsehide.

Headlining the attraction are two youngsters by stakes ace T.V. Lark, the nation's second-leading sire in both 1972 and 1973.

T.V. Lark, whose offspring won purses totalling almost $1.5 million on North American tracks in 1973 alone, was runner-up by only $1,102 to the great Bold Ruler in the leading sire derby.

And all Bold Ruler had on his list of credits was incomparable Triple Crown-winning Secretariat.

During his career on the track, T.V. Lark earned just short of one million dollars. Understandably, his stud fee commanded $20,000 — one of the highest in the world.

Up for sale on the evening of Aug. 16 will be a T.V. Lark-Mr. Marion colt, consigned by Rogers Red Top Farm and a T.V. Lark-Call Anytime filly, the property of Windward Farm.

"We're pretty excited about the auction," John McEvoy, a columnist for the Daily Racing Form and publicist for the event, admitted.

This organization (ITBOF) has really made strides to promote Illinois breeding and I'm sure they're hoping to make it an annual event. We've been without a public auction for too long."

James McHugh's Windward Farm is the largest consignor to the sale with six head. In addition to the T.V. Lark filly, Windward will also sell a colt by Diplomat Way and fillies by Fleet Nasrullah (two), Mr. Pow Wow and Bold Commander both command $5,000 stud fees.

Other noted stallions represented in the sale are Hall to All, Amber Morn, Monitor, Royal Union, Duel, Jaipurville, Distillate, Tudor Grey, Troy Our Boy, Poppy Jay, Great Depths and Blazing County.

Richard L. Duchossois' Hill 'n Dale Farm will sell three youngsters as will both M. E. Dickey and Nick Cutler. Rogers Red Top offers a pair while consignor with one youngster each are Earle Rosen, Marion Partlow, Richard L. Gough, Dr. J. R. McVicker, Russell Whitworth and the partnership of C.R. Cochonour and Dr. R. Kirkwood.

Upon entering the Arlington Park paddock area, you will be issued a catalog containing the complete pedigree for each yearling. Interested parties will already have inspected the horses in the sale barn in the annex at the race track, asked questions and taken a close look at the basic conformation — how they stand, hocks, hindquarters, chest — to see how they're developing. The most important aspect, though, is the yearling's breeding.

The auctioneer will ask for the yearling to be brought into the ring and for the bidding to begin — usually at a predetermined minimum such as $500.

Ideally, the auctioneer will ask for $500 increments in the verbal battle, but it doesn't always work that way. Last year, at Keeneland, for example, the most expensive yearling ever sold was a son of Bold Ruler. In this instance, the opening bid was $500,000! The colt was eventually sold for $600,000.

The buyers are coy. The veterans need only flinch or commit the slightest gesture to confirm that they'll accept the offer by the auctioneer.

This isn't the place to be if you have a nervous twitch or a prolonged yawning attack.

The consignors will go through great pains to ready the animals for the demanding eye of the veteran buyers as well as the curious reaction of the public.

Edward H. Pfeiffer, President of the ITBOF, explains, "This is a pretty critical time for these horses and you have to be extremely careful."

"They have to be diligently handled and groomed everyday and let out in the mornings for only an hour or so. This is to prevent them from getting sunburned."

"By September, these horses will be put in light training. Then they'll gallop about two miles a day until their muscles have progressed."

"After that, we'll get some slow workouts into them and check them out of the startinggate. It's difficult to say how long this practice generally takes. It all depends on the individual horse."

All of the yearlings will be eligible to race Jan. 1 when they become 2-year-olds. Each thoroughbred celebrates his birthday on Jan. 1 regardless of when he was foaled.

If you're planning on bringing your checkbook to the auction, be prepared to sign your name more than once.

After buying a horse, it will run you 7-8 dollars a day just to board it. Once the horse goes into training on a farm, it runs 10-11 dollars a day.

If you get him to the racetrack, the price per 24 hours doubles and even that's just to house it.

But after it wins the Kentucky Derby, your financial picture should clear considerably.

Plenty of baseball's big stars to go fishing on Tues.

But the biggest obstacle for a lot of players is a name that doesn't command immediate recognition. Unless a player is leading the league in an individual category, some fans may not even know who he is, much less vote for him.

The choice of Aaron is a popular one. With his name recognition, he was a shoe-in. No one would begrudge Hammerin' Hank's 15th appearance as an All-Star starter, but, on the basis of this year's performance, Aaron is stealing an All-Star spot from Garr, Cedeno, Bill Buckner, Greg Gross, Reggie Smith, Jose Cardenal, or any number of other deserving N.L. outfielders.

Still, manager Yogi Berra will have a formidable lineup for the All-Star battle, which currently favors the N.L. 25-18, in victories, with one tie. Aaron, Morgan, Bench, and Rose are All-Star vets who have contributed heavily to their league's recent dominance in this classic game. The senior circuit has won 10 of the last 11.

Garvey, Cey, Bowa, and Wynn are all making their first All-Star starts. Of the four, only Wynn has appeared in the midsummer game before. Bench, Morgan, Rose and Aaron were all in the starting lineup last year at Kansas City. Bench is making his sixth straight All-Star start.

The American League team is headed up by first baseman Dick Allen of the White Sox, the majors' leading home run hitter, and second sacker Rod Carew of Minnesota, who owns the top batting average in baseball.

Reggie Jackson of Oakland, the top vote-getter from both leagues, anchors the A.L. outfield, along with Texas' Jeff Burroughs, the league's RBI leader, and the Yankees' Bobby Murcer.

The A.L. team is rounded out by third baseman Brooks Robinson of Baltimore, shortstop Bert Campaneris of Oakland, and catcher Carlton Fisk of Boston. This year's team, as a matter of fact, looks an awful lot like last year's squad. Only Burroughs is a nonrepeater: last year Amos Otis started in the outfield. And Fisk is out with an injury. He will be replaced by the Yanks' Thurman Munson.

Carew is getting to be a regular choice. This is his eighth straight election to the A.L. starting team since he broke into the majors in 1967.

The fans made only one poor choice in the A.L. Even the selection of Robinson for the 10th time as a starter is justified.

Ron Cey

The Oriole third baseman is having one of his best years at the plate.

But Murcer benefitted unfairly from his name, his previous All-Star status, and the huge electorate in the New York area. Several A.L. outfielders merited a spot on the team ahead of Murcer, who is having an off-year. Among the wronged players are Chicago's Ken Henderson, Cleveland's George Hendrick, Minnesota's Tony Oliva, and Oakland's unsung Joe Rudi. Even the injured Willie Horton of Detroit deserved more votes than Murcer.

Several other A.L. players were neglected, including Ed Herrmann of the Sox, John Mayberry and Cookie Rojas of the Royals, Sal Bando of the A's, Bobby Grich of the Orioles, and Texas Ranger rookie Mike Hargrove.

But they can't all be All-Stars. Manager Dick Williams of the American League will have to settle for what he was given, plus the handful of pitchers and reserves he decides to choose.

The game is set for Tuesday evening in Pittsburgh, the third time the Classic has been played in the Steel City. The National League won, 7-1 in 1944, and they repeated, 5-4 in 1959. Both games were played at old Forbes Field.

If Gaylord Perry of the Indians starts against Andy Messersmith of the Dodgers, not too many people would complain. It would be an interesting confrontation — both have been All-Stars in the other league.

Rod Carew

But if Berra and Williams elected to start, say, Mike Marshall of Los Angeles and John Hiller of Detroit — two relievers with excellent credentials — no one could gripe.

Legion all-stars to face champs on July 30

The Ninth District American Legion All-Star baseball game will be played Tuesday, July 30, it was announced today. District chairman Gene Sackett made the announcement amid rumors that the game, originally scheduled for last Sunday, would not be played at all. Rain forced postponement of the contest last week.

It was also decided not to play the game this Sunday, since the legion schedule is nearing completion and the extra day may be needed for make-up games.

The Ninth District tourney will begin Tuesday with first round opponents to be determined by the final league standings. The winner of the tourney will face the All-Stars on July 30.

Pullout expert

Since a catcher gets credit for a putout on a strikeout, it is not surprising that the Dodgers' Johnny Roseboro holds the major-league record for most career putouts of any player in history. Roseboro caught Sandy Koufax and Don Drysdale during their record-setting strikeout days.

Grenadier runners try for 24-hour relay record

It will just be a quiet get-together Saturday morning when 10 Elk Grove runners meet with their coach, Dick Saylor, and begin running around the track behind Elk Grove High School. But they won't stop for 24 hours.

The 24-hour relay will start at 8 a.m. and continue until 8 a.m. Sunday, with each runner jogging a mile and passing the baton to the next boy. The running will continue nonstop for 24 hours.

Inspired by Runner's World magazine, the Elk Grove runners will be pushing for the 10-man relay performance record of just over 295 miles in a 24-hour period set by a group in Washington state calling itself the Olympic Training Camp.

But that mark may not be approachable. "An ideal distance is 240 miles," said Saylor, who is involved with the Elk Grove High School cross country team. "That's 24 six-minute miles for each runner." Saylor pointed out that the high school record for such an event is 270 miles.

"We just want to get some people out there and see how well we can do," he said. "Then we'll send in our results for ranking."

Saylor isn't sure which 10 boys will run in the relay and he may not make that decision until the last minute. But he'll be choosing from a large group of dedicated athletes: Mark Wolfard, John Fabbri, Steve Moyer, Howard Emory, Mark Dambrowski, Joe Cullen, Randy Humbert, Brian Leland, Rick Santowski, Tim Gianaris, R. L. Kehoe, and Mark Arnold.

THEY GOT ONE but that's all they're going to get. Wheeling shortstop Carl Pfister fires to first after taking Ron Henrick's toss to force the sliding Greg Pfaff of Mount Prospect at second base. Pfaff was out on Mike Quade's first-inning grounder, but Quade beat Pfister's hurried relay to George Kaage at first base. Quade eventually scored Mount Prospect's first run as they defeated Wheeling, 5-1, Wednesday in American Legion action. (Photo by Don Najolia)

Mt. Prospect pulls upset; idle Arlington takes 1st

Home runs by Neil Schmidt and Buddy Hughes helped the Mount Prospect American Legion team to its first victory since July 9, as they topped Wheeling, 5-1 Wednesday.

Hughes, with a double and homer, was one of the slugging stars, but it was the big righthander's fastballs and curves that stopped the Wheeling batters cold. Hughes rediscovered his effectiveness, which had been missing lately, by fanning eight and walking just one. He surrendered just three hits.

The loss for Wheeling was the second in a row for Gerry Grybash's squad and it bumped them out of first place in the Ninth District, a half-game behind Arlington Heights. It was the second time in two days Wheeling had been victimized by a route-going three-hitter. Arlington's Paul Kastner had stymied them the evening before.

For Merv Fink's Mount Prospect team, the win was a satisfying one. Not only did it even their District record at 3-3, but it also marked their first victory over Wheeling in three tries.

Fink's boys got an unearned run off Wheeling starter Jeff Hanisch in the first inning. Rich Haanling slammed a single to right field driving in Mike Quade from third after an error by Hanisch kept the inning alive.

Hughes hammered his home run with two out and nobody on base in the top of the second. The shot was a towering fly ball that cleared the fence in left with plenty to spare, but it was fair by just inches.

Hughes and Hanisch were locked up in a tight pitcher's duel until the sixth when Schmidt lined a homer over the fence in left with two men aboard. Ken Butzen walked and Don Stevens singled in front of Schmidt's roundtripper.

Hughes was sharp at the finish. He allowed just one hit through the last four innings, a ground smash by George Kaage that got past Haanling at first. The hit drove in Bob Burke who had been safe on an error. The unearned run was all Wheeling could manage off Hughes who fanned the final two batters to end the game.

LIONS SPLIT

The Logan Square Lions split against Park Ridge, winning a one-inning continuation of a game begun June 25 before losing in seven innings at St. Victor.

In both cases, the Park Ridge pitcher of record was Dave Patterson. He inherited a 6-6 tie entering the eighth inning of the continuation.

That didn't last long. All-Star catcher

Dave Mnichowicz reached on an error for the Lions. Doubles by Steve Bobowski and winning pitcher Kevin Kelley brought across the runs.

This game had been started at Maine South High School, Park Ridge's home field, so the losers got last raps. Kelley faced four batters before retiring the side.

The two clubs traded three-run homers in the nightcap. Logan Square reverting to home team status. Mnichowicz homered in the first for a 3-1 lead. Scoring ahead of him were Jim Dumke and Mark Hartley.

Park Ridge opened with a run in the first off losing pitcher Gary Gustafson. Dan Lowy and Ron Parker crashed doubles that gave Park Ridge a 1-0 lead, soon eliminated on the Mnichowicz circuit blow.

Park Ridge tallied once in the second off Gustafson, then went ahead for good on Tommy Comyn's three-run homer in the third. Two walks preceded the blow by Comyn, a member of the All-Star team.

Logan Square's final run scored in the home third on Pat Rooney's single, cutting the margin to 5-4.

Gustafson allowed Park Ridge's sixth run in the fourth. He was replaced on the mound by Dumke who was touched for Jim Lyon's fifth inning homer, the game's final run.

Readers 'Fire-d' up about new team

Fans Forum:
The Chicago Fire will be laughing all the way to the bank now that they've begun their first season on the right foot. Everybody figured they would make fun of the Fire — their name, their players, everything. But after a successful debut, the critics will have to eat their words.

The attendance figures from around the World Football League proved that the new circuit can make it big in the dog-eat-dog competition of organized sports. And the games showed that the new league can compete on the field, too.

Make room for the WFL and the Chicago Fires!

Fred Parente
Des Plaines
FIRE FIZZLES, HE SAYS
Dear editor:
Frankly, the Fire debut was a bust. Sure they managed to get 32,000 suckers out to Soldier Field (and tried to make us believe it was 42,000) but you could get that many idiots to watch a sewing bee if you promoted it right. The point is, the game was dull. It was just another football game like all the rest. I thought the WFL was going to present a new brand of football. Instead we had two five-yard TD passes and a bunch of bouncing punts. Big deal.

Bud Byers
Arlington Heights
ANOTHER ALL-STAR GRIPE
Dear Fans Forum:

I agree with the reader who wrote to Fans Forum last week to complain about the selection of the baseball all-star teams. Once again the fans have chosen a ridiculous team, thanks to their ignorance and prejudices.

The only really intelligent pick they made was the write-in choice of Steve Garvey. How could Hank Aaron and Bobby Murcer be selected? Give the vote back to the players!

Alvin Moor

WHAT ABOUT HENDERSON?

Dear Fans Forum:
I was 15 years old when the Chicago White Sox won their last American League pennant in 1959. And I really dug

Fan's forum

Jimmy Landis. He wasn't much with a bat, but neither was I, so I really liked the way he caught the balls.

Then Landis left and after some time, the Sox came up with Ken Barry. Heck, he looked even better than Landis! A little better hitter, too.

So they finally sent Berry packing and last year in comes Ken Henderson. He got hurt right away so we really didn't get a look.

But this year... Wow! His defense is great and aggressive and he's a much better hitter than the other two. This guy's already got over 50 runs-batted-in and 11 homers.

So my question is this: How in hell did American League fans pretend he doesn't even exist in All-Star balloting?

Fred Schraake

NORWOOD SHOULD BE OUT

Dear editor:
Maybe I'm a little old-fashioned or something, but it seems to me that if Norwood Park is going to be a member of the Ninth District American Legion baseball league, they ought to play their games. And if the District is going to have Norwood Park for competition they ought to at least make sure that Norwood Park shows up for games.

I understand the problems of getting a team out here to the suburbs from Chicago and I understand the problems of fielding a decent team, and I understand the problems of trying to run a league of American Legion baseball teams. But what I don't understand is why the District puts up with it.

No clear favorite seen in state softball tournament

Bees, also entered at Kelly Park.

Forty-nine softball clubs, nine more than last year and a record number of entrants, are vying for the rights to Sunday's 2:30 p.m. championship game at Rand Park.

Among those clubs are seven local teams, including the Buffalo Grove Bruins. Bill's Inn Spoilers, representing Arlington Heights, have an 8-0 record in that league. They're 7-1 in Barrington and placed fourth with a 3-2 mark in the Dundee Tournament.

The Palatine-based Crispy Critters are 22-10 overall and 9-2 in their hometown league. They've played to 6-3 success in Arlington and are 7-5 in Schaumburg.

Wheeling will be represented by Champagne John's, an 11-1 team which placed second this summer in the Trevor, Wis. Dug Out Inn Tournament.

Hast Des Plaines has entered Romano's Squirrels, 17-3 overall with a victory in the 32-team Elmhurst Open. The Squirrels were consolation bracket winners in the Dundee Tournament.

Mount Prospect's Ye Old Towne Inn carries a 14-1 mark which includes a 9-0 slate in an Arlington Heights league. The Castaways of Elk Grove are 11-1, the only loss to Inland Lithograph. Also entered from Schaumburg is the Airport Lounge.

Most games will be played at spacious Rand Park, located on Miner Street just east of the Northwest Highway and Rand Road intersection.

Other sites include West Park, south of Golf Road on Wolf; South Park, the corner of White and Howard streets south of Oakton; and Blackhawk Park, west of Cumberland on Golf.

Pro-Am openings available for charity golf tournament

It's the chance to play with a touring professional golfer.

It's the chance to win five fabulous door prizes of $100,000 each of Skill Green Stamps.

It's the chance to win other fine awards.

And, most importantly, it's the chance to have fun while helping children.

It's the 1974 Child & Family Classic — a Pro-Am Tournament at Wood Dale's Dominion Golf and Country Club this Monday.

The one-day affair will benefit the Child and Family Services of Chicago, a 116-year-old charity that provides foster care, adoption and homemaker services for children throughout the Chicago metropolitan area.

This Pro-Am will be held the day after the prestigious United States Open for women, being put on by LaGrange Country Club. The tourney will bring the top names on the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour to Chicagoland.

Some of the women who have entered the Pro-Am Tournament are leading money winner Joanne Carner, two-time U.S. Open champ Donna Caponi Young and LPGA veterans Patty Berg, Marilyn Smith and Jackie Pung.

The amateur field has not been completely filled. Those wishing to join in the fun (the cost is fully tax deductible) should contact Dana Johnson at 427-8790.

Schaumburg plans late registration

Late registration for Schaumburg boys football will be held Saturday from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the S.A.A. House on Sharon Lane in Schaumburg.

Option clause remains key issue

Buffone sees possible end to NFL strike

by MIKE KLEIN
SOLDIER FIELD, Chicago — That largely unpopular three-week-old strike by National Football League players which has gutted the College All-Star game and created discontent among fans, could be approaching an end.

That's the opinion of Chicago Bear veteran linebacker Doug Buffone who sat in on a freebie pass at Wednesday night's World Football League win here by the Chicago Fire over Jacksonville.

"Both sides are ready to sit down and seriously talk," said Buffone. Previous player-owner talks around the so-called "freedom issues" have resulted in heated arguments and standoffs.

"Any kind of negotiation requires compromise," Buffone allowed. "They've got to come up with a solution that'll help both sides."

"We don't have that much time left. I'm sure the players want a season and so do the owners. We're going to try to settle this as fast as we can."

The NFL Players Association, behind

union President Bill Curry of the Houston Oilers, this week conceded it is willing to take all but the "freedom issues" before binding arbitration. Talks officiated by federal mediators have resulted in very little progress on the association's 63 demands.

Most of those can be entirely forgotten. It's the NFL option clause, which binds a player to his club one season past contract expiration, plus commissioner Pete Rozelle's unquestioned compensation power that have the players most upset.

"Those are the big issues," conceded Buffone who has not joined any picket line at NFL training camps largely populated by rookies, free agents and guys named Cole Slaw.

"The other stuff has been rounded up. The newspapers are saying we don't want 11 p.m. curfews. I don't care about that. I'm pretty sure most other guys don't either. Where the pension plan has come up, we'll get the money."

Under their current set-up, no NFL player may switch teams without A) Playing out an option year, usually at 90 per cent his previous season's salary; and B) Having any subsequent deal approved by Rozelle.

The powerful NFL czar has sole power to determine player or money compensation between the teams involved. That specific point galls the Players Association to no end.

Curry insists the players want no option clause. They probably won't get that concession. But his side refuses to believe the game's richest owners will garner all the best players and destroy the competitive edge.

"You can start 22 great ballplayers but I don't know too many others who'll be content to sit on a bench," Buffone said.

Buffone indicated the Players Association would accept an option clause, perhaps including an extra season, if Rozelle's power to make compensation is eliminated.

"To tell you the truth, I don't believe anybody's free," Buffone said. "Everybody works for somebody down the line. An employer has the right to fire anyone, but right now, I don't have the right to go anywhere. I'd like to have that choice."

Buffone agreed the present situation is bad, especially since fans have become alienated, but added, "You're only as strong as your union so that's what I've got to go with."

Orbin's no-hitter paces Fremd past Crystal Lake

Scott Orbin of Fremd tossed a no-hitter against visiting Crystal Lake in summer league action Wednesday as the Vikings blanked the Tigers, 2-0.

Orbin, a tall righthander who will enter his senior year at Fremd in September, fanned six and walked three opposing batters in his first start of the season. He faced just 23 hitters in seven innings, two over the minimum, as a pair of Vikings double plays helped him out of minor jams. Fremd made one error.

Fremd scored its first run in the fourth when the Crystal Lake catcher made a wild throw on a pickoff attempt at third base. The Vikings talked again in the sixth on a single by Bill Bullard, a stolen base, and two wild pitches.

Hoffman Estates got a shutout performance from Jimmy Moore as the Hawks clipped Prospect, 6-0. Mark Mueller, with a double and a two-run homer, and Joe Parille were the hitting stars for Hoffman, along with Moore, who contributed a two-run single.

Moore allowed the visiting Knights just three base hits, but he was plagued by wildness, walking three in the first two innings. Clutch pitching got him out of early trouble. Moore went on to strike out eight Prospect batters.

Rolling Meadows extended its summer league mark to 14-4 with a 7-0 win over Forest View as John Igrasek and Tom Gallagher combined for a two-hit shutout.

The visiting Mustangs got two runs in each of the first three innings and one more in the fourth to coast to the victory. Scott Green blasted a key RBI triple and Guy Tenuta ripped a two-run double as Meadows piled up a lead. Other hitting stars for the Mustangs were Ray Peterson and Mike Bramlett.

Arlington's Kendall Larsen struck out 13 and allowed only three hits for an 8-0 victory over visiting Elk Grove.

Larsen also homered — the first such blast by a Cardinal player this summer.

Hammering two hits each were Jim Vogts, Don Stebbins and Kevin O'Brien. Hersey stranded two runners in scoring position in the bottom of the seventh inning and absorbed a tough 6-5 loss at the hands of Dundee.

After spotting the victors a 2-0 edge, the Huskies rallied for three runs in the fourth and one more in the fifth to forge a 4-2 cushion on the two hits by Mark Knutzel (triple and single) and Don Blanchi (double and single).

But Dundee pushed four across in the top of the seventh to take 6-4 command. Hersey got one of the runs back in the last frame, but left the tying and winning runs on base.

It seems every area summer league team that runs into Barrington lately has a sad story to tell and Palatine was no different Wednesday as the Pirates fell hard, 10-4.

Roy Hughes took the loss for the Pirates, giving up a cluster of extra base hits as Barrington collected 12 hits for the game.

The loss dropped the Pirates' season record to 4-10.

The Conant Cougars trimmed the Fenton Bisons 6-5 Wednesday night in summer league action. Mark Forrest took the loss.

Conant has games upcoming against Palatine at home Thursday and at Wheeling Friday.

...Baseball coaches' new strategy

Rejuvenating America's pastime...

by MURRAY OLDERMAN

OAKLAND — Baseball, although the players still wear knickerbockers, is not the same game it was when a hot dog cost only a dime.

For that you can take the word of such disparate seers as Ralph Houk and Alvin Dark, who do remember when it cost a dime.

Baseball has often been accused in recent years of hardening of the arteries and Bill Veeck and Charlie Finley, among others, have tried to jazz it up with beer gardens and orange baseballs and rainbow-hued uniforms. But those are accountants.

The basic product remains unchanged, in Finley's words, since 1900 until the designated hitter (one of his ideas, too) was put in last year.

However, to managers such as Houk of the Detroit Tigers and Dark of the Oakland Athletics, it's an entirely different ball game on the strategic front, too.

Baseball has gone through cyclical periods of stress. There was the old "dead ball" era when teams emphasized fitness and played for one run and pitchers like Iron Man Joe McGinnity could work both sides of a doubleheader. Then the Babe Ruth period look over, and the Bronx Bombers of Yankee Stadium showed that with this new lively ball and a lot of brawn, it was more profitable to play for a big inning and forget about such niceties as the bunt, the stolen base and the run-and-hit.

In a sense, that has remained, but a change was forced again when pitching began to dominate the game because managers discovered that using a hard-throwing young slinger in relief could effectively stymie big bats. Multiple pitchers in one game has become the vogue.

And so has a more scientific approach to the game. Baseball hasn't gone as far as its football brethren in computerizing the game, but there is today a far greater emphasis on paper work.

In his cubicle in the Oakland Coliseum, Alvin Dark sits with a three-ring binder before a game with the Detroit Tigers and it's opened to a page labeled "Mickey Stanley" — and on that page, charted to look like a baseball diamond, there is a series of different colored lines shooting out from home plate. This is a complete dossier on where Stanley has hit the ball, and on what count, in previous appearances against the Athletics.

Over in the Tiger dugout facing the actual field, Houk is explaining, "The clubs now spend more time setting up defenses. Used to be when you were getting ready for a team, you'd discuss their hitters and this guy would be a pull hitter or this guy would be straightaway and that's the way you'd play."

"Now with charts, we set up the defenses according to the pitcher. We'll spot a fielder differently against certain batters if Joe Coleman is pitching than if Lerrin LaGrew is pitching because we know from the charts where the man is likely to hit the ball and off what kind of pitch."

"When I was with the Yankees and we had Mel Stottlemyre on the mound, and he had faced a guy like Reggie Jackson 200 times, we knew where he was likely to hit the ball. Jackson never beat us in a certain area because we'd move a man over. Some guys you know will never hit the ball over the bag but will beat you through the hole, so you move the third baseman over."

And who keeps the charts?

The pitchers, on the day before they're due to work. They chart every pitch and every ball hit.

"The biggest change in baseball," continues Houk, "is relief pitching. In the old days, the older pitchers became relief specialists. Now you train them as kids, even develop them in the minors. And you have certain guys who you'll pitch to right hand batters and certain guys for left hand batters."

This jibes with Dark's theories on using every man on his roster.

"When I was playing," says the old shortstop, "you expected to play every inning of 154 ball games. Now I try to use all 25 men. There's more managing involved today. And I'm more conscious of having all the ball club ready to play. When the score's 12-2, I start getting them in there in the fifth inning. Starting and finishing a game isn't important now."

Only winning. That hasn't changed. (Newspaper Enterprise Assn.)

Sports shorts

National Rifle shoot-off

Robert Schuele of Hoffman Estates, a shotgun specialist, is attending the 14th United States International Shooting Championships in Chardon, Ohio. The eliminations are sponsored by the National Rifle Association.

Winners will qualify for the United States team that competes in the 41st World Shooting Championships scheduled for September in Switzerland.

Drew wins certificate

Richard B. Drew of Palatine came Closest-to-the-Plin as Channel 2 television filmed golfers at the 17th hole of Pipe O'Peace Golf Club in Riverdale on Sunday, June 30.

Drew's tee shot on the par three, 150-yard hole came to rest 17 feet, three inches from the pin. He will receive a $25 gift certificate from the club's pro shop.

A trip to Scotland?

Joseph McLaughlin and Mark Franklin, both of Mount Prospect, are eligible to win $1,000 and a free trip to Scotland by virtue of scoring holes-in-one.

Franklin's ace was recorded at the Countryside Golf Club while McLaughlin dropped a one-shot at the Antioch Country Club.

Both golfers were entered in the Rusty Nail Hole-in-One Sweepstakes sponsored by the Drambuie Company of Edinburgh, Scotland. The winner of the 13th annual competition will be announced early next year.

Women's softball tourney

The Chicagoland Ms. Invitational Softball Championships, to be played on Aug. 4 and 11 at Hlawatha Park in Chicago, will seek to determine the best women's 14-inch softball team in the Chicago area.

Any team currently entered in a softball tournament or league is eligible to enter and the field will be screened, permitting the top 16 teams to compete in the two-day, double elimination tournament.

First, second and third place trophies will be awarded for the $70 entry fee. For further information regarding rules or entry, contact Gloria Kolbusz no later than Saturday of this week at 625-4770.

From campuses nationwide

John Mitvick of Schaumburg has been awarded a four-year baseball scholarship to Brigham Young University in Provo, Utah.

Little City Pro-Am golf

Chicagoland businessmen and Illinois PGA members will swing their golf clubs in behalf of mentally retarded children at Little City's 11th annual Pro-Am Invitational Golf tournament, Monday, Aug. 5, at Hillcrest Country Club in Long Grove.

Little City's Pro-Am is one of the few charity tourneys which has been sanctioned by the IPGA and has raised over $275,000 to date for the mentally retarded children treated in Palatine.

Little City celebrates its 15th anniversary this fall.

Cuties in Thillens!

A nine-man comedy softball team dubbed "The California Cuties" will appear on the evenings of Aug. 5, 6 and 7 at Thillens Stadium, Devon and Kedzie Avenues, in Chicago.

"The Cuties" have been barnstorming over 25 years. To add insult to usual defeat, they face their opponent dressed in complete women's apparel.

Further information can be obtained by calling Thillens Stadium at 743-5140.

Hockey... already!

The first Buffalo Grove hockey team will take to the ice on Oct. 19. All boys who will be attending Buffalo Grove High School and want to try out are asked to call Earl Newton at 537-5246.

Jacobsen in state amateur

Tom Jacobsen of Schaumburg has been exempted from qualifications today and Monday for the Illinois State Amateur Golf Championship that will be contested Aug. 6-8 in Urbana.

Jacobsen is exempt by virtue of his 149 score in last year's state amateur.

Nine area golfers will compete in Monday's 18-hole qualification round at Plum Tree National golf club in Harvard. Eight-nine spots will be filled from qualifications. There are 31 exempt players for a 120-man field.

Those trying to make the cut include John McBride of Arlington Heights, James Marko of Hoffman Estates, Art Hagg of Arlington Heights, Steve Ciseo of Palatine, Rick Silverman of Des Plaines, Ron Swanson of Arlington Heights, David Nelson of Mount Prospect, Leonard Flocco of Palatine and Brad Stake of Arlington Heights.

Qualifications for players from the southern half of the state are being held today at Lincolnshire Fields country club in Champaign.

Route to U.S. Women's Open

All roads lead to the 22nd United States Women's Open Championship at LaGrange Country Club this week.

Golf fans from the Herald area are just 40 minutes away from the stately club which is celebrating its 75th anniversary this year with the first Women's Open ever staged in Chicagoland. To watch the greats of the women's tour, all area fans need do is head south on the Tri-State Tollway, exiting on Ogden Avenue. Head east on Ogden, turning right on Brainard Avenue.

If you can't find on street parking, park at either of the two Lyons Township High Schools for only $1. Continuous shuttle service will be offered from both sites, but the parking won't be available until after 12:30 p.m. on Thursday and Friday at these school lots.

Practice rounds are being held through Wednesday with daily ground tickets costing $3. Regular grounds tickets for the official tournament days — Thursday through Sunday — are $5.

Tickets are on sale at the gates of the LaGrange Country Club, one block south of 47th Street on Brainard Avenue in LaGrange.

Shelby Lyman on chess

Defensive play often overlooked

There is a dimension of chess whose existence only gradually impinges on the consciousness of the developing player. The art of defense is often the last skill to be appreciated and developed. Perhaps, this is because virtuosity in defense presents the greatest problems in precision and morale. For the young player, bravado in attack precedes patience in warding off the attack.

Yet there are some defensive techniques that are immediately part of every player's repertoire. An attack on a piece almost inevitably provokes a basic defensive response: protect the piece or move it. Only on singular occasions can a piece not be saved in that manner.

It was therefore with great ingenuity that the 22-year-old Brazilian, Eugene Mecking, played a subtle combination against the Russian ace Korchnoi and reached the following position. One would Diagram 1 Think that Mecking has simply miscalculated. Korchnoi's bishop is attacking both white's rook and knight, which though defended once by white's bishop is threatened a second time by the black rook. Mecking is a pawn ahead. But how is he to extricate himself from losing much more?

An at least partial respite is not too hard to find. Mecking can apparently cut his losses by playing 1. R-R2, which threatens 2. R-R8 check mate, though black, it seems, can still win material by 1... R-R2 (which provides an escape square for the king). (See Diagram 2). Now if Mecking plays 2. B-R2, Korchnoi will answer Diagram 2 2... B-R2. With a bishop and knight for a rook and a pawn, Korchnoi will have a slight material advantage.

But Mecking, who has chosen an active "defense" for himself, has foreseen some curious defensive problems for black. He did not in fact play B-R2 after R-R2. Instead he played 2. R-R3!, a move that will leave white a pawn ahead and justify his preceding play. For the attacked bishop cannot be defended, and the normal response of flight leaves the black rook undefended.

Though this was Mecking's only win in his 3-1 match loss to Korchnoi, the caliber of play shown in this game speaks of his potential world championship stature.

Diagram 3 Our last position, a hypothetical situation from a Karpov-Hort game, is another example of a strange lack of defensive responses. Why could Hort (black) have not afforded to reach this position, as he would have by playing B(K3)x BP?

The answer is too simple. White would have played 2. R-QB1, winning a piece. Again there is no direct defense of the attacked piece. And if it should move away, a curious pin materializes. Black will lose a rook after 3. Q-R1 (Hort actually played N-B4, instead of BxBP.)

It is apparent that while defensive possibilities may never be underestimated, they also may never be taken for granted.

Hand deep-sixes the experts

If, you think that experts don't get into trouble, look at this hand from the finals of the Bermuda Bowl won again by Italy.

When the runnerup Americans sat North and South the bidding went as shown in the box.

The spade lead was won in dummy and the 10 of clubs led for a deep-sea finesse. West took the trick with his Jack and led a second spade. South won; entered dummy with the ace of hearts and tried a second club finesse. West won and ran spades. East discarded all his hearts and one diamond and the last spade squeezed South. He couldn't keep the high heart and a diamond stopper and was down six tricks.

Strangely enough, North America showed a profit on the hand. At the other table South elected to overcall with two clubs. Eric Murray decided to create excitement and jumped to four spades. Had North doubled, Eric would have been set two tricks, but North bid five clubs. When this got back to Eric he doubled and opened his singleton diamond. Sammy Kehela sitting East took three diamonds and led a fourth. Eric overruled South's nine with the Jack. Later on South tried a club finesse and Eric made his unguarded king to set the hand three tricks doubled.

Backgammon

Rolls of the dice bear off your men

by OSWALD and JAMES JACOBY
(Fifth of a Series)

After all your men are in your inner table, you bear them off according to the dice you throw. With a 6-4, for example, you can remove one man from the 6-point and one from the 4-point. If you roll a double, you take each number twice. Thus a 3-3 would allow you to take four men off the 3-point.

If you have a high number to play, but no man on that point, you must take a man off the highest point on which you do have men. Thus, if all your men are on the four, three, two and one points and you have a 6 to play, one man would come off the 4-point. However, note that you are not required to play your highest number first.

Thus, notice the diagrammed position. White to play 6-1. As long as White legally completes his move, it does not matter in which order he takes his numbers. In this instance, should White use his 6 to bear off the man from his 5-point, he would be forced to play his 1 from either the 4- or 3-point and thereby leave a blot which Black might hit. His best strategic play is to use the 1 move from his 5-point to his 4-point. Now the 6 is used to bear that man off from the 4-point without exposing a blot.

'Fly me to the moon'—just a melody of past

by BRUCE E. HICKS
HOUSTON (UPI) — After a decade in the public limelight, the furious activity has slowed.

Man's dramatic moon adventure, culminating in the first lunar landing five years ago this week, has turned into routine business, and the men who overcame formidable obstacles have rechanneled their talents.

It took just five years.
On July 20, 1969, at a campus-like facility, many thousands of engineers, technicians, bureaucrats, scientists, reporters and astronauts nervously awaited the culmination of years of work, sweat and tragic death.

It came with a few short words:
"Houston, Tranquility Base here. The Eagle has landed."

NEIL A. ARMSTRONG and Edwin E. (Buzz) Aldrin set the lunar landing craft Eagle on the moon's surface as Michael Collins orbited above in the mother ship Columbia.

The Manned Spacecraft Center, renamed last year the Johnson Space Center, reverberated with cheers and tears of happiness. Today, the future, though not bleak, holds only a hint of the spirit and adventure that once captivated the world.

The 1,620-acre center houses 33 percent fewer workers than at its peak in the summer of 1969. There are only 3,800 civil service and 5,907 contractor employees compared with the 4,731 civil service and 9,892 contractors then.

GONE IS THE LABORATORY that housed the 838 pounds of moon rocks and dust returned by the six lunar landings.

Reassigned are the flight directors who commanded the ground teams which solved the constant problems of space flight.

Dormant is the mission control room which watched over and guided the journeys.

And missing are many of the astronauts who broke the earth's barriers.

OF THE 21 MEN who flew the six moon landing missions — and the aborted Apollo 13 flight — only 10 are active astronauts.

The Apollo 11 pilots all are gone from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. Armstrong became a professor of engineering at the University of Cincinnati. Aldrin, who had a nervous breakdown following the flight, has formed a consulting business in California and wrote his autobiography. Collins is director of the National Air and Space Museum of the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, D.C., and has written a book, "Carrying the Fire."

Some others drifted to different government positions, a few sought privacy, most went to private business.

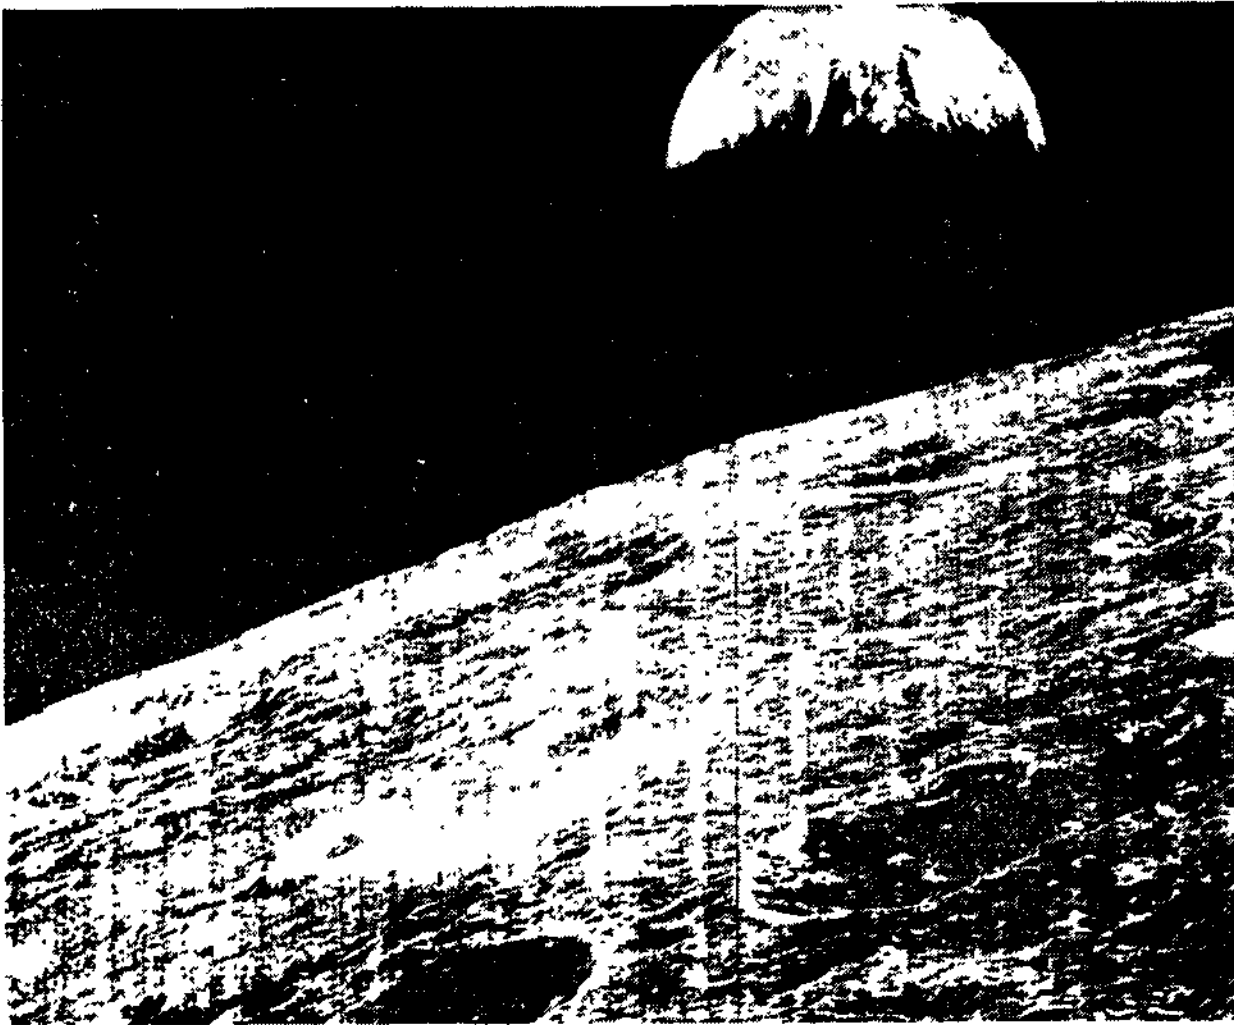

The Apollo 15 crew erred in judgment and tried to capitalize on their tax-paid mission by taking along hundreds of unauthorized postal covers. David R. Scott, Alfred M. Worden and James B. Irwin received reprimands and left the corps amid a flurry of new regulations on the spacemen's personal flight bags.

ALAN B. SHEPARD JR., America's first man in space and commander of Apollo 14, reportedly soon will retire, and recently stepped out of his position as chief of the astronaut corps. He remained as chief adviser to his predecessor, John W. Young, who commanded Apollo 16.

The only scientist to make the lunar trek, Dr. Harrison H. (Jack) Schmitt, the geologist on Apollo 17, was named in May to head an energy research office for NASA in Washington, D.C.

Others who have departed include Charles (Pete) Conrad Jr., vice president of a cable television firm in Denver; Richard F. Gordon Jr., vice president of the New Orleans Saints pro football team; James A. Lovell, vice president of a Houston barge company, and Edgar D. Mitchell, president of a research firm studying mental telepathy and other psychic phenomena.

OF THE ORIGINAL 73 pilots and scientists selected as astronauts since April,

THIS IS THE VIEW of the Earth that astronauts Armstrong, Collins and Aldrin had during their Apollo 11 flight five years ago. Armstrong and Aldrin made the 1939, only 35 are left. Eight have died, including the first three men of the Apollo program — Virgil I. (Gus) Grissom, Roger G. Chaffee and Edward H. White — who perished in a fire on the launching pad in January, 1967.

Several of the men of space who remain are working in administrative areas far removed from the pilot seat of a spacecraft. Very few will know the feeling of surging power as a spaceship rockets from Earth.

Only the joint U.S.-Soviet flight in July, 1975, remains before the onset of the long-range Space Shuttle program late this decade and early next. The reusable shuttle will launch like a rocket and land like an airplane to be the workhorse of space, making many trips into orbit for the price of one moon flight.

TWO ONCE-CRITICAL areas of the space center no longer are beehives of activity, and both virtually have been gutted.

One is the third-floor mission operations control room that teemed with the noise of earthlings talking to the first men on the moon. A duplicate room on the second floor housed the flight controllers for the duration of the Skylab flights last year and will be used for the U.S.-Soviet flight in 1975.

Mission control for Apollo 11 has been stripped of its important components. It was used as a set for a television movie and officials said it is unlikely the famous room ever will see service again.

The second area which has been all but dismantled is the lunar receiving laboratory, where all the moon rocks were sorted and initial studies performed. An estimated $2.8 million in equipment was shipped last year to the Atomic Energy Commission's Los Alamos Scientific Laboratory for use in laser-energy research. Other gear has gone to other labs.

THE FLIGHT CONTROL teams who worked in shifts around the clock during the 10-to-14-day lunar missions and the months' long Skylab flights largely have been broken up. The split-second decisions of the leaders of those teams — the flight directors — made the difference between success and failure on nearly every space mission flown by this country.

Glynn S. Lunney now is the technical director for the joint Soviet mission and also heads the Apollo spacecraft program office.

Gerald Griffin is solving bureaucratic problems as assistant administrator in the NASA office of legislative affairs in Washington. Eugene Kranz is deputy director of flight operations at the center and Milton Windler is the director of the orbiter-atmospheric flight test office for Space Shuttle. Clifford E. Charlesworth is program manager for earth resources.

And so, many of the facilities are gone and so are many of the men from the halcyon days five years ago when newspaper headlines blared "Men Walk on the Moon."

Man's first visit to moon end of dream

"That's one small step for a man; one giant leap for mankind."

Those 12 words, spoken five years ago by Neil A. Armstrong as he set foot on the moon, were the culmination of a centuries-old dream and the fulfillment of an eight-year-old commitment by the world's most powerful and resourceful nation.

July 16, 1969 — Apollo 11 lifted from Kennedy Space Center, Fla., at 8:32 a.m. (CDT). After a flawless outbound flight, Armstrong, Edwin E. Aldrin and Michael Collins orbited the moon. Final preparations began for descent to the lunar surface.

The men who figure those things believe about one-sixth the inhabitants of planet Earth watched and listened as a lunar module named Eagle left a command module named Columbia and started for the surface and into history books. The landing came at 3:18 p.m. (CDT) July 20. When it happened spacecraft communicator Charles Duke told them:

"You got a whole bunch of guys about to turn blue down here."

ARMSTRONG and Aldrin spent 2½ hours working on the moon's surface, then rejoined Collins who had orbited patiently overhead for almost 24 hours. He said later that he was not the loneliest man in the solar system. The three-day flight home was almost an anticlimax.

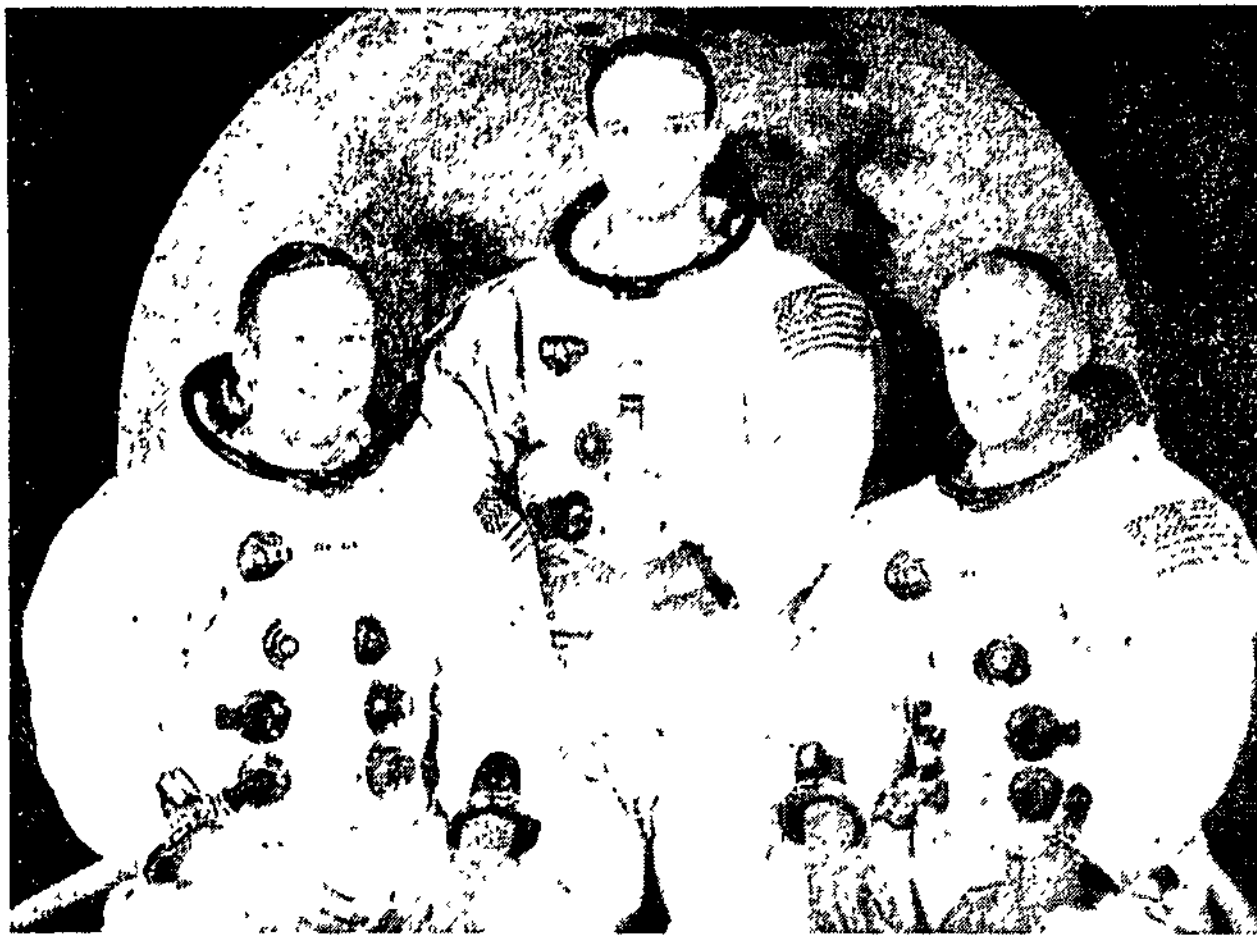

A three-week quarantine seemed to tell on the astronauts as much as the flight itself. Scientists were worried that some virus or germ might exist on the moon unknown on Earth. To protect us all, they insisted that Armstrong, Aldrin and Collins be isolated for a full 21 days from the moment Eagle's hatch closed.

It was in vain; no one caught so much as a cold from moon germs.

THE APOLLO program holds all the records and superlatives: most ambitious undertaking, largest launch vehicle, biggest building in the world; highest speeds achieved by men, many others.

It has also been called, by conservative scientists, "an event of the utmost scientific importance: one to rank with the discoveries of Newton, Galileo and Einstein."

"It was, this side of war, the greatest mustering of industrial might and expertise the world has seen," said Dr. Simon Ramo, vice chairman of the board and executive committee chairman at TRW Inc., one of the principal participants. "Thousands of companies, from the two prime contractors to little firms that made teflon washers, took enormous pride — and rightfully so — in their individual and collective roles in man's greatest adventure of exploration."

First lunar trio out of the space game

NEIL A. ARMSTRONG

The commander of Apollo 11, the man who will go down in history as being the first to step onto the moon, is the most reticent of the crew. Armstrong, 43, became associate NASA administrator for aeronautics and now is professor of aerospace engineering at the University of Cincinnati, teaching courses in dynamics and flight testing.

He lives on a farm 30 miles north of Cincinnati with his wife, Jan, and their two sons, Eric, 17, and Mark, 11. His associates call him a warm individual. He sometimes goes to great lengths to avoid the public spotlight. He participates in Boy Scout activities, does make an occasional speech for a fee and recently participated in a television advertisement.

EDWIN E. (BUZZ) ALDRIN

The Apollo 11 lunar module pilot, second man to walk on the moon, returned to the Air Force as commandant of the Air Force Aerospace School but retired in 1972 after having what he described as "a good old American nervous breakdown."

Aldrin, 44, still has periods of depression, but is on the road to recovery and is serving as National Mental Health chairman this year. He has described his problems in a book, "Return to Earth" and is planning a second book to describe for high school students his moon experiences and observations.

He also has formed a small engineering and research consulting company. Aldrin lives with his wife, Joan, and their children, James, 18, Janice, 16, and Andrew, 16, in Hidden Hills, Calif., a rustic area in the San Fernando Valley.

MICHAEL COLLINS

The pilot of the command ship Columbia remained in orbit while his colleagues walked the moon. Collins left NASA shortly after the mission to become assistant secretary of state for public affairs. He found that was not his cup of tea, as he puts it, and is now director of the Smithsonian Institution's National Air and Space Museum.

Collins, 43, says he likes being out of the limelight, but has written a book, "Carrying the Fire" due to be published July 30 (Farrar, Straus and Giroux), describing his experiences as an astronaut. He lives in Washington with his wife, Pat, and their three children, Kathleen, 15, Ann, 12, and Michael, 11.

Chronology of Apollo missions: 1968-72

HOUSTON (UPI) — Here is a summary of the 11 manned flights of Project Apollo:

Apollo 7

Astronauts Walter M. Schirra, Donn F. Eisele and Walter Cunningham flew the Apollo command ship for 11 days in Earth orbit on its first manned test flight, Oct. 11-22, 1968.

Apollo 8

Frank Borman, James A. Lovell and William A. Anders sailed into orbit around the moon for the first time, circling it 10 times, from Dec. 21-27, 1968.

Apollo 9

James A. McDivitt, David R. Scott and Russell L. Schweickart flew the Apollo lunar module for the first time with the command ship in Earth orbit, from March 3-13, 1969.

Apollo 10

Thomas P. Stafford, John W. Young and Eugene A. Cernan flew the whole Apollo assembly, the lunar module and command ship, into 31 orbits around the moon on the final test flight, May 18-26, 1969.

Apollo 11

Neil A. Armstrong, Michael Collins and Edwin E. Aldrin carried out the first manned lunar landing mission, with Armstrong and Aldrin landing in the spacecraft Eagle on the Sea of Tranquility while Collins remained in lunar orbit. The two stayed 21 hours and 35 minutes on the moon, performed one moonwalk and returned with 45 pounds of lunar samples, July 16-21, 1969.

Apollo 12

Charles (Pete) Conrad, Richard F. Gordon and Alan L. Bean carried out the second lunar landing mission. Conrad and Bean landed in the spacecraft Intrepid, stayed on the moon 31 hours and 31 minutes, performed two moonwalks and returned with 75 pounds of lunar material, Nov. 14-24, 1969.

Apollo 13

Lovell, John L. Swigert and Fred W. Haise barely escaped with their lives on the third lunar landing mission. An oxygen tank exploded in their command ship en route to the moon and they had to use their landing craft as a lifeboat to return home after looping the moon, April 11-17, 1970.

Apollo 14

Alan B. Shepard, Stuart A. Roosa and Edgar D. Mitchell flew to the moon in a modified command ship with Shepard and Mitchell landing in an area called Fra Mauro. They spent 33 hours and 32 minutes there, collecting 94 pounds of moon rocks on two walks. The mission lasted from Jan. 31-Feb. 9, 1971.

Apollo 15

Scott, Alfred M. Worden and James B. Irwin set out on the first truly lunar exploration mission. Scott and Irwin landed in the Hadley-Apennine valley, used a moon car during three excursions from their spacecraft and stayed on the moon 66 hours and 55 minutes, collecting 169 pounds of moon material, from July 25-Aug. 8, 1971.

Apollo 16

Young, Thomas K. Mattingly and Charles M. Duke flew to a hilly part of the moon known as the Descartes Formation, with Young and Duke landing. They used a moon car during three excursions, stayed on the moon 71 hours and 2 minutes and returned with 210 pounds of samples, from April 16-27, 1972.

Apollo 17

Cernan, Ronald E. Evans and Harrison H. (Jack) Schmitt, a geologist, carried out the final lunar exploration mission with Cernan and Schmitt landing in a valley known as Taurus-Littrow. They drove a moon car during three excursions lasting a record 44 hours, stayed on the moon a record 75 hours and returned with a record 257 pounds of samples, from Dec. 7-19, 1972.

Scott to file suit to halt police magazine ad scheme

by LEA TONKIN

Illinois Atty. Gen. William Scott said Thursday he will file suit this morning against the Illinois Police Bulletin magazine operation, which has attracted contributions from businesses in the Northwest suburbs and throughout the Chicago metropolitan area.

The suit, to be filed in Circuit Court, is aimed at halting the operation.

The action follows the arrest Tuesday of a "runner" for the magazine by Buffalo Grove police on a charge of attempted theft. Louis A. DeGrande of Chicago was arrested as he attempted to pick up $25 for an advertisement in the magazine at Rose-Lynn Flooring Store, 16 Ranch Mart.

Defendants named in the suit in addition to the Illinois Police Bulletin, are Thaddeus C. Toudor, Joseph Blanco and James Colona.

THE SUIT charges that Toudor and his associates called Chicago area businesses on the telephone to solicit contributions for advertisements in the "official" Illinois Police Bulletin.

Donald Mulack, assistant attorney general in the charitable trusts and donations division, said the magazine is not circulated among legitimate police organizations. The publication contains 95 per cent advertisements and has no professional content or readership value, he said.

"It's a sham," said Mulack of the magazine scheme. The 100 S. LaSalle St., Chicago address given by the magazine operators is fake, he said. An answering service at the location takes calls for Illinois Police Bulletin.

The runners and the answering service receive instructions in person from the operators, said Mulack, adding that Toudor's base of operations is unknown. One check for a $150 contribution from a Roselle firm was chased at the Crown

Liquor Store on the South side of Chicago.

MULACK said a standard sales pitch was used for the Illinois Police Bulletin ad sales. A man who identifies himself as a state police officer calls a business in the Chicago area. The caller asks whether the business executive would contribute a donation for an issue of the magazine honoring state police. Donations range from $35 to $150. A runner is sent out to collect the money. He keeps 3 per cent of the money and turns the rest over to Blanco or another operator, who hands out another list of advertisers.

An additional enticement to advertisers

was the offer of an Illinois Bureau of Information identification card by the operators. He name closely resembles the Illinois Bureau of Investigation title, Mulack noted. Advertisers were told that the card would grant access to police files on employees.

Illinois Police Bulletin apparently originated in November, 1972. One edition was published in 1973 and operators claimed that two editions would be published in 1974. The publication consists of advertiser listings (name and address), ads for the magazine and a story on marijuana which Mulack said was taken verbatim from a government publication.

THE SCHEME was designed to attract "patriotic, law-abiding members of the public," leading them to believe that contributions would be "used for police and legitimate police organizations," Scott charged.

The suit asks that the Illinois Police Bulletin operators be restrained from further solicitations. Scott also seeks an accounting for funds collected by the operators and that the funds be placed in a "constructive trust." The "large" amount of money collected by the group is unspecified.

School board members want some answers

At least one negative vote likely on Mrs. Reid hiring

by JILL BETTNER

At least one School Dist. 21 board member may vote against hiring former colleague Mary Joan Reid for a paid full-time administrative position at a special meeting tonight.

Mrs. Reid resigned from the board last week in order to assume the position of public relations director and volunteer coordinator at an annual salary of $9,000. She was on the Dist. 21 board for nine years, before her resignation which becomes effective Thursday.

Board members said Mrs. Reid's hiring has elicited several negative comments from the community. Dist. 21 serves Wheeling, Buffalo Grove, and portions of Arlington Heights and Mount Prospect.

School board member Lillian Stiller of Wheeling told The Herald Thursday Mrs. Reid's resignation and application for the Dist. 21 position came as a surprise to her. She also said she is not sure employing the former school board member is a good idea.

Mary Joan Reid

"If I had to vote now, I couldn't," Mrs. Stiller said of hiring Mrs. Reid. "I have to have the answers to several questions before I can vote."

AMONG questions concerning Mrs. Stiller, she said, are Mrs. Reid's qualifications for the Dist. 21 job, the number of other persons who applied and their qualifications and how well the fact that the position was available was publicized by the district.

Mrs. Stiller said she has received about 10 telephone calls regarding Mrs. Reid's resignation since it was announced last week.

Saying that all those who had called her were Wheeling residents, Mrs. Stiller commented, "I think people in Wheeling are a little sensitive these days."

She referred to recent scandals in Wheeling that have resulted in prison terms or probation for former village officials.

ANOTHER school board member, Kenneth Rodeck of Wheeling, said he has no objection to hiring Mrs. Reid. The other Dist. 21 school board members could not be reached Thursday for comment.

"My feelings are that I have to go along with the administration," Rodeck said. "The administration feels she's qualified and they interviewed a number of applicants. I'm not waiving in how I feel about it, but I get the feeling some of the board members are having second thoughts and want to discuss it, which is fine. If there's a problem, or they anticipate a problem, we'll have to take a deeper look at it."

Mrs. Reid's resignation and possible hiring are on the agenda of a special board meeting set for 7:30 tonight at the Dist. 21 administration building, 999 W. Dundee Rd., Wheeling.

The agenda tonight also calls for discussion of the controversy over an electronic surveillance system installed by Temptron, Inc.

The discussion about Mrs. Reid will be in closed session. The school board will decide at the meeting whether the Temptron case will be discussed in public.

Court overturns previous Liebling ruling; annex OK

The Village of Wheeling's 1971 annexation of 40 acres owned by Arnold Liebling was declared proper this week by Circuit Court Judge Raymond K. Berg.

In his action Tuesday, Berg reversed an earlier ruling by then Circuit Court Judge Edward J. Egan. Egan, in November of 1971, said the property's point-to-point touching with Wheeling was not enough for annexation.

Berg also ruled that the Wheeling Road Zoning Committee (a group of residents opposing the annexation) filed its objection to the annexation too late. The decision ended the more than 3-year-old case, at least on the Circuit Court level.

ASSISTANT STATE'S Atty. Paul Bielbel Thursday said Berg's decision came as a total surprise and no decision has been made on what the site's next step will be, although it will probably be an appeal. The state was representing the Wheeling Road Zoning Committee in the case.

NEITHER Liebling nor R. P. Beltran, chairman of the Wheeling Road Zoning Committee, could be reached for comment on their plans. Liebling had obtained apartment zoning for the property, which lies east of Wheeling Road and north of Camp McDonald Road in the Prospect Heights area.

Bielbel said an earlier attempt to compromise by Liebling may still be open to the Wheeling Road Zoning Committee. The compromise was that half the property would be developed as apartments and the other half as single-family houses.

Incorporation hearing rescheduled for Aug. 9, 12

The continuation of the Prospect Heights incorporation hearing, originally scheduled for today, now is set for Aug. 9 and 12.

The hearing was first continued, in the midst of testimony, in May when it was thought a compromise might be possible between the Prospect Heights Improvement Assn. and objectors to the incorporation. The compromise effort fell through last month when the villages of Arlington Heights and Northbrook would not go along with an agreement.

Jack Gilligan, PHIA president, said his group now has federal census data to support its contention that there are 13,000 to 15,000 residents within the proposed incorporation boundaries.

Gilligan said the census results undertaken for Cook County show approximately 10,700 residents in census districts completely within the proposed City of Prospect Heights. In addition, he said some areas within Prospect Heights are partially in other census districts and will add to the population figure.

A final breakdown for the incorporation area is due from the federal government in approximately five weeks. "The 10,700 figure is more than adequate, since an area needs only 7,500 residents to incorporate," Gilligan said.

'The Daughters'

Ex-suburbanite-turned-writer wanted to be a teacher until...

by BETTY LEE

Peggy Anderson never thought she could make a living writing books. In fact, she never thought much about writing until a dynamic college professor convinced her to give it a try.

Those college days were years ago and since then Miss Anderson, now 36, a former Arlington Heights resident, has authored "The Daughters," which examines one of the most venerable groups in the country — The Daughters of the American Revolution.

She takes an in-depth look at the Daughters of the American Revolution (DAR), the largest hereditary patriotic organization in the country, and touches on everything from racism to socializing. "It never occurred to me to be a writer," Miss Anderson said, when contacted in Philadelphia by The Herald. "I was bent on teaching emotionally handicapped children until I got in a crackling good comp (composition) course."

MISS ANDERSON now is promoting the book, which came out earlier this month. Her first attempt will be on NBC's "Today Show," where she will be interviewed at 7 a.m. Monday.

"I hope to talk about a few things that the book doesn't say," Miss Anderson said. The DAR, she added, has been the target for unfair criticism for many years because of the ultra-conservative stands it takes. The book does not glorify the DAR, but provides a more objective view, she says.

She graduated from Arlington High School with no definite career plans except to enroll in Augustana College in Rock Island. Her mother, Mrs. Kay McMillan, still lives at 354 S. Belmont in Arlington Heights.

With an English degree in hand, Miss Anderson made rounds with a publishing company and then decided to join the Peace Corps.

She taught English in Togo, West Africa. "It was much harder teaching English than writing a book," she said.

IT WASN'T UNTIL she began evaluating overseas Peace Corps programs when she discovered she wanted to write. Her job in New York was to write lengthy governmental reports, which wasn't as dry as it sounds, she said. "It was more like magazine writing."

The job took Miss Anderson to several parts of the world, including India and Thailand. "I felt very lucky then," she said. "I really had a good time in 1968." After her work at the Peace Corps, Miss Anderson joined her boss, who departed the Peace Corps to start the Washington Monthly Magazine.

She was a feature writer for the Philadelphia Inquirer when she was assigned to interview the president general of the DAR. "Six months later I got a letter from St. Martin's press," Miss Anderson said. "They said they were looking for someone to do a book on the DAR and asked if I was interested."

WITH A LITTLE advance money from the publishing company and "lots of money from home," Miss Anderson spent a year researching the DAR and interviewing some of its members.

How does the public feel about her book? The author thinks it's too early to tell, but she did hear from the new DAR president. "She said I had done a fair job," she said.

"It did raise DAR eyebrows," she added. "One DAR member said she was disappointed, and another said it was candid."

Miss Anderson is planning another book after promoting "The Daughters." In the meantime she is living in a century-old house where she likes to entertain guests with gourmet dinners and folk songs.

Passenger, 22, hurt in automobile crash

One man was injured slightly in a one-car accident Wednesday night on Wolf Road near Harmony Lane in Wheeling.

Police said a car driven by Craig K. Braun, 21, of 302 W. Wing St., Arlington Heights, apparently went off the roadway.

Injured was passenger Robert M. Menus, 22, of Round Lake Beach, who was treated at Holy Family Hospital in Des Plaines.

Police charged Braun with passing in a no passing zone. He is to appear Aug. 27 in the Arlington Heights branch of Circuit Court.

Students return from music camp

Three music students from Wheeling attended a summer music camp at the University of Iowa, Iowa City.

Edward Kotowski, 1400 Marly Ln.; Tom Powszok, 1351 Marcy Ln.; and Pamela Smith, 217 Renee, were among 460 students attending the 25th annual All-State Music Camp. The camp was held from June 16-28.

The students rehearsed daily and practiced in private and group lessons. Two public concerts were given by students.

Kotowski, a high school freshman, played trumpet in the band division. Powszok, a freshman, played saxophone, and Miss Smith, an eighth grader played French horn in the band and performed in the orchestra.

Scott to file suit to halt police magazine ad scheme

by LEA TONKIN

Illinois Atty. Gen. William Scott said Thursday he will file suit this morning against the Illinois Police Bulletin magazine operation, which has attracted contributions from businesses in the Northwest suburbs and throughout the Chicago metropolitan area.

The suit, to be filed in Circuit Court, is aimed at halting the operation.

The action follows the arrest Tuesday of a "runner" for the magazine by Buffalo Grove police on a charge of attempted theft. Louis A. DeGrande of Chicago was arrested as he attempted to pick up $25 for an advertisement in the magazine at Rose-Lynn Flooring Store, 16 Ranch Mart.

Defendants named in the suit in addition to the Illinois Police Bulletin, are Thaddeus C. Toudor, Joseph Bianco and James Calona.

THE SUIT charges that Toudor and his associates called Chicago area businesses on the telephone to solicit contributions for advertisements in the "official" Illinois Police Bulletin.

by JILL BETTNER

At least one School Dist. 21 board member may vote against hiring former colleague Mary Joan Reid for a paid full-time administrative position at a special meeting tonight.

Blood drive postponed; lack of donors blamed

Saturday's blood drive at Buffalo Grove High School has been postponed due to lack of donors.

Sylvia Bogart, a member of the village blood commission, said Thursday less than two dozen persons signed to donate. The North Suburban Blood Center, sponsor of the program, said it was not enough to warrant sending a mobile blood unit to the school.

Mrs. Bogart said the drive will be rescheduled for Aug. 31. The response should be better, she said, because most residents will be finished with vacations and the drive will take place during Buffalo Grove Days.

"We've had a poor response, but I hope we will be able to get more by the time we have the next blood drive," she said.

Anyone who has signed up for Saturday's drive can make an appointment to donate instead at the blood center headquarters in Northbrook by calling 408-9940. The donation will be credited to the village.

Anyone wishing to donate at the August drive can make an appointment by calling the village hall at 537-8994. Those unable to donate the day of the drive can sign a pledge card and donate at an area hospital at their convenience. Residents who do this are asked to notify the village.

The next drive also will be at the high school, Arlington Heights and Dundee roads, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The village program provides free blood replacement anywhere in the country for all residents if 4 per cent of them

Trustees to weigh office, restaurant complex plans

Buffalo Grove officials next week will be asked to approve a plan calling for a Pizza Hut restaurant and office building, despite a unanimous rejection of the project by the plan commission.

The Dominion Development Co. has proposed the project for a tract near Buffalo Grove and Dundee roads. The plan was turned down by the plan commission by a 7-0 margin about a year ago.

The developer Monday night will ask the village board to overturn the plan commission's decision. Village Mgr. Daniel Larson said Thursday the developer has said it may take the matter to court if the plan is rejected by the board.

Alan Foss, vice president of Dominion, would make no comment when contacted Thursday. "I don't keep too much from you guys (The Herald), but right now I have no comment," he said. "It's on the agenda Monday and we'll see what happens."

AT THE TIME of the plan commission's decision, one commissioner said the plan was "a poor example of land use planning." Foss at the time felt the commission's decision was arbitrary.

The current proposal for the property is different from that which was approved by the village about two years ago. The original plan called for a gas station on the northern portion of the property and a commercial building on the southern part.

The northern property has been sold to the Marathon Oil Co., but no station has been built. The plan for the southern

Ex-suburbanite-turned-writer

by BETTY LEE

Peggy Anderson never thought she could make a living writing books. In fact, she never thought much about writing until a dynamic college professor convinced her to give it a try.

Those college days were years ago and since then Miss Anderson, now 36, a former Arlington Heights resident, has authored "The Daughters," which examines one of the most venerable groups in the country — The Daughters of the American Revolution.

She takes an in-depth look at the Daughters of the American Revolution (DAR), the largest hereditary patriotic organization in the country, and touches on everything from racism to socializing.

"It never occurred to me to be a writer," Miss Anderson said, when contacted in Philadelphia by The Herald. "I was bent on teaching emotionally handicapped children until I got in a crackling good comp (composition) course."

MISS ANDERSON now is promoting the book, which came out earlier this month. Her first attempt will be on NBC's "Today Show," where she will be interviewed at 7 a.m. Monday.

"I hope to talk about a few things that the book doesn't say," Miss Anderson said. The DAR, she added, has been the target for unfair criticism for many years because of the ultra-conservative stands it takes. The book does not glorify the DAR, but provides a more objective view, she says.

She graduated from Arlington High School with no definite career plans except to enroll in Augustana College in Rock Island. Her mother, Mrs. Kay McMillan, still lives at 334 S. Belmont in Arlington Heights.

With an English degree in hand, Miss Anderson made rounds with a publishing company and then decided to join the Peace Corps.

She taught English in Togo, West Africa. "It was much harder teaching English than writing a book," she said.

IT WASN'T UNTIL she began evaluating overseas Peace Corps programs when she discovered she wanted to write. Her job in New York was to write lengthy governmental reports, which wasn't as dry as it sounds, she said. "It was more like magazine writing."

The job took Miss Anderson to several parts of the world, including India and Thailand. "I felt very lucky then," she said. "I really had a good time in 1968."

After her work at the Peace Corps, Miss Anderson joined her boss, who departed the Peace Corps to start the Washington Monthly Magazine.

She was a feature writer for the Philadelphia Inquirer when she was assigned to interview the president general of the DAR. "Six months later I got a letter from St. Martin's press," Miss Anderson said. "They said they were looking for someone to do a book on the DAR and asked if I was interested."

WITH A LITTLE advance money from the publishing company and "lots of money from home," Miss Anderson spent a year researching the DAR and interviewing some of its members.

How does the public feel about her book? The author thinks it's too early to tell, but she did hear from the new DAR president. "She said I had done a fair job," she said.

"It did raise DAR eyebrows," she added. "One DAR member said she was disappointed, and another said it was candid."

Miss Anderson is planning another book after promoting "The Daughters." In the meantime she is living in a century-old house where she likes to entertain guests with gourmet dinners and folk songs.

donate a pint of blood each year. THE VILLAGE recently completed its first year of eligibility in the NSBC program and the upcoming drive will be the first of its second year. In the next year village residents will have to donate 760 pints to remain eligible.

"Right now things are a little critical because 36 pints are all that have been donated for the quarter that ends Sept. 1," Mrs. Bogart said. "We should be getting about 190 pints of blood every quarter, so we need a considerable amount in the next drive."

She said the blood commission has set 175 pints as the goal for the next drive. That amount would put the village slightly over its quarterly quota.

In addition to the individual donor program, there is one for organizations. It works the same way except that 20 percent of the members must donate a pint of blood each year for all to be eligible.

DONATIONS toward organizations also count toward the village goal. Village officials have said participation by organizations is the "backbone" of the village blood program.

If the village or organization should fall short of requirements, those who have donated and the members of their immediate families remain eligible. They will be given as much blood as needed for as long as necessary.

Donors must be 18 to 65 years old and weigh at least 110 pounds. Persons who have had hepatitis are not eligible to donate.

Students return from music camp

Three music students from Wheeling attended a summer music camp at the University of Iowa, Iowa City.

Edward Kotowski, 1400 Marly Ln.; Tom Powszok, 1351 Marcy Ln., and Pamela Smith, 217 Renee, were among 460 students attending the 25th annual All-State Music Camp. The camp was held from June 16-28.

The students rehearsed daily and practiced in private and group lessons. Two public concerts were given by students.

Kotowski, a high school freshman, played trumpet in the band division. Powszok, a freshman, played saxophone, and Miss Smith, an eighth grader played French horn in the band and performed in the orchestra.

Boys' football signups to get underway soon

Buffalo Grove Wheeling opens signup Aug. 3 signup July 27

Boys 10-14 years old can sign up for the Buffalo Grove Boys' Football Assn. fall season Aug. 3 and Aug. 10.

Boys can register at Emmerich Park on those days from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Fees will not be collected at the time of registration.

Anyone unable to register at the scheduled time can sign up with Jim O'Heir at 532 Chatham Cir. or call him at 537-3844.

The association has been expanded to accommodate more boys. The Bills, the group's traveling team, will be participating in the Invitational Football League and the Pop Warner Widgee Football League.

Equipment will be provided by the association for those competing in the tackle football program.

Registration for the Buffalo Grove Boys Football program will take place Saturday and again July 27 at Willow Grove School or Emmerich Park from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Boys from 9 to 14 can sign up in one of three leagues. The pee wee league is open to youngsters 9 to 11 years who weigh up to 95 pounds with full gear, the lightweight league is open to boys 11 to 14 weighing from 95-118 pounds with full gear and the junior league is for those 10 to 13 who weigh between 118 and 134 pounds with full equipment.

Boys should bring their birth certificates to registration.

Fees are $22 for one boy, $35 for two boys in the same family and $45 for three in the same family.

Anyone wishing further information may call Jerry Libit at 541-2005.

property has been changed to include a Pizza Hut and a one-story office building.

If the plan is approved, the developer would still have about two acres on the southern part of the property. Foss said the remaining land would be used for future commercial development.

MEMBERS OF THE plan commission, in rejecting the plan, said they were opposed to splitting the property into small commercial sites. They said they would prefer that it be developed as one site.

Comr. Stan Haarr said the development would have too many driveways that would be unattractive, as well as creating traffic congestion. Comr. Howard Mendenhall said the small site that would be left for future development would be too small for "something desirable."

Some members of the plan commission and village board have said in the past they would be reluctant to approve a "franchise type" restaurant, such as Pizza Hut.

Larson said the matter has not come before the village board until now because there apparently was some doubt for a while that the developer was going to be granted a Pizza Hut franchise.

Scott to file suit to halt police magazine ad scheme

by LEA TONKIN
Illinois Atty. Gen. William Scott said Thursday he will file suit this morning against the Illinois Police Bulletin magazine operation, which has attracted contributions from businesses in the Northwest suburbs and throughout the Chicago metropolitan area.

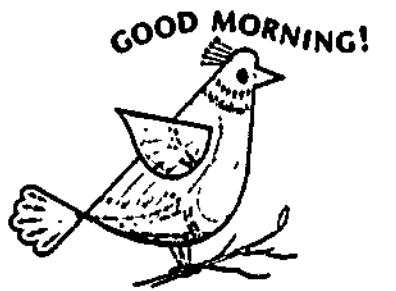

The suit, to be filed in Circuit Court, is aimed at halting the operation.
The action follows the arrest Tuesday of a "runner" for the magazine by Buffalo Grove police on a charge of attempted theft. Louis A. DeGrande of Chicago was arrested as he attempted to pick up $25 for an advertisement in the magazine at Rose-Lynn Flooring Store, 16 Ranch Mart.

Defendants named in the suit in addition to the Illinois Police Bulletin, are Thaddeus C. Toudor, Joseph Bianco and James Calona.
THE SUIT charges that Toudor and his associates called Chicago area businesses on the telephone to solicit contributions for advertisements in the "official" Illinois Police Bulletin.
Donald Mulack, assistant attorney general in the charitable trusts and donations division, said the magazine is not circulated among legitimate police organizations. The publication contains 95 per cent advertisements and has no professional content or readership value, he said.

"It's a sham," said Mulack of the magazine scheme. The 100 S. LaSalle St., Chicago address given by the magazine operators is fake, he said. An answering service at the location takes calls for Illinois Police Bulletin.
The runners and the answering service receive instructions in person from the operators, said Mulack, adding that Toudor's base of operations is unknown. One check for a $150 contribution from a Roselle firm was chased at the Crown Liquor Store on the South side of Chicago.

MULACK said a standard sales pitch was used for the Illinois Police Bulletin ad sales. A man who identifies himself as a state police officer calls a business in the Chicago area. The caller asks whether the business executive would contribute a donation for an issue of the magazine honoring state police. Donations range from $35 to $150. A runner is sent out to collect the money. He keeps 3 per cent of the money and turns the rest over to Bianco or another operator, who hands out another list of advertisers.
An additional enticement to advertisers was the offer of an Illinois Bureau of Information identification card by the operators. He name closely resembles the Illinois Bureau of Investigation title, Mulack noted. Advertisers were told that the card would grant access to police files on employees.

Illinois Police Bulletin apparently originated in November, 1972. One edition was published in 1973 and operators claimed that two editions would be published in 1974. The publication consists of advertiser listings (name and address), ads for the magazine and a story on marijuana which Mulack said was taken verbatim from a government publication.
THE SCHEME was designed to attract "patriotic, law-abiding members of the public," leading them to believe that contributions would be "used for police and legitimate police organizations," Scott charged.
The suit asks that the Illinois Police Bulletin operators be restrained from further solicitations. Scott also seeks an accounting for funds collected by the operators and that the funds be placed in a "constructive trust." The "large" amount of money collected by the group is unspecified.

County to check on faulty furnace repairs in area

by DOROTHY OLIVER
The Cook County Department of Building and Zoning is investigating whether defective furnaces and faulty heating system installations exist in unincorporated Cook County.
Deputy Comm. Raymond J. Welsh of the department of building and zoning has contacted a local heating contractor for information on furnace repairs which may have been made in unincorporated areas.
Welsh is conducting the investigation at the request of County Comm. Carl Hansen. Hansen was alerted to the furnace problem, which exists in Elk Grove Village and possibly other suburbs, by stories in the Herald.
HANSEN SAID Thursday he wrote to the department of building and zoning July 11 after reading an article in the Herald.
"Originally, it was my impression that the furnace problems were limited to Elk Grove Village. After reading an article July 9, I realized that it was not isolated to Elk Grove Village and that this problem could exist elsewhere," Hansen said.
Hansen asked the department to investigate if the furnace models that have been turning up with defects have been certified for installation in unincorporated Cook County.
"If it exists in the unincorporated areas I think we (the Cook County Board) should know about it," he said.
Hansen added he does not know what the board will do with their information at this point. "We have to wait until we see what the problem is. The county does have home rule power and we have jurisdiction over areas which don't have a health department. We can take action on any faulty installation but we don't yet know the dimensions of the problem."

have experienced furnace problems "but I would be hopeful that anybody with any information would contact us."
He added his agency would be willing to work with local officials when the cause of the failing furnaces has been determined.
RETTENBACHER said Thursday that the village has completed 248 inspections of furnaces in the village. Only 16.5 per cent, or 41 furnaces have been found to be completely problem-free.
Thirty furnaces, or 12 per cent, were found to be positively defective; another 177 furnaces, or 71.4 per cent, were listed as doubtful.
"WE TERM a furnace doubtful when we aren't positive that it is OK," Rettenbacher said. Inspectors suggest people call a private heating contractor for a more thorough inspection if they are not sure whether a problem exists.
Rettenbacher added that officials from both Arlington Heights and Palatine have sent people to Elk Grove Village to go out with inspectors and familiarize themselves with how the inspection is made.
THE HERALD disclosed June 18 that furnaces that may be leaking deadly carbon monoxide fumes are installed in as many as 1,700 Elk Grove Village homes. The furnaces, manufactured by the Johnson Corp. of Bellevue, Ohio, have heat exchangers that crack or corrode, allowing the fumes to escape into the home rather than through the chimney.
The Herald also learned that many of the furnaces were installed in violation of the Elk Grove Village building code. Installations were made by Servaire-Metropolitan Co. of Berwyn.
A number of heating contractors in the area have stated that the problem is not isolated to the village or to Johnson furnaces but can be found in other project-type housing developments where a lesser quality, "flimsily constructed" furnace is used. Contractors have pinpointed Arlington Heights, Buffalo Grove, Hoffman Estates and Schaumburg as suburbs with furnace problems.
Officials are waiting for a technical report from a Chicago consulting engineer that may explain the cause of the furnace breakdowns.

A CHECKERBOARD LAWN was not the effect Nursery Co. of Niles installed sod in front of their this Elk Grove Village family sought when Northern home at 1287 Parker Pl. The nursery contends that the sod is "dormant" after being laid last weekend. The homeowner says it is dead.

Complains of 'checkerboard' lawn
Dead or dormant, brown sod stirs consumer's anger

by JERRY THOMAS
Dead or dormant?
Sue Conroy says alternating rows of sod she paid to be laid on the front lawn of her Elk Grove Village home are dead.
Northern Nurseries field manager, Art Parr, who installed the sod, calls the yellowed sod "dormant."
"All I know is we contracted to pay $653 for a sod job in March and this past weekend the nursery laid a checkerboard-like lawn that's the laughingstock of the neighborhood," complained Mrs. Conroy.
Mrs. Conroy said Northern Nurseries had sold sod door to door when her block was first occupied by new homeowners in March. The Conroys and two of their neighbors purchased the sod from Parr.
"He promised us a guarantee and the paper does say the sod is guaranteed to take root somewhere between three and six weeks after installation," said Mrs. Conroy.

"But, when we talked to Parr, who is still selling sod in this block, and showed him how rotten dead every other strip looked the day after being laid, he told us everything was fine and we should just keep watering it," said Mrs. Conroy.
"Well, we kept watering it and it got worse and worse-looking," she said.
"Now, a week later, he is telling us we overwatered the sod and it's rotten," said Mrs. Conroy.
Parr, who was interviewed by a Herald reporter while he was negotiating an on the street contract with a housewife and supervising another sod installation, termed Mrs. Conroy's concern "premature."
"Sod often browns out but that doesn't mean it is dead," added Parr. He contends that he will honor his guarantee that the sod will take root. "Of course that doesn't mean I guarantee it will turn green right away; that could take a little longer, but eventually the grass will grow," he said.

MRS. CONROY said when Parr talks to her he gives her a different story and says she just is not taking care of her sod properly.
"First he told me to water it all day and I did. Now he said to water two hours in the morning and two in the evening, but he is telling my next-door neighbors on both sides to water all day," she said.
Mrs. Conroy has put a sign on her lawn that tells her neighbors and passersby that her sod was laid by a professional nursery — Northern.
She said Parr told her neighbors across the street that she and her husband laid the sod themselves. "He told them that's why it looked so bad — that he just sold us rolls and we laid it out in hot weather and didn't take care of it," said Mrs. Conroy.

MRS. CONROY said other nurseries she has contacted this week told her a reputable firm would prefer to lay sod in cooler or wet weather and seldom will guarantee sod.
James Robinson of Klehm Nurseries said sod can be laid in heat but most landscapers would prefer not to do it then.
"If we did we'd suggest keeping it real wet," he said.
A Wheeling Sod Farm spokesman said since Mrs. Conroy's lawn yellowed out in strips some rolls could have a fungus infection from being rolled up too long before being laid. Mrs. Conroy said the flats of sod were delivered on the same day but installation took two days.

anchors aweigh for students
Out of class and into water for maiden sailing voyage
BY FRAN SLIMMER
Weather permitting, a sailing class from Lively Junior High School will make its maiden voyage today in Cosman Lake in Elk Grove Village.
The 27 sixth to eighth graders in the class eagerly have been awaiting the first sail since summer school began in June, instructor Lyle Hampton said.
While about half the students have never been sailing before some of the students "sail better than I can," Hampton said.
He's only been sailing for a year, since a friend took him aboard last summer.
This is the first time Hampton has taught sailing, and also the first time it has been offered as a summer school class at the Elk Grove school. Hampton said he occasionally has his more experienced students explain things or talk about their adventures in class.
THE COURSE'S emphasis is on basic sailing, Hampton said, but he also teaches the state Conservation Department's Young Boatman's Safety Course. There are seven required units for certification, he said. A student who passes all the exams will receive a certificate.
This certificate isn't a sailing license, but if someone has one, it shows he knows "the rules of the road, so to speak," Hampton said.
He said the Conservation Dept. was very cooperative in helping set up the (Continued on Page 5)

Bilingual program stresses culture to teach language

by JUDY JOBBITT

Oh Keum Soo smiles as she plays the piano in the hallway at Dooley School. Students rushing back from recess stop short and listen. Her impromptu performance gets a round of applause from all who could hear.

For Keum Soo, who arrived in America from Korea last summer, the piano was her first means of expressing herself to classmates last fall. She could not speak English and the classroom was "all dark," she said as she reflected on that experience.

Now sixth-grader Keum Soo has achieved a fourth grade reading level and can comprehend and speak English, her second language.

KEUM SOO'S success story is being repeated throughout Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 as the bilingual program extends to meet the needs of foreign students who move into the district.

More than 60 children are involved in the bilingual program that includes 22 languages such as Indian dialects, Polish, Italian, German, French and Oriental languages.

About half of these students also are participating in a special bilingual summer school program to help them continue learning English throughout the summer months and bring them closer to their grade level in English skills.

Most students involved in the bilingual program are Spanish-American and are children of parents who migrated to the Chicago area because of its reputation for good jobs.

DIST. 54 has had a bilingual, or more appropriately a multi-cultural, program since 1971. At that time Ronald Ruble, associate superintendent in charge of personnel, was receiving calls from principals with students who spoke little or no English.

That year Darold Donnell was hired as a teacher aide to help the Spanish-American students learn English. Now the bilingual staff has been expanded to include Bob Thompson and Sue Hageman as full-time teachers. Between them they speak Spanish, German and French.

They term their program as multi-cultural because its stress differs from the common concept of bilingual. Because of the number of languages and students involved, the teachers use a tutorial method to help the students learn English and adjust to the American culture.

Students are taught in their native language as well as in English, which is the stress of the "bilingual" concept. They could not implement this type of program, said Thompson, because the teachers do not know all the language and the students are currently in 14 schools throughout the district and at all grade levels.

THE MULTICULTURAL aspect also affects the other students in the classroom. For example when Keum Soo started school last fall, she could not relate to her fellow classmates. To help bridge the gap, Thompson tried to make the other students understand her situation.

They received a list of common Korean words and were asked their meaning. From this experience as well as hearing Keum Soo speak her language, they understood her position better.

The demonstration ended with Keum Soo playing the piano, an instrument she has been studying since she was young. Everyone was able to understand this "language" and she made her first breakthrough.

"The first couple of weeks are the most difficult," said Thompson. "They just must live through them." Then students start establishing contacts and pick up the language, he said.

Students are taught through a pictorial process. Understanding comes first through picture-verbal contact. Once this is achieved, students are taught to speak the language. Then reading and writing follow in a natural progression.

The district received $6,300 from state aid last year for a teacher aide and materials.

THOUGH THE district applied to the state for $18,000 to expand the program next year, the state has indicated it will not approve the grant because the district does not teach the students in their own language 50 per cent of the time and does not follow state guidelines, said Carl Seltzer, assistant superintendent in charge of curriculum.

The state's guidelines would not allow the tutorial approach necessary in Dist. 54 because of the students' diverse backgrounds.

Next year, however, the district intends to pilot a traditional bilingual classroom for Spanish speaking students.

This summer the district is offering a special session for students to help them bridge the gap in their English comprehension and actual grade level.

Beyond the teacher-student contact, emphasis is placed on the home. Parental contact and communication is maintained to help the student learn at home and achieve additional support for the first hard months.

Soon, however, they mix right in, picking up their new language and culture.

MUSIC BREAKS language barriers that bilingual students like Oh Keum Soo must cross when they arrive in the United States. Keum Soo moved to the area from Korea with her family and now can read and write English well.

course, sending him workbooks, slides and movies.

But sailing can't be taught entirely in a classroom, Hampton said. He brought his own boat to the school last week and the class rigged it and identified the parts. Several boatowners near Cosman Lake have let the class rig their boats, too, Hampton said, which gives the students experience with different kinds of sailboats.

SOME OF HIS students have access to sailboats and have taken other classmates sailing, Hampton said. But the class as a whole hasn't been on an outing until today because Hampton didn't feel everybody was ready. He has permission from the Cosman Lake Homeowners' Assn. to use the lake, but must notify the association in advance. Several parents have volunteered to help Hampton supervise the class, and others have volunteered boats.

Hampton said he prefers sailboats to motor boats because sailing "is more of a challenge. After you go around a lake in a motorboat, what else is there? With sailing, it's a challenge to get around." Ecologically speaking, sailing is great, he said. It doesn't cost a thing, once the boat is bought, and sailboats don't use fuel.

Hampton is interested in sailboat racing, too. It's "pretty safe," he said, because "it all depends on the skill of the helmsman."

"Do you know how a boat sails?" he asked. "It's about 80 per cent pull, not push," he said, adding that most of his class was surprised by that fact.

Both Hampton and his students are learning in the class, but nobody is graded. The whole purpose of the summer classes is to give the children recreation and fun.

"The kids really seem to be enthused," he said.

'Roast' will be part of Cooney golf tourney

A "roast," a good-natured and witty teasing of a personality, will be a featured part of the dinner program at the Neil Cooney Open Aug. 7. The Cooney Cup will be presented to the winner of the tournament during the evening festivities.

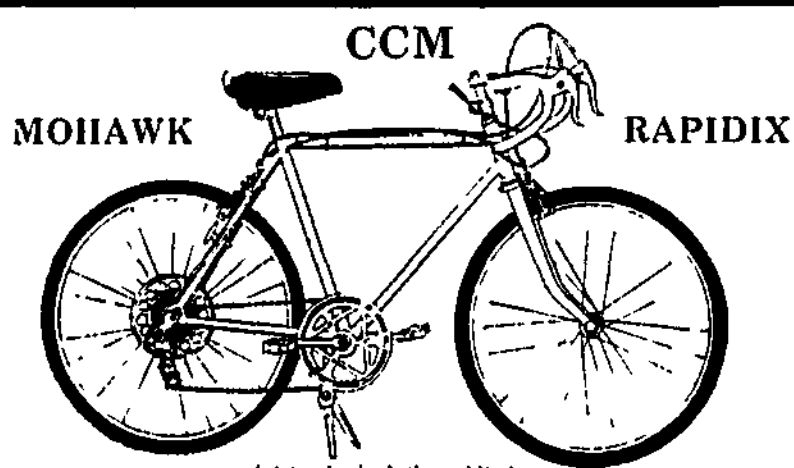

Emergency room facilities at Alexian Brothers Medical Center, Elk Grove Village, will benefit from the third annual golf event. In 1973 the hospital's building fund received a $1,300 contribution from the proceeds of the event.

Cooney, an Elk Grove community leader, is former president of the Bank of Elk Grove. He is now president of the Plum Grove Bank, 2701 Algonquin Rd., Rolling Meadows. Cooney, vice chairman of the board of trustees of the medical center, served on the Lay Advisory Board for five years previous to being elected a trustee.

The outing will be held at Nordic Hills Country Club with tee-off times being scheduled between 7 a.m. and noon. Cocktails are set for 7 p.m. with dinner following at 8 p.m.

Reservations for golf, $15 per person, and dinner, $17.50 per person, may be made with the fund-raising office at the hospital, 437-5300, ext. 433.

'Rocket' scene of many mishaps

Hurt girl's mother says park equipment faulty

An Elk Grove Village mother whose daughter was seriously injured on a piece of park equipment is charging the Elk Grove Village Park District with installing dangerous equipment.

Mrs. Elizabeth Haubner, 210 Wellington St., said her daughter Sandy, 9, required hours of surgical repair and spent three days in Alexian Brothers Medical Center after suffering internal and other injuries when she slipped off a round ladder rung at the park July 3.

Mrs. Haubner said her daughter had played at Roosevelt Park, located at Wellington and Park streets many times, but that she had never examined the equipment until after the accident.

"Sandy had been climbing a rocket slide and the ladder leading to it does not have flat rungs like in most park equipment but is constructed of round bars I think are too easy to slip off," said the mother.

Jack Claes, Elk Grove Village Park District director, said he had not been notified of the accident. "We carry public liability insurance and I am sure if a report is filed the firm will investigate the report," said Claes.

CLAES ADMITTED this was not the first accident attributed to the equipment called "the rocket." "It covers about a hundred feet and includes slide, climbing catwalks and platform, and attracts kids like it is supposed to," he said.

"Some get hurt as kids do on playgrounds everywhere; certainly we aren't happy about it but we realize that they will occasionally get injured," said Claes.

Claes said he remembers "about three accidents on the rocket during the past year." One man broke his ankle when he went down with son in lap, and in another, a boy fell off the slide.

ONLY ONE ACCIDENT was serious said Claes. "In that case a young girl apparently fell off the slide or something, nobody knows how it happened, and she was in intensive care in Alexian Brothers Medical Center for some time. I'm not sure but maybe her parents are suing the park district for damages in that case," he added.

Claes said the district is not contemplating any changes in equipment installations.

"If we did, every time someone got hurt we'd be tearing up a park," he said.

Claes said at one time residents had approached the park district and asked that "the rocket" be removed because they claimed it was "dangerous to children."

"We didn't remove it because we surveyed other parks where it is installed and found it to be no more dangerous than any equipment," he said.

MRS. HAUBNER SAID doctors have told her Sandy will need care for at least a year.

"I didn't go to the park district asking for help with the hospital bills after the accident but now that I know it will be a lot of money, I think they should help," she said.

"I also want them to make the equipment safer for my kids and others around here to use."

Scott to file suit to halt police magazine ad scheme

by LEA TONKIN

Illinois Atty. Gen. William Scott said Thursday he will file suit this morning against the Illinois Police Bulletin magazine operation, which has attracted contributions from businesses in the Northwest suburbs and throughout the Chicago metropolitan area.

The suit, to be filed in Circuit Court, is aimed at halting the operation.

The action follows the arrest Tuesday of a "runner" for the magazine by Buffalo Grove police on a charge of attempted theft. Louis A. DeGrande of Chicago was arrested as he attempted to pick up $25 for an advertisement in the magazine at Rose-Lynn Flooring Store, 16 Ranch Mart.

Defendants named in the suit in addition to the Illinois Police Bulletin, are Thaddeus C. Toudor, Joseph Bianco and James Calona.

THE SUIT charges that Toudor and his associates called Chicago area businesses on the telephone to solicit contributions for advertisements in the "official" Illinois Police Bulletin.

Donald Mulack, assistant attorney general in the charitable trusts and donations division, said the magazine is not circulated among legitimate police organizations. The publication contains 65 per cent advertisements and has no professional content or readership value, he said.

"It's a sham," said Mulack of the magazine scheme. The 100 S. LaSalle St., Chicago address given by the magazine operators is fake, he said. An answering service at the location takes calls for Illinois Police Bulletin.

The runners and the answering service receive instructions in person from the operators, said Mulack, adding that Toudor's base of operations is unknown. One check for a $150 contribution from a Roselle firm was chased at the Crown

Liquor Store on the South side of Chicago.

MULACK said a standard sales pitch was used for the Illinois Police Bulletin ad sales. A man who identifies himself as a state police officer calls a business in the Chicago area. The caller asks whether the business executive would contribute a donation for an issue of the magazine honoring state police. Donations range from $35 to $150. A runner is sent out to collect the money. He keeps 3 per cent of the money and turns the rest over to Bianco or another operator, who hands out another list of advertisers.

An additional enticement to advertisers

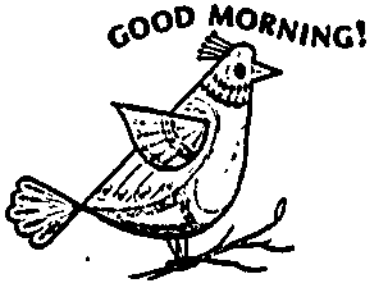

was the offer of an Illinois Bureau of Information identification card by the operators. He name closely resembles the Illinois Bureau of Investigation title, Mulack noted. Advertisers were told that the card would grant access to police files on employees.

Illinois Police Bulletin apparently originated in November, 1972. One edition was published in 1973 and operators claimed that two editions would be published in 1974. The publication consists of advertiser listings (name and address), ads for the magazine and a story on marijuana which Mulack said was taken verbatim from a government publication.

THE SCHEME was designed to attract "patriotic, law-abiding members of the public," leading them to believe that contributions would be "used for police and legitimate police organizations," Scott charged.

The suit asks that the Illinois Police Bulletin operators be restrained from further solicitations. Scott also seeks an accounting for funds collected by the operators and that the funds be placed in a "constructive trust." The "large" amount of money collected by the group is unspecified.

Solution sought to littering

Township cleanup plans delayed; owners sought

The cleanup of dumping sites in Palatine Township is being delayed because of difficulty in contacting owners of the littered properties.

David Rosenbaum, Inspector for the Illinois Attorney General's office, said that he has clerks and other investigators trying to identify property owners by referring ing to files in the recorder of deeds office in Cook County.

The Environmental Division of Atty. Gen. William Scott's office recently notified supposed property owners that they were required to maintain and clean up the land under the Environmental Protection Act. Office investigators have been surveying five major dumping areas in the township during the past month.

THE ATTORNEY general's office was able to identify and contact Palatine Township as the owner of another dumping spot at Clyde and Wilson streets. Since then, the township has contracted an Elgin excavating company to clear the litter off the property. The township also has erected a light on the property and a fence around the property to prevent any further littering from occurring.

Rosenbaum does not know the identities of the property owners of dumping spots at Hicks and Nichols roads; Palatine and Clyde roads; Palos and Dole roads, and Quentin Road and Old Northwest Highway. Rosenbaum said that most of these properties are owned through secret bank trust.

In some of the cases, Rosenbaum's letter requesting that littered property be cleaned up has been passed on by the banks to the members of the trusts. In some of these cases, the banks have notified Rosenbaum that trust members have agreed to clear off the land.

"But, we are only going on their word," Rosenbaum said, "and we have yet to see any other properties being cleaned up."

Rosenbaum plans to conduct hearings after which property owners will be fined for the unsightly dumping if the properties are not cleaned up within the next two months.

Meanwhile, Rosenbaum has informed the Palatine Township Board of Auditors that the township can work toward controlling the dumping situation by operating under the Illinois State Litter Control Act or the Refuse Collection Act.

Township auditors will continue their discussion and consideration of how and under what act the township should fine and prosecute litter violators Monday at 8 p.m. at the Township Hall, 37 N. Plum Grove Rd.

THIS IS belly dancing in disguise! The Palatine Park District is offering a summer program in belly dancing on Tuesday nights at Birchwood Park gymnasium. The teens and women enrolled are still "going through the motions," but should be ready to perform by summer's end.

Vacant lots pose village health hazard

Vacant lots overgrown with weeds are a constant summertime headache for Palatine residents.

In addition to being an eyesore, the weeds are a breeding ground for rodents and mosquitoes, can obstruct vision and represent sheer misery to the hay fever sufferers.

The weeds are recognized as a serious problem but the village "does not have the personnel nor the time to get that deeply involved in weed problems," said Kenneth Dopp, acting health director.

THE VILLAGE code provides that owners of vacant lots be notified if weeds reach a foot in height. The owner is given 10 days to cut the weeds or else the village does the work and bills the owner.

The problem with enforcement of the ordinance is "most of the vacant areas in Palatine are under the control of absentee owners," said Dopp. It is difficult and time consuming to locate the owners and many times the property is held in a trust.

"We end up communicating with an unknown entity," said Dopp. The bank holding the trust relays our concerns to the owners but has no legal responsibility to answer back. "We can go to court but we just don't have the personnel," said Dopp.

A feasibility study of enacting a weed-control program in Palatine is now being conducted by a private firm, said Dopp. The study is looking into the feasibility of controlling broad leaf and noxious weeds through a chemical treatment which would be applied by a helicopter or manually.

IT IS TOO late to start a weed-control program this summer but if the program is approved by the village board it would start by May, he added.

A map identifying the problem weed areas for the feasibility study cites large parcels surrounding Lake Louise and Lake Irene, a parcel north of Cinderella Park and east of Plum Grove Road and a parcel between the Hunting Ridge and Whitecliff subdivisions.

The Public Works Dept. is now cutting weeds throughout the village for the third time, said James Bennett, public works director. In addition to village property and right of way, the public works crews cut weeds on 180 vacant lots which are constant problems.

Owners of the vacant lots are charged an hourly rate for the tractor and manpower which is approximately $60 an hour, said Bennett.

Creative writing can be more than mere writing

by REGINA GEHLER

If your child's teacher suddenly perches on the classroom windowsill and starts singing "Everything is Beautiful" in an off key tone, she probably hasn't cracked under the strain.

She's just starting the first part of an unusual new creative writing program.

The program is being piloted in Winston Park Junior High School this summer and, if judged successful, will be used throughout Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 during the next school year as a part of the regular language arts program, according to teacher Claire Highbarger.

The children are enthusiastic enough about it to cheer the day they discovered class would be extended through recess because it was raining outside, according to Mrs. Highbarger.

The program begins, in kit one, with a "Happening." Mrs. Highbarger started her "Happening" on the first day of summer school without giving the students any warning.

"It was crazy," said Jim Reed, a student in the class.

MRS. HIGHBARGER chose to begin by announcing she was passing out candy to all the blue-eyed children in the class, repeating that she had a "splitting headache," then throwing the candy all over the room.

"One boy just held his head," said Mrs. Highbarger.

The "Happening" contains 14 different events, including a grand finale. Mrs. Highbarger decided to sing "Everything is Beautiful" for her finale. At the end of the sudden piece of insanity, the students are required to describe the events in a 30-second mock news broadcast.

"We're trying to show them that you have a lot of data to collect and how to present it in a condensed form," Mrs. Highbarger said.

"I would never have thought of such a thing," she added. The program contains several different kits on various writing related subjects. Besides delivering mock radio news broadcasts, the students also write telegrams, code and decode messages, read newspapers, do commercials, present television news shows and write newspaper articles.

THERE'S NO ONE favorite project. Each student has his own preferences, but all said they enjoyed the class. "It's not boring like all the other classes," said Janet Gorge. "We always do things."

The class, aptly enough, is called "Hold The Presses. A Bomb Just Dropped."

Pickwick to halt serving of food

The Pickwick House, 10 N. Northwest Hwy., was issued an order to stop all food handling and food preparation by the village Wednesday.

The order was issued by Village Mgr. Anton H. Harwig after employees at the Pickwick House were found cooking on a routine visit by Kenneth Dopp, acting health director. The restaurant, which has been closed for several months for remodeling, does not have a health permit or business license. Only the lounge area of the Pickwick House has village permission to be open.

Accident stops streetsweeper

Palatine's street-sweeping program came to an abrupt halt last week when an automobile rammed into the back of the village's only street sweeper, causing extensive damage.

Repairs on the street sweeper are expected to take two or three weeks. Manual crews from the public works department have been out handling the major problems, but the routine street sweeping is going to have to wait, said Village Mgr. Anton H. Harwig.

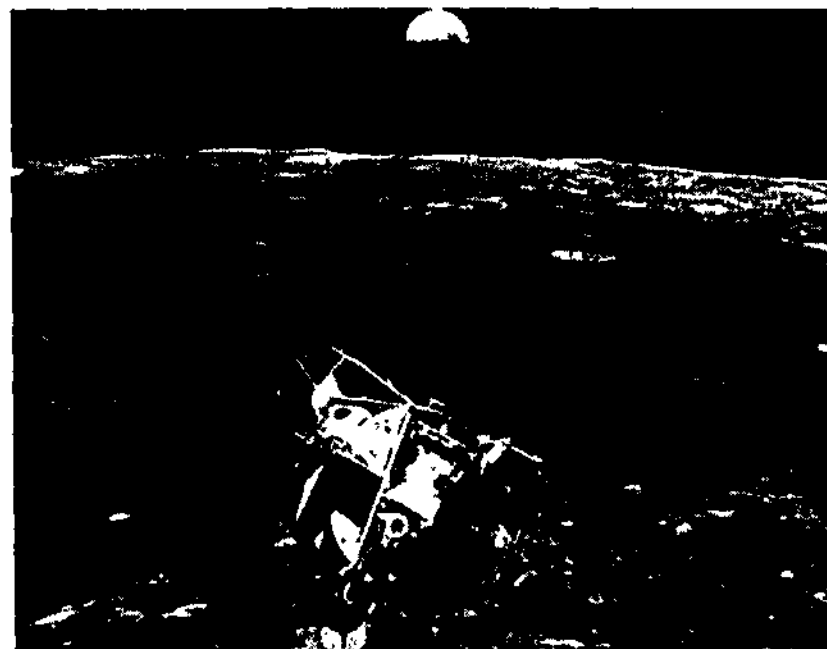

Attempts to rent a streetsweeper have been unsuccessful to date but the village is still trying, said Harwig.

Bids on a new street sweeper will be let by the village Aug. 12. Harwig said he would recommend the village board not trade-in the existing street sweeper.

"The village has grown to the point where we don't need two, but we need more than one," said Harwig. The additional street sweeper would be a reserve that could be used after a storm or in case of a breakdown in the other street sweeper.

Both rundown, neglected

County to check on two cemeteries

A representative of Cook County today will survey two county-owned and neglected pioneer cemeteries in Palatine Township.

Robert Matthews of the Cook County real estate management, has agreed to allow members of the township cemetery board guide him through vandalized and uncared for property of the Old Plum Grove and Sayles cemeteries.

The cemetery committee is presently working to restore four of the township's pioneer cemeteries: Cady, Salem, Old Plum Grove, and Sayles. Since Cady is the only old cemetery owned by the township, it is the first to be renovated.

AVERY V. WOLFRUM, committee chairman, has requested that the county turn possession of the Sayles cemetery over to the township so that renovation can begin. The township has said that it does not want to pay for the restoration of the cemetery if it does not own it, Wolfrum said.

Since the county has no record that it owns the cemetery, it has gone uncared for over the years. Teenagers wander through the overgrown trees and thick shrubbery that totally camouflage some 65 gravestones on the 1.15-acre site at Long Grove Road and Astor Avenue.

Old television sets, suitcases, beer cans and household rubble have been scattered among fragmented headstones. Only narrow dirt paths, as vaguely marked as the graves, wind through the cemetery.

Wolfrum says that in researching the history of the cemetery, he has found evidence that it is owned by the county. Wolfrum has been in contact with Matthews, urging the county to restore the cemetery and clear out the trees and garbage if it cannot be turned over to the township.

MATTHEWS is not certain whether the cemetery deed could be turned over to the township, or whether funds could be made available for the restoration of the cemetery by the county. Matthews will be surveying the cemetery to report back to the county on its condition.

Wolfrum said that of its annual $2,000 budget from the township, the cemetery board is using one-fourth of those funds to keep the grass cut in Cady Cemetery, on Elm Road off of Dundee Road. The remaining funds are used for the restoration of headstones and additional research on the identification of graves in Cady Cemetery.

The earliest known burial in Sayles Cemetery dates back to 1841. The cemetery is in the worst condition of all those that the cemetery board is working on.

Estimates place pool cost at approximately $250,000

Preliminary figures indicate that a swimming pool for the Salt Creek Park District may cost at least $250,000.

That sum would be required to build a 25-meter pool and small bathhouse, according to preliminary calculations, James DeVos, superintendent of parks and recreation, said Thursday.

The park district's planning consultants, Recreation Planning Associates, are scheduled to present a report to the district Aug. 15 on possible sites for the proposed swimming pool. The district has in the past eyed land near Rossiter Lake in Palatine as a possible location for a swimming pool and DeVos said that area still is considered a good site.

THE DISTRICT'S board of commissioners earlier this month agreed to begin cost studies for a pool after the district's access to the Arlington Park Towers hotel pool ended in May. The district has no swimming pool of its own and had been using the hotel facility for its swim program.

The agreement to share the pool facilities prevented the district from having to eliminate its summer swim program, traditionally one of its best-attended courses.

Board members agreed to begin looking into the factors involved in building a swimming pool after deciding against constructing a temporary pool. The temporary structure would have cost $5,000 to $6,000 and would have been an above-ground structure 20 feet by 40 feet in size.

IF A DECISION to build a permanent pool is made, action could not be taken without a referendum vote approving funding for the work.

Opinion surveys conducted for the district last year indicated a majority of residents in the district were in favor of building a pool for the district.

Other construction going on in the district is providing tennis courts at the district's three parks, another request of residents according to the survey.

DeVos said current work should be completed at all three parks by Aug. 15, adding that construction at South Park, Euclid Avenue and Rohlwing Road, where only fencing remains to be put up, may be completed by next week.

Burglars take furs, jewelry from home

Mink coats and diamond jewelry were stolen from the Palatine home of John W. Ignatius, 690 N. Braeburn, Wednesday.

Palatine police said the house was broken into between 5:45 and 10:20 p.m. when the family was not at home. Police believe a prying bar or large screwdriver was used to pry open one of the house windows as means of entry.

Among the stolen items was a $5,500 mink coat, a $500 mink stole, three women's diamond rings, a $2,300 mink jacket and $400 in cash.

Advisory unit to report on project ideas Monday

The recently established Palatine Advisory Board plans to inform village board members Monday of its research into possible future projects and programs.

Advisory board members will present the information following the regular village board meeting beginning at 8 p.m. at the Slade Street Fire Station, 117 W. Slade St.

Glen-Ann Jicha, chairman of the advisory board, said board members plan to research project ideas in five main areas: the Palatine bicentennial, senior citizens, youth, village beautification and village identification.

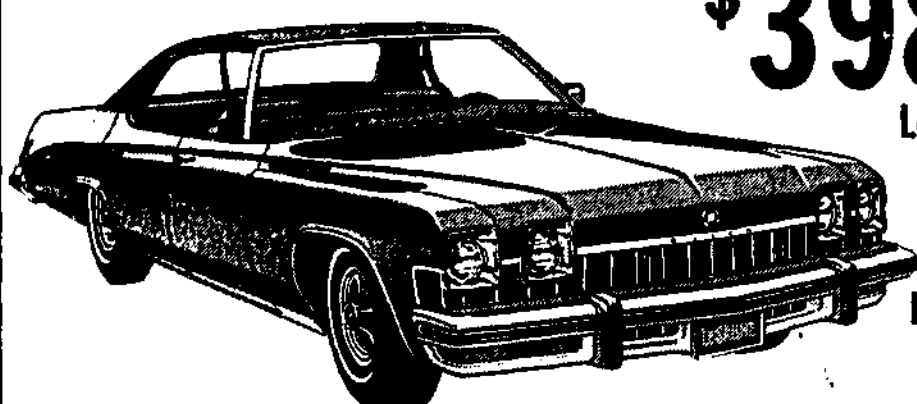

Members of the advisory board are researching project ideas for a village bus service and a teen center. The board recently mailed letters to Palatine residents requesting additional project possibilities.

The advisory board was established in January through an ordinance enacted by the village board to help increase communication between citizens and local government units.

The board consists of 10 appointed members who are former village presidents, or members of the village's citizens', community or business and industry councils.

Mrs. Jicha was appointed board chairman by Village Pres. Wendell Jones.

Scott to file suit to halt police magazine ad scheme

The suit, to be filed in Circuit Court, is aimed at halting the operation.

The action follows the arrest Tuesday of a "runner" for the magazine by Buffalo Grove police on a charge of attempted theft. Louis A. DeGrande of Chicago was arrested as he attempted to pick up $25 for an advertisement in the magazine at Rose-Lynn Flooring Store, 16 Ranch Mart.

Defendants named in the suit in addition to the Illinois Police Bulletin, are Thaddeus C. Toudor, Joseph Blanco and James Calona.

THE SUIT charges that Toudor and his associates called Chicago area businesses on the telephone to solicit contributions for advertisements in the "official" Illinois Police Bulletin.

Donald Mulack, assistant attorney general in the charitable trusts and donations division, said the magazine is not circulated among legitimate police organizations. The publication contains 85 per cent advertisements and has no professional content or readership value, he said.

"It's a sham," said Mulack of the magazine scheme. The 100 S. LaSalle St., Chicago address given by the magazine operators is fake, he said. An answering service at the location takes calls for Illinois Police Bulletin.

The runners and the answering service receive instructions in person from the operators, said Mulack, adding that Toudor's base of operations is unknown. One check for a $150 contribution from a Roselle firm was chased at the Crown

Liquor Store on the South side of Chicago.

MULACK said a standard sales pitch was used for the Illinois Police Bulletin ad sales. A man who identifies himself as a state police officer calls a business in the Chicago area. The caller asks whether the business executive would contribute a donation for an issue of the magazine honoring state police. Donations range from $35 to $150. A runner is sent out to collect the money. He keeps 3 per cent of the money and turns the rest over to Blanco or another operator, who hands out another list of advertisers.

An additional enticement to advertisers was the offer of an Illinois Bureau of Investigation identification card by the operators. He name closely resembles the Illinois Bureau of Investigation title, Mulack noted. Advertisers were told that the card would grant access to police files on employees.

Illinois Police Bulletin apparently originated in November, 1972. One edition was published in 1973 and operators claimed that two editions would be published in 1974. The publication consists of advertiser listings (name and address), ads for the magazine and a story on marijuana which Mulack said was taken verbatim from a government publication.

THE SCHEME was designed to attract "patriotic, law-abiding members of the public," leading them to believe that contributions would be "used for police and legitimate police organizations," Scott charged.

The suit asks that the Illinois Police Bulletin operators be restrained from further solicitations. Scott also seeks an accounting for funds collected by the operators and that the funds be placed in a "constructive trust." The "large" amount of money collected by the group is unspecified.

Preliminary figures place park pool cost at $250,000

Preliminary figures indicate that a swimming pool for the Salt Creek Park District may cost at least $250,000.

That sum would be required to build a 25-meter pool and small bathhouse, according to preliminary calculations, James DeVos, superintendent of parks and recreation, said Thursday.

The park district's planning consultants, Recreation Planning Associates, are scheduled to present a report to the district Aug. 15 on possible sites for the proposed swimming pool. The district has in the past eyed land near Rossiter Lake in Palatine as a possible location for a swimming pool and DeVos said that area still is considered a good site.

THE DISTRICT'S board of commissioners earlier this month agreed to begin cost studies for a pool after the district's access to the Arlington Park Towers hotel pool ended in May. The district has no swimming pool of its own and had been using the hotel facility for its swim program.

Summer swim sessions for the district's residents are being held in conjunction with the Rolling Meadows Park District's program at the city's sports complex.

The agreement to share the pool facilities prevented the district from having to eliminate its summer swim program, traditionally one of its best-attended courses.

Board members agreed to begin looking into the factors involved in building a swimming pool after deciding against constructing a temporary pool. The temporary structure would have cost $5,000 to $6,000 and would have been an above-ground structure 20 feet by 40 feet in size.

IF A DECISION to build a permanent pool is made, action could not be taken without a referendum vote approving funding for the work.

Opinion surveys conducted for the district last year indicated a majority of residents in the district were in favor of building a pool for the district.

Other construction going on in the district is providing tennis courts at the district's three parks, another request of residents according to the survey.

DeVos said current work should be completed at all three parks by Aug. 15, adding that construction at South Park, Euclid Avenue and Rohlwing Road, where only fencing remains to be put up, may be completed by next week.

Baseball field to be named for Alquist

One of the three baseball fields in South Park will be named the Alquist Field during ceremonies starting at 1 p.m. Sunday at the field.

Salk II, behind the public works building, 3200 Central Rd., is being named in honor of Irving Alquist, former president of the Rolling Meadows Boys Baseball Assn., who died in June.

The ceremony will be followed by a boys baseball game.

Creative writing can be more than mere writing

by REGINA OEHLER

If your child's teacher suddenly perches on the classroom windowsill and starts singing "Everything is Beautiful" in an off key tone, she probably hasn't cracked under the strain.

She's just starting the first part of an unusual new creative writing program.

The program is being piloted in Winston Park Junior High School this summer and, if judged successful, will be used throughout Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 during the next school year as a part of the regular language arts program, according to teacher Claire Highbarger.

The children are enthusiastic enough about it to cheer the day they discovered class would be extended through recess because it was raining outside, according to Mrs. Highbarger.

The program begins, in kit one, with a "Happening." Mrs. Highbarger started her "Happening" on the first day of summer school without giving the students any warning.

"It was crazy," said Jim Reed, a student in the class.

MRS. HIGHBARGER chose to begin by announcing she was passing out candy to all the blue-eyed children in the class, repeating that she had a "splitting headache," then throwing the candy all over the room.

"One boy just held his head," said Mrs. Highbarger.

The "Happening" contains 14 different events, including a grand finale. Mrs. Highbarger decided to sing "Everything is Beautiful" for her finale. At the end of the sudden piece of insanity, the students are required to describe the events in a 30-second mock news broadcast.

"We're trying to show them that you have a lot of data to collect and how to present it in a condensed form," Mrs. Highbarger said.

"I would never have thought of such a thing," she added. The program contains several different kits on various writing related subjects. Besides delivering mock radio news broadcasts, the students also write telegrams, code and de-

Township cleanup plans hit a snag

The cleanup of dumping sites in Palatine Township is being delayed because of difficulty in contacting owners of the littered properties.

David Rosenbaum, inspector for the Illinois Attorney General's office, said that he has clerks and other investigators trying to identify property owners by referring to files in the recorder of deeds office in Cook County.

west Highway. Rosenbaum said that most of these properties are owned through secret bank trust.

In some of the cases, Rosenbaum's letter requesting that littered property be cleaned up has been passed on by the banks to the members of the trusts. In some of these cases, the banks have notified Rosenbaum that trust members have agreed to clear off the land.

"But, we are only going on their word," Rosenbaum said, "and we have yet to see any other properties being cleaned up."

Rosenbaum plans to conduct hearings after which property owners will be fined for the unsightly dumping if the properties are not cleaned up within the next two months.

Meanwhile, Rosenbaum has informed the Palatine Township Board of Auditors that the township can work toward controlling the dumping situation by operating under the Illinois State Litter Control Act or the Refuse Collection Act.

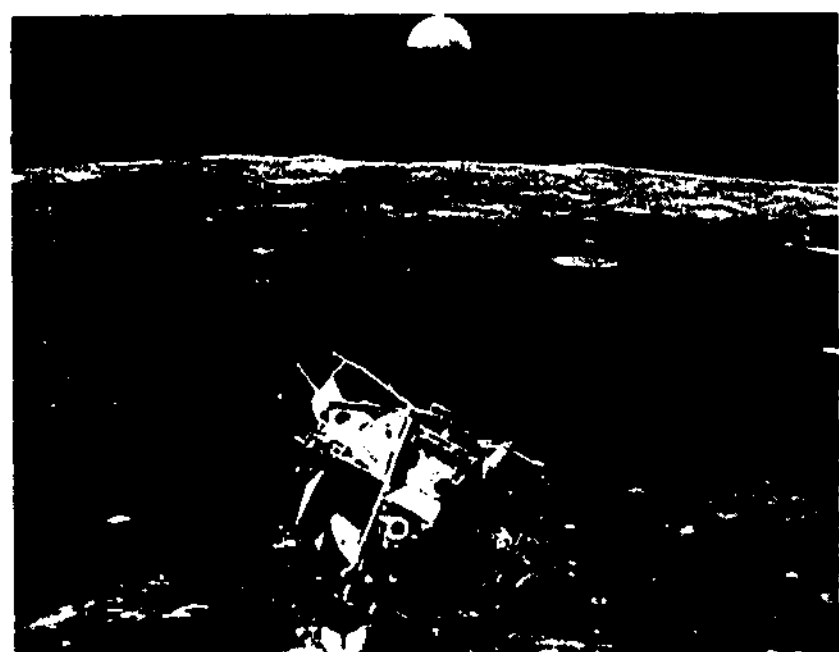

Township auditors will continue their discussion and consideration of how and under what act the township should fine and prosecute litter violators Monday at 8 p.m. at the Township Hall, 37 N. Plum Grove Rd.

Both rundown, neglected

County to check on two cemeteries

A representative of Cook County today will survey two county-owned and neglected pioneer cemeteries in Palatine Township.

Robert Matthews of the Cook County real estate management, has agreed to allow members of the township cemetery board guide him through vandalized and uncared for property of the Old Plum Grove and Sayles cemeteries.

The cemetery committee is presently working to restore four of the township's pioneer cemeteries: Cady, Salem, Old Plum Grove, and Sayles. Since Cady is the only old cemetery owned by the township, it is the first to be renovated.

AVERRY V. WOLFRUM, committee chairman, has requested that the county turn possession of the Sayles cemetery over to the township so that renovation can begin. The township has said that it does not want to pay for the restoration of the cemetery if it does not own it, Wolfrum said.

Since the county has no record that it owns the cemetery, it has gone uncared for over the years. Teenagers wander through the overgrown trees and thick shrubbery that totally camouflage some 65 gravestones on the 1.15-acre site at Long Grove Road and Astor Avenue.

Old television sets, suitcases, beer cans and household rubble have been scattered among fragmented headstones. Only narrow dirt paths, as vaguely marked as the graves, wind through the cemetery.

Wolfrum says that in researching the history of the cemetery, he has found evidence that it is owned by the county. Wolfrum has been in contact with Matthews, urging the county to restore the cemetery and clear out the trees and garbage if it cannot be turned over to the township.

MATTHEWS IS not certain whether the cemetery deed could be turned over to the township, or whether funds could be made available for the restoration of the cemetery by the county. Matthews will be surveying the cemetery to report back to the county on its condition.

Wolfrum said that of its annual $2,000 budget from the township, the cemetery board is using one-fourth of those funds to keep the grass cut in Cady Cemetery, on Elm Road off of Dundee Road. The remaining funds are used for the restoration of headstones and additional research on the identification of graves in Cady Cemetery.

Parks may have to sell tax warrants

The Salt Creek Park District may be forced to sell tax anticipation warrants by fall if delays in the issuance of Cook County real estate tax bills persists.

The district has received only about half the funds due it because of the continuing delay in the issuance of tax bills for 1973. Failure by the legislature to determine an equalizer rate necessary in figuring the bills has put off collection and distribution of the funds.

James DeVos, supt. of Parks and Recreation, said Thursday about $8,400 of $19,000 expected due has been sent to the district, but DeVos said the district is not yet in need of supplemental funds.

"It's causing some problems," DeVos said. "We're transferring money (from certain budgeted categories to others which need funds)." He said the district could operate for another two months with the funds it has.

After that time, however, the district may have to consider obtaining funds through the sale of tax anticipation warrants. "If we don't get the money soon (within the next two months), we may have to (sell the warrants)," DeVos said.

Most of the district's $156,000 budget for the current fiscal year is derived from tax money, with another portion coming mainly from fees for park district programs.

Money collected by the county and distributed to date has come from taxes based on estimated bills for the first half of the year. Bills were estimated according to half the tax rate charged on 1972 bills. Payment for the first installment of the tax payment was due March 1. The deadline for payment of the rest of the tax bill had been planned for Aug. 1, but that date will likely have to be postponed when the bills are issued.

Library fund drive set

Volunteers will be passing fund-raising envelopes around Rolling Meadows soon, as the Friends of the Library start their annual fund drive.

The money will be used for the library, according to Louise Wasner, who is in charge of the fund-raising effort. Last year, the Friends used the money to purchase audio visual equipment for the library, including a printing press, a movie camera and projectors.

Correction

Last year's resident admission costs for children for the Rolling Meadows Park District Ice Skating Arena was 75 cents, not 50 cents as reported in yesterday's Herald.

The fee was erroneously listed as 50 cents in the 1973 park district fall program and activities brochures.

Scott to file suit to halt police magazine ad scheme

by LEA TONKIN

Illinois Atty. Gen. William Scott said Thursday he will file suit this morning against the Illinois Police Bulletin magazine operation, which has attracted contributions from businesses in the Northwest suburbs and throughout the Chicago metropolitan area.

The suit, to be filed in Circuit Court, is aimed at halting the operation.

The action follows the arrest Tuesday of a "runner" for the magazine by Buffalo Grove police on a charge of attempted theft. Louis A. DeGrande of Chicago was arrested as he attempted to pick up $25 for an advertisement in the magazine at Rose-Lynn Flooring Store, 16 Ranch Mart.

Defendants named in the suit in addition to the Illinois Police Bulletin, are Thaddeus C. Toudor, Joseph Blanco and James Calona.

THE SUIT charges that Toudor and his associates called Chicago area businesses on the telephone to solicit contributions for advertisements in the "official" Illinois Police Bulletin.

Strike aftermath

by NANCY COWGER

One year ago today, 28 men who worked in the Hoffman Estates Public Works Dept. made one of the most crucial decisions of their lives.

They struck their jobs for one day after village officials allegedly made last minute language changes in a contract ready for ratification, resulting in what the men felt was withdrawal of union recognition.

The entire department was fired as a result of the strike.

A year later, some men still are not working. The tragedy of their lives is measured in unpaid bills and young families living with their parents and abandoned pride.

THE FIRINGS WERE a boon to others of the men — like Bob Ackerman, who now earns more money in the Rolling Meadows Streets Dept. than he would if he still worked in Hoffman Estates. And Norman Simons, a Teamster hauling steel cross country in a semi-tractor trailer.

The men have changed in the last 12 months. Young, hurt and confident, they screamed obscenities at Hoffman Estates Village Pres. Virginia Hayter a year ago, comparing her to Hitler. While they still maintain they were wronged, few have nursed their hatred of the village officials who tossed them out onto the streets.

If their acrimony has dulled, their desire to return to old jobs has not. In all but a few cases, their certainty that they will return has ripened to an assurance that justice will be on their side, if only they are patient.

The former village employees, members of Local 2041, American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, AFL-CIO (AFSME), filed suit against the village last fall. They demanded their immediate reinstatement and back pay. Nothing happened in the suit until last month, when it was assigned for trial to Circuit Court Judge Daniel Covelli, and lawyers paid by the union national requested reassignment to a new judge. The request was approved, but the new judge has not been chosen. Attorneys predict the case could go to trial by fall.

EVEN IF THE JUDGE orders the men rehired, they are not likely to regain their jobs in the near future. Both the village and the union have pledged to appeal if the court decides against them. Appeals take time.

The wait has tried the patience of many of the men. Simons, at 37 the oldest and most mature of the strikers, said his initial estimate was it would be three months before he was back on the job.

Before the three months had expired, Simons changed his forecast. Once the matter went to court, "I knew almost from the outset it would be one to 1½ years before it was settled," said Simons.

Simons said his income is "much higher" than it was with the village, higher even than current salaries for his old job, which have been increased twice in the year. With three children at home, he immediately looked for a new job, and found his first position driving a bus for Cook County School Bus Co., Elk Grove Village. He had worked for them before.

ALTHOUGH HE HAD a job almost at once, Simons still came close to losing his home. He was paid $3 per hour but was guaranteed only four hours work per day. He scraped through by taking charter calls and odd jobs for extra money, until a few months later he landed the Teamsters position.

"I'm getting there," said Simons. "It has taken me this long, and I'm still not completely straightened out financially," he said. He's not so sure he would take his job back now, even if it were offered.

Of the events last year, Simons said, "I don't feel our demands were so terrible, and apparently the village board didn't either." The salaries the men asked for, the training programs they sought, the safety equipment and tools they bargained for before the strike, all have been given to replacement employees.

What happened, said Simons, happened because people over reacted — the men were "hasty" in calling in sick, a drastic action. The village responded with too much, too fast when it fired an entire department.

BARRY T. SHEALY, one of those most vocally bitter after the firings, said he does "not have any animosity" toward Mrs. Hayter now. Although he does not believe she was open-minded with the men, if she "did what she felt was right" he is no longer angry. But Shealy maintains the village was wrong, no matter what its officials felt, and will be proven so in court.

"It's the time" that's been hard, said Shealy, the courts "are slow." But he adds, "the longer it's been, the more I believe we were right in concept."

Shealy's financial situation has deteriorated over the year. "My output is more than my input, money wise," he said. He too is on his second job since leaving the village. He still does "not come near making what I did with the village."

Facing even worse problems is Daniel Hedlund, who now lives in Elgin and says he's "doing a slow backfloat — going downhill." He drives a truck for a landscaper. Hedlund said Pres. Hayter was dead wrong, "but she did what she thought was right and necessary," and he feels no bitterness.

Both men want to return to village work.

SO DOES DAVE Eversole, who is earning much more now than he did with the village but doesn't like truck driving for a construction company, and fears the layoffs of seasonal work. But Eversole would return only if Mrs. Hayter quits, he said. Village officials "should be able to stay cool and judge things," he said.

Mrs. Hayter was in "a controlling position with a lot of responsibility," and she over reacted, he feels. Eversole agrees the men made mistakes in their dealings with the village, but "the village got terrified," he said. "I don't think any one party is completely at fault," he said.

Bob Mundo has held several jobs since the village fired him, and started a new one Thursday. He worked at gas stations, and was laid off during the fuel shortages. He worked in construction, and was laid off during the cement strike. Still single and living at home, Mundo was hurt less by loss of income than were some of the men.

JOHN DESHON and Steven Gorlinski are in much the same position as Mundo. Young, single and able to live with their parents, they have not been financially crippled by being out of work, and Gorlinski has not even sought a permanent job. When he needs money, he does odd jobs. Otherwise, he plays hockey for the Woodfield Wildcats and is waiting for the village to hire him back. He will try again this fall, as he did last year, for a position on the Chicago Cougars.

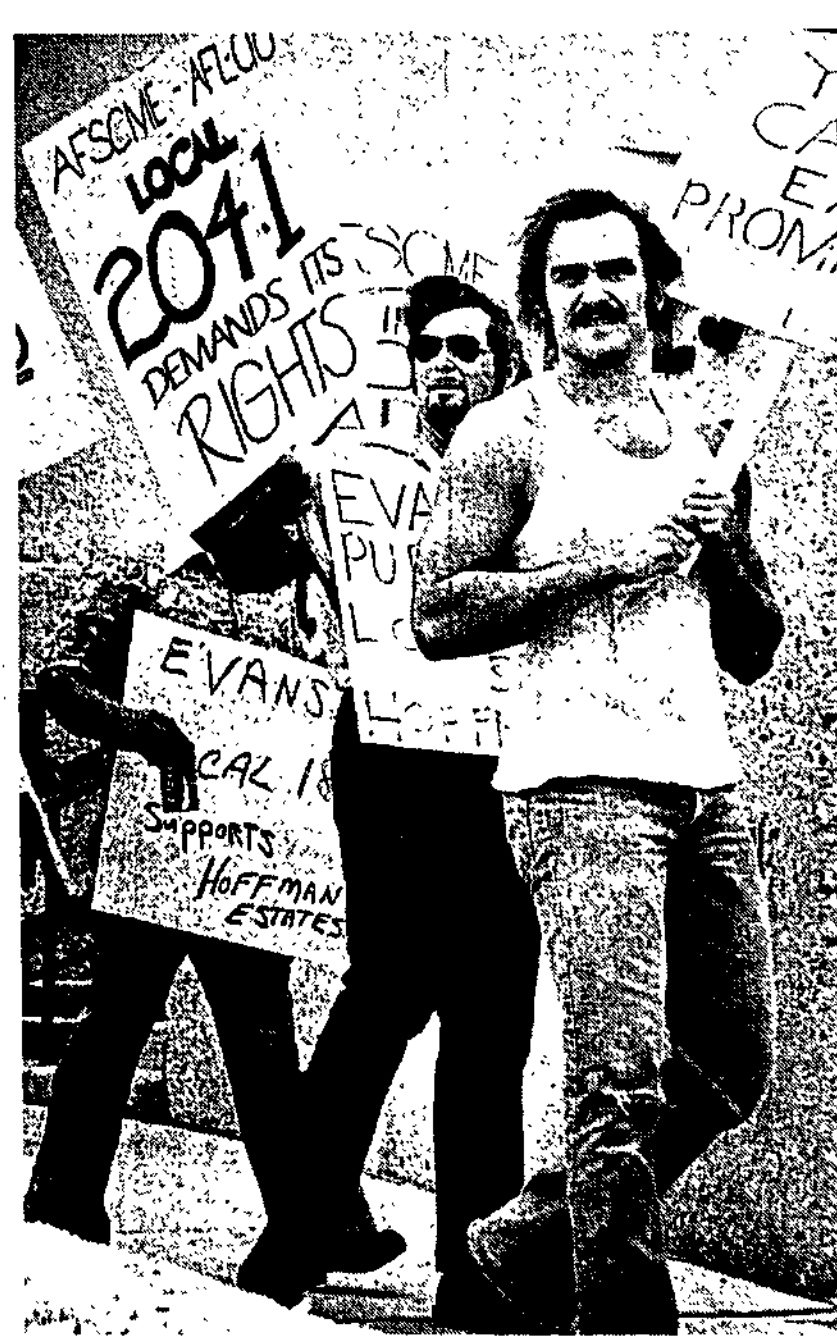

Deshon feels the union and the village should have "worked something out for both sides," he said, and the crisis was "more or less the fault of everybody's bullheadedness."

Mike Ludwick, who had been injured on the village job and underwent knee surgery after the firings, collected workmen's compensation until February. He now works in a warehouse, sales and display office in Elk Grove Village, and has been able to buy a new home in the past year. He wants to go back to village work because he would be serving people he knows, "friends and neighbors."

PERHAPS THE true success story of the Hoffman Estates employee dispute is Ackerman, totally deaf but holding a higher paying and more satisfying job in the Rolling Meadows Public Works Dept. than he did in Hoffman Estates. Ackerman and his wife, who also is deaf, are about to move into their own apartment for the first time since their marriage and treasure their coming to independence. Ackerman has just received a raise, and considers himself "better off" now than he would be had the strike never occurred. What happened was "a very big misunderstanding all the way around that was carried too far."

Though most of the men are determined not to cry "uncle" in their lawsuit against the village, they also are more prone now to say they contributed toward their own downfall.

Hedlund's statement that he's "learned to think before I act, to take more time in contemplating the situation," was expressed this week by nearly all of them.

PICKET LINES turned into unemployment lines for many Hoffman Estates public works men fired after a strike one year ago today. Their lawsuit still is pending, and most still nurse hopes of returning to village work someday.

'Pigeon drop' bilks woman of $1,500

by STIRLING MORITA

A Hoffman Estates woman fell victim Wednesday to a "pigeon drop" in which two confidence women bilked her of $1,500.

The woman, who police asked not be identified, was approached Wednesday afternoon by two women in the Dominick's food store near Roselle and Golf roads.

They told her they had found $30,000 in an envelope with a note indicating the money belonged to a gambler. They asked her to share in the find. The two women told her they worked for an attorney at the nearby Golf Rose Shopping Center and were going to consult the attorney about the legality surrounding their find.

The three women went to the shopping center and one went inside an office for several minutes, then returned. The woman told the victim it would be legal for all three to share in the $30,000 but that they needed to come up with $1,500 each for lawyer's fees.

They convinced the victim to withdraw her share from her account at the Roselle State Bank. It appears the two women then took the $1,500 from their victim, gave her a worthless receipt, and departed.

One suspect is described as being in her 30s, the other in her mid 20s. Hoffman Estates police are investigating.

Police authorities warn that residents should be leary of any person approaching them with a get-rich-quick proposition and to report suspicious activity to authorities.

Construction firm dropped by schools

The contract with Ranke-Cimo and Associates for construction of Einstein Elementary School was terminated by the Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 Board of Education Thursday night.

Ranke-Cimo received notice from the district June 20 that the contract would be terminated if construction work was not completed by July 10. The building was supposed to have been completed by December, 1973.

S. Guy Fishman, architect for the school being built on Laurie Lane in Hanover Park, said little has been done on the building since the letter was sent.

AT THE JUNE board meeting, a representative from the construction company guaranteed the district its work would be completed by July 10 unless inclement weather occurred.

At Thursday's meeting, Fishman said, "I'm sorry to say the contractor is not capable of completing his job. It would be my recommendation to terminate the contract."

Notice of the contract's termination was sent to the bonding company, Travelers Insurance Co., and to Ranke-Cimo.

Ranke-Cimo also received notice from Dist. 54 for payment of $23,000 of liquidated damages at $100 per day for the 230 days the building was overdue. The amount will be withheld from the balance of payment due on the contract.

The bonding company will attempt to have the building completed by Aug. 29; the first day of the school year, said Patricia Carbon, accountant analyst. She said the bonding company will discuss the situation with Dist. 54 to decide whether Travelers should enter into a contract with another contractor, rehire Ranke-Cimo or have Dist. 54 hire another contractor.

THE TERMINATION of Ranke-Cimo's contract is the first time Dist. 54 has terminated a contract with a construction company.

Gas leak shortens workday at Heinz Co.

Approximately 50 employees of the H. J. Heinz Co., Schaumburg, were evacuated Thursday morning when ammonia gas seeped from a broken pipe at the facility. No injuries were reported.

The incident occurred about 8:50 a.m. at the factory, 1117 E. Wiley Rd. Police said a forklift apparently struck an ammonia pipe in a freezer storage area at the plant.

Bilingual program stresses culture to teach language

by JUDY JOBBITT

Oh Keum Soo smiles as she plays the piano in the hallway at Dooley School. Students rushing back from recess stop short and listen. Her impromptu performance gets a round of applause from all who could hear.

For Keum Soo, who arrived in America from Korea last summer, the piano was her first means of expressing herself to classmates last fall. She could not speak English and the classroom was "all dark," she said as she reflected on that experience.

Now sixth-grader Keum Soo has achieved a fourth grade reading level and can comprehend and speak English, her second language.

KEUM SOO'S success story is being repeated throughout Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 as the bilingual program extends to meet the needs of foreign students who move into the district.

More than 60 children are involved in the bilingual program that includes 22 languages such as Indian dialects, Polish, Italian, German, French and Oriental languages.

About half of these students also are participating in a special bilingual summer school program to help them continue learning English throughout the summer months and bring them closer to their grade level in English skills.

Most students involved in the bilingual program are Spanish-American and are children of parents who migrated to the Chicago area because of its reputation for good jobs.

DIST. 54 has had a bilingual, or more appropriately a multi-cultural, program since 1971. At that time Ronald Ruble, associate superintendent in charge of personnel, was receiving calls from principals with students who spoke little or no English.

That year Darold Donnell was hired as a teacher aide to help the Spanish-American students learn English. Now the bilingual staff has been expanded to include Bob Thompson and Sue Hageman as full-time teachers. Between them they speak Spanish, German and French.

They term their program as multi-cultural because its stress differs from the common concept of bilingual. Because of the number of languages and students involved, the teachers use a tutorial method to help the students learn English and adjust to the American culture.

Students are taught in their native language as well as in English, which is the stress of the "bilingual" concept. They could not implement this type of program, said Thompson, because the teachers do not know all the language and the students are currently in 14 schools throughout the district and at all grade levels.

THE MULTICULTURAL aspect also affects the other students in the classroom. For example when Keum Soo started school last fall, she could not relate to her fellow classmates. To help bridge the gap, Thompson tried to make the other students understand her situation.

They received a list of common Korean words and were asked their meaning. From this experience as well as hearing Keum Soo speak her language, they understood her position better.

The demonstration ended with Keum Soo playing the piano, an instrument she has been studying since she was young. Everyone was able to understand this "language" and she made her first breakthrough.

"The first couple of weeks are the most difficult," said Thompson. "They just must live through them." Then students start establishing contacts and pick up the language, he said.

Students are taught through a pictorial process. Understanding comes first through picture-verbal contact. Once this is achieved, students are taught to speak the language. Then reading and writing follow in a natural progression.

The district received $6,300 from state aid last year for a teacher aide and materials.

THOUGH THE district applied to the state for $18,000 to expand the program next year, the state has indicated it will not approve the grant because the district does not teach the students in their own language 50 per cent of the time and does not follow state guidelines, said Carl Seltzer, assistant superintendent in charge of curriculum.

The state's guidelines would not allow the tutorial approach necessary in Dist. 54 because of the students' diverse backgrounds.

Next year, however, the district intends to pilot a traditional bilingual classroom for Spanish speaking students.

This summer the district is offering a special session for students to help them bridge the gap in their English comprehension and actual grade level. Beyond the teacher-student contact, emphasis is placed on the home. Parental contact and communication is maintained to help the student learn at home and achieve additional support for the first hard months.

Soon, however, they mix right in, picking up their new language and culture.

MUSIC BREAKS language barriers that bilingual students like Oh Keum Soo must cross when they arrive in the United States. Keum Soo moved to the area from Korea with her family and now can read and write English well.

Fire district to sell tax warrants

The delay in distribution of tax money is plaguing the already financially troubled Hoffman Estates Fire Protection District.

The fire district's board of trustees Wednesday night authorized James Gintzler, district treasurer, to sell $50,000 in tax anticipation warrants when funds are needed.

The district already has $125,000 in tax anticipation warrants outstanding with the Suburban Bank of Hoffman Estates. Gintzler told the board, after approval of monthly bills, that the fund balance was approximately $9,800. He noted he needed approximately $25,000 from the sale of one tax warrant to meet the fire district payroll Aug. 1.

"HOPEFULLY, we will not have to use the second one (tax anticipation warrant) if the money comes in September," Gintzler said.

Arthur Zimmerman, district attorney, told the board he had heard tax money might be coming in September. The delay in distribution of funds has resulted because of the uncertainty over what the tax multiplier will be for Cook County. In connection with district financial matters, district officials are slated to meet Saturday with village authorities concerning the district's request for funds from the village. Village Mgr. George Longmeyer said there apparently was some misunderstanding about amounts promised to the district and that distribution of the funds would be discussed at the meeting.

District trustees had asked the village for $242,194 to cover deficits in last year's budget, provide pay increases this year and allow hiring of 10 additional firefighters. The village has promised to back this year's pay raises estimated at $25,000 and last year's raises, amounting to $20,000. The district has not received any money.

IN OTHER BUSINESS, district trustees approved a $893,169 appropriations ordinance for the 1974-75 fiscal year. The figure is overstated to allow spending of extra, unanticipated tax funds.

HELLO SCHAUMBURG

If the new Ponderosa Steak House were just another place to take your family for an inexpensive dinner, we wouldn't bother opening the doors.

We can do better than that.

We will, of course, serve you a very fine steak, broiled to your order, with plenty of other good food to go along with it.

But we'll also greet you at your car with an umbrella if it's raining.

We will help your children with their trays.

And we will refill your coffee and soft drink cups free, because we want you to leave Ponderosa as happy as possible, not as fast as possible.

If, at any time or for any reason, you are less than completely satisfied with our food, our service or anything else about Ponderosa, we won't let you leave until you are completely satisfied.

Welcome to Ponderosa.

Scott to file suit to halt police magazine ad scheme

by LEA TONKIN

Illinois Atty. Gen. William Scott said Thursday he will file suit this morning against the Illinois Police Bulletin magazine operation, which has attracted contributions from businesses in the Northwest suburbs and throughout the Chicago metropolitan area.

The suit, to be filed in Circuit Court, is aimed at halting the operation.

The action follows the arrest Tuesday of a "runner" for the magazine by Buffalo Grove police on a charge of attempted theft. Louis A. DeGrande of Chicago was arrested as he attempted to pick up $25 for an advertisement in the magazine at Rose-Lynn Flooring Store, 16 Ranch Mart.

Defendants named in the suit in addition to the Illinois Police Bulletin, are Thaddeus C. Toudor, Joseph Bianco and James Calona.

THE SUIT charges that Toudor and his associates called Chicago area businesses on the telephone to solicit contributions for advertisements in the "official" Illinois Police Bulletin.

Donald Mulack, assistant attorney general in the charitable trusts and donations division, said the magazine is not circulated among legitimate police organizations. The publication contains 95 per cent advertisements and has no professional content or readership value, he said.

"It's a sham," said Mulack of the magazine scheme. The 100 S. LaSalle St., Chicago address given by the magazine operators is fake, he said. An answering service at the location takes calls for Illinois Police Bulletin.

The runners and the answering service receive instructions in person from the operators, said Mulack, adding that Toudor's base of operations is unknown. One check for a $150 contribution from a Roselle firm was chased at the Crown

Liquor Store on the South side of Chicago.

MULACK said a standard sales pitch was used for the Illinois Police Bulletin ad sales. A man who identifies himself as a state police officer calls a business in the Chicago area. The caller asks whether the business executive would contribute a donation for an issue of the magazine honoring state police. Donations range from $35 to $150. A runner is sent out to collect the money. He keeps 3 per cent of the money and turns the rest over to Bianco or another operator, who hands out another list of advertisers. An additional enticement to advertisers was the offer of an Illinois Bureau of Information identification card by the operators. He name closely resembles the Illinois Bureau of Investigation title, Mulack noted. Advertisers were told that the card would grant access to police files on employees.

Illinois Police Bulletin apparently originated in November, 1972. One edition was published in 1973 and operators claimed that two editions would be published in 1974. The publication consists of advertiser listings (name and address), ads for the magazine and a story on marijuana which Mulack said was taken verbatim from a government publication.

THE SCHEME was designed to attract "patriotic, law-abiding members of the public," leading them to believe that contributions would be "used for police and legitimate police organizations," Scott charged.

The suit asks that the Illinois Police Bulletin operators be restrained from further solicitations. Scott also seeks an accounting for funds collected by the operators and that the funds be placed in a "constructive trust." The "large" amount of money collected by the group is unspecified.

School chief gets job of finding assistant

A new assistant superintendent for River Trails Dist. 25 will be chosen by Supt. John Fridlund.

Board of Education Pres. Michael Sheyker said Thursday Fridlund has a free hand to select a replacement for James Retzlaff, who was reassigned as principal of River Road School. Sheyker added that the job duties or job description of the assistant superintendent's post will probably be changed when the position is filled.

As assistant superintendent, Retzlaff was in charge of the district's special education program, building maintenance, transportation and personnel matters.

Fridlund said he has no ideas on how the job will change. "I haven't even thought about it yet," Fridlund said Thursday. He added that any duty changes will have to be made consistent with the strong points or special interest areas of whoever gets the job.

THE SUPERINTENDENT also said no deadline or timetable for finding a successor for Retzlaff has been outlined. Retzlaff will assume his new duties Aug. 12. At the same time Joseph Wawak, current principal of River Road School, will assume the principalship at Indian Grove School.

Fridlund said Retzlaff's current duties will be distributed among other administrative personnel after Aug. 12 until a new assistant superintendent is named.

Sheyker said the board will probably go along with whoever Fridlund recommends for the post. Fridlund said it is not unusual for the board to leave such a task to the superintendent.

Retzlaff had requested the transfer to the principal's position and the announcement of the staff reshuffling was made by the board of education late Tuesday.

At least one negative vote looms on Mrs. Reid hiring

by JILL BETTNER

At least one School Dist. 21 board member may vote against hiring former colleague Mary Joan Reid for a paid full-time administrative position at a special meeting tonight.

Mrs. Reid resigned from the board last week in order to assume the position of public relations director and volunteer coordinator at an annual salary of $9,000. She was on the Dist. 21 board for nine years, before her resignation which becomes effective Thursday.

Board members said Mrs. Reid's hiring has elicited several negative comments from the community. Dist. 21 serves Wheeling, Buffalo Grove, and portions of Arlington Heights and Mount Prospect.

School board member Lillian Stiller of Wheeling told The Herald Thursday Mrs. Reid's resignation and application for the Dist. 21 position came as a surprise to her. She also said she is not sure employing the former school board member is a good idea.

"If I had to vote now, I couldn't," Mrs. Stiller said of hiring Mrs. Reid. "I have to have the answers to several questions before I can vote."

AMONG questions concerning Mrs. Stiller, she said, are Mrs. Reid's qualifications for the Dist. 21 job, the number of other persons who applied and their qualifications and how well the fact that the position was available was publicized by the district.

Mrs. Stiller said she has received about 10 telephone calls regarding Mrs. Reid's resignation since it was announced last week.

Saying that all those who had called her were Wheeling residents, Mrs. Stiller commented, "I think people in Wheeling are a little sensitive these days."

ON THE ROOF OF Forest View School in Mount Prospect workers begin a repair job. The repairs are part of a $500,000 project which calls for roofing work to be done at 18 schools in Elk Grove Township Dist. 59. Forest View will receive the most extensive work. The project will continue through summer into fall.

Some revisions planned

Gifted student program to continue

by LUISA GINETTI

Three courses initiated last year for gifted students in Mount Prospect Dist. 57 will continue this fall with new goals and short-range objectives.

The three programs, MAD (music, art and drama), developmental reading and video-taped instruction were introduced last year as part of the district's gifted program for junior high students.

Based on evaluations from the first year of the programs, district officials have developed an outline for conducting the programs this year, including criteria for identifying students who qualify for participation, program procedures and activities, and a procedure for evaluation.

Goals and short-range objectives vary for each course. In MAD the aim is to refine the course so it meets individual needs as well as total class involvement.

The aim of developmental reading has been targeted at getting students in the program to encourage their classmates who are not in the program to broaden their reading habits.

A MORE SPECIFIC goal has been set for the video-taped instruction class — to have student-prepared video tapes become part of the junior high Learning Resource Center tape collection for use in the instructional program.

Specific ways of conducting the MAD and developmental reading programs so they attain the stated general goals have not been finalized. In MAD, for example, procedures call for teachers to be involved in workshop and curriculum activities with the program "to be adjusted accordingly."

Procedures stated for developmental reading call for the "opportunities to be structured so gifted students involved in projects will be able to share their data with fellow students in an instructional setting."

VIDEO-TAPED instruction has been more clearly fashioned. Program procedures call for selected students to be trained to operate equipment while others will prepare instructional scripts and lead seminars. All sessions will be taped and made available for class use.

The criteria set up to determine which students will be considered for the program vary slightly for each course. Each class will seek students with group IQ scores of 125 or higher who have received recommendations from teachers.

In addition the MAD program will seek students who have shown evidence of talent in either music, art or drama. The other two courses will also require students to rank in the 92nd percentile or better in reading on their Iowa Test of Basic Skills, which is given to all eighth graders.

EVALUATION PROCEDURES will include opinion surveys of both teachers and students in each of the classes. In addition developmental reading students who lead discussions and develop projects will be evaluated by their fellow classmates to determine if the presentations have affected their reading habits.

Friends treat Hehns to a bash

The 400 block of N. Emerson St. had quite a party last Saturday night. It was a celebration of the 25th wedding anniversary of Herta and Peter Hehn who live at 417.

The street was blocked off, lights were strung and music was playing throughout the evening. Every family on the block and many friends of the Hehns attended the party. It was a surprise for the Hehns that they couldn't have been more thrilled.

The Hehns are Austrian, came to this country to live in Chicago in 1958. They moved to Mount Prospect in 1960. Reminiscing, the Hehns said they were born and wed in Ried im Innkreis (Innviertel) Austria. The marriage was a double wedding with her brother and his bride on July 9, 1949. The two couples were married first in a civil ceremony in the town hall and then went to church for a religious rite. They rode in a decorated carriage pulled by festooned horses.

At last weekend's party each family brought and cooked its own meat dish. In addition, everyone brought a "dish to pass" which created a giant smorgasbord table. There was even a black forest cake by Heinz of Heinz's Viennese Pastry Shop on Prospect Avenue.

Records played for the occasion provided Austrian music, and the Hehns and their friends displayed footwork artistry in Viennese waltzes.

At the end of the evening the whole neighborhood felt like it had attended a grand wedding reception rather than a wedding anniversary celebration.

RANDY KINER, 408 Prospect Manor, has done it again! He went to Urbana in June to compete with 411 kids from all over Illinois in "horticulture Judging and Identification." He took the top prize in the state, just like he did last year. And again, he couldn't go to national competition!

Last year, after taking the state prize, Randy was not allowed to compete nationally because he was only 13 years old and participants in the national level had to be 14. And this year it's the same story. Randy can't compete in nationals even though he is 14 now. The rule is that entrants must be 14 by Jan. 1 and Randy just recently turned that magic age.

Hang in there, Randy, and try again next year!

Randy is a member of the Mount Prospect Hoedowners 4H Club.

BY THE WAY, Randy's mom, Doris Kiner, was recently recognized for having taught Sunday School for 30 years. She was a teacher at Grace Lutheran Church on the South side of Chicago and at St. Mark Lutheran Church here in town where she is still teaching. Doris has instructed kids of all ages and is particularly proud that some of her former students are now in the ministry.

SMART MOVE, naming Dolores Haug — Mount Prospect's new assistant deputy clerk — to handle public relations for the village. She'll be super for sure. Her background includes journalistic work on the Prospect Day, The Mount Prospect Times and Northwest Suburban Topics. Her big push will be with the village calendar which heretofore has been prepared by an outside agency.

Dolores also is acting as publicity chairman for the village's Bicentennial Commission.

Survey shows residents oppose more apartments

Most Mount Prospect residents oppose the proliferation of apartments in the village, a preliminary check of a just-completed survey indicates.

In addition, numerous residents believe there is a lack of communications with the village government, according to a survey conducted by the Mount Prospect Community Action Plan.

Richard A. Bachhuber, president of the group, said Wednesday a spot check of 700 surveys shows that "more than half" of the residents wrote in comments expressing opposition to multifamily dwellings. Many others, he said, indicated a lack of communications.

Bachhuber said the surveys will be tabulated and a 10-to-15-page report completed by the end of September.

The survey was undertaken by the Community Action Plan to determine the attitude of Mount Prospect residents toward the village. Copies of the survey were distributed at random on a geographic basis, and results will be made available to local organizations.

One 'no' vote likely on Mrs. Reid hiring

Wheeling that have resulted in prison terms or probation for former village officials.

ANOTHER school board member, Kenneth Rodeck of Wheeling, said he has no objection to hiring Mrs. Reid. The other Dist. 21 school board members could not be reached Thursday for comment.

"My feelings are that I have to go along with the administration," Rodeck said. "The administration feels she's qualified and they interviewed a number of applicants. I'm not waiving in how I feel about it, but I get the feeling some of the board members are having second thoughts and want to discuss it, which is fine. If there's a problem, or they anticipate a problem, we'll have to take a deeper look at it."

Mrs. Reid's resignation and possible hiring are on the agenda of a special board meeting set for 7:30 tonight at the Dist. 21 administration building, 999 W. Dundee Rd., Wheeling.

The agenda tonight also calls for discussion of the controversy over an electronic surveillance system installed by Tempron, Inc.

The discussion about Mrs. Reid will be in closed session. The school board will decide at the meeting whether the Tempron case will be discussed in public.

"alive," but said, "we're not pushing it; there's no use in it right now."

Scott to file suit to halt police magazine ad scheme

by LEA TONKIN

Illinois Atty. Gen. William Scott said Thursday he will file suit this morning against the Illinois Police Bulletin magazine operation, which has attracted contributions from businesses in the Northwest suburbs and throughout the Chicago metropolitan area.

The suit, to be filed in Circuit Court, is aimed at halting the operation.

The action follows the arrest Tuesday of a "runner" for the magazine by Buffalo Grove police on a charge of attempted theft. Louis A. DeGrande of Chicago was arrested as he attempted to pick up $25 for an advertisement in the magazine at Rose-Lynn Flooring Store, 16 Ranch Mart.

Defendants named in the suit in addition to the Illinois Police Bulletin, are Thaddeus C. Toudor, Joseph Bianco and James Calona.

THE SUIT charges that Toudor and his associates called Chicago area businesses on the telephone to solicit contributions for advertisements in the "official" Illinois Police Bulletin.

Donald Mulack, assistant attorney general in the charitable trusts and donations division, said the magazine is not circulated among legitimate police organizations. The publication contains 95 per cent advertisements and has no professional content or readership value, he said.

"It's a sham," said Mulack of the magazine scheme. The 100 S. LaSalle St., Chicago address given by the magazine operators is fake, he said. An answering service at the location takes calls for Illinois Police Bulletin.

The runners and the answering service receive instructions in person from the operators, said Mulack, adding that Toudor's base of operations is unknown. One check for a $150 contribution from a Roselle firm was chased at the Crown

Liquor Store on the South side of Chicago.

MULACK said a standard sales pitch was used for the Illinois Police Bulletin ad sales. A man who identifies himself as a state police officer calls a business in the Chicago area. The caller asks whether the business executive would contribute a donation for an issue of the magazine honoring state police. Donations range from $35 to $150. A runner is sent out to collect the money. He keeps 3 per cent of the money and turns the rest over to Bianco or another operator, who hands out another list of advertisers.

An additional enticement to advertisers

was the offer of an Illinois Bureau of Information identification card by the operators. He name closely resembles the Illinois Bureau of Investigation title, Mulack noted. Advertisers were told that the card would grant access to police files on employees.

Illinois Police Bulletin apparently originated in November, 1972. One edition was published in 1973 and operators claimed that two editions would be published in 1974. The publication consists of advertiser listings (name and address), ads for the magazine and a story on marijuana which Mulack said was taken verbatim from a government publication.

THE SCHEME was designed to attract "patriotic, law-abiding members of the public," leading them to believe that contributions would be "used for police and legitimate police organizations," Scott charged.

The suit asks that the Illinois Police Bulletin operators be restrained from further solicitations. Scott also seeks an accounting for funds collected by the operators and that the funds be placed in a "constructive trust." The "large" amount of money collected by the group is unspecified.

School board members want some answers

At least one negative vote likely on Mrs. Reid hiring

by JILL BETTNER

At least one School Dist. 21 board member may vote against hiring former colleague Mary Joan Reid for a paid full-time administrative position at a special meeting tonight.

Mrs. Reid resigned from the board last week in order to assume the position of public relations director and volunteer coordinator at an annual salary of $9,000. She was on the Dist. 21 board for nine years, before her resignation which becomes effective Thursday.

Board members said Mrs. Reid's hiring has elicited several negative comments from the community. Dist. 21 serves Wheeling, Buffalo Grove, and portions of Arlington Heights and Mount Prospect.

School board member Lillian Stiller of Wheeling told The Herald Thursday Mrs. Reid's resignation and application for the Dist. 21 position came as a surprise to her. She also said she is not sure employing the former school board member is a good idea.

"If I had to vote now, I couldn't," Mrs. Stiller said of hiring Mrs. Reid. "I have to have the answers to several questions before I can vote."

AMONG questions concerning Mrs. Stiller, she said, are Mrs. Reid's qualifications for the Dist. 21 job, the number of other persons who applied and their qualifications and how well the fact that the position was available was publicized by the district.

Mrs. Stiller said she has received about 10 telephone calls regarding Mrs. Reid's resignation since it was announced last week.

Saying that all those who had called her were Wheeling residents, Mrs. Stiller commented, "I think people in Wheeling are a little sensitive these days."

She referred to recent scandals in Wheeling that have resulted in prison terms or probation for former village officials.

ANOTHER school board member, Kenneth Rodeck of Wheeling, said he has no objection to hiring Mrs. Reid. The other Dist. 21 school board members could not be reached Thursday for comment.

"My feelings are that I have to go along with the administration," Rodeck said. "The administration feels she's qualified and they interviewed a number of applicants. I'm not wavering in how I feel about it, but I get the feeling some of the board members are having second thoughts and want to discuss it, which is fine. If there's a problem, or they anticipate a problem, we'll have to take a deeper look at it."

Mrs. Reid's resignation and possible hiring are on the agenda of a special board meeting set for 7:30 tonight at the Dist. 21 administration building, 999 W. Dundee Rd., Wheeling.

The agenda tonight also calls for discussion of the controversy over an electronic surveillance system installed by Tempron, Inc.

The discussion about Mrs. Reid will be in closed session. The school board will decide at the meeting whether the Tempron case will be discussed in public.

Environment board cites stores for littered lots

The Arlington Heights Environmental Control Commission has cited two village stores for excessive litter in their parking lots and other outdoor areas.

Cited by the commission are Korvette's Shopping Center, Rand at Arlington Heights roads and the 7-Eleven store at 704 E. Kensington.

In letters mailed to the two stores, the ECC said a complaint will be filed with the village if the alleged litter problems are not corrected within one to two weeks.

The two stores named are the first to be identified under a new environmental program. The commission has divided the village into five sections and commission members assigned to look for environmental problems in each area.

It FORMALLY charged and found guilty in court of a litter violation, store owners are subject to a fine of $5 to $500 for each day the condition is permitted to continue, according to municipal ordinances.

The notices sent to Korvette's and 7-Eleven are signed by ECC Chairman Jean Hanlon, and members Marilyn Macko, Richard Winar, Robert Edelson and Jerrol Windbigler.

Mrs. Hanlon said the notices were a last resort in attempts to get store owners to keep their premises clean. She said she has talked to owners several times about the litter problem.

"We're trying to convince citizens that we're serious about keeping the community clean," Mrs. Hanlon said. The commission's job is to maintain and enhance the physical environment of Arlington Heights, she said.

Wilmette biker hurt in truck collision

A 21-year-old Wilmette man was injured slightly Wednesday night when his motorcycle collided with a truck at the intersection of Central Road and Main Street in Mount Prospect.

The injured man, Steven Jans, was treated at Northwest Community Hospital following the 8:11 p.m. accident.

Police charged the driver of the truck, Jack Knost, 58, of Meridian, Miss., with failure to yield the right-of-way while making a left turn at an intersection. Police said the truck turned in front of Jans' motorcycle. Knost is to appear Aug. 28 in the Mount Prospect branch of Circuit Court.

Blood's low at area center

Blood is in short supply at hospitals and blood banks throughout the metropolitan Chicago area, including the North Suburban Blood Center which coordinates Arlington Heights' guaranteed blood replacement program.

Mrs. Dolores Bricker, coordinator of the village program, said the next blood donating date will be from 1-5 p.m. Sunday, Aug. 11, at the First Presbyterian Church of Arlington Heights, 302 N. Dunton Ave.

A spokesperson for Northwest Community Hospital said Thursday that currently "supply was meeting demand." "We were short before and even now we have no surplus on hand."

Arlington Heights' blood assurance program guarantees free blood replacement for all village residents as long as 4 per cent of the population donates blood each year.

Last year, Arlington Heights met its quota of 2,768 pints of donated blood, and the village is doing "very well" so far this year, Mrs. Bricker said.

ARLINGTON HEIGHTS currently has 499 blood units credited to its quota.

"I think the program has worked well because we've built it on organized group donations. There are a lot of individuals out there we wouldn't reach except through organizations," said Mrs. Bricker.

The village health department keeps a record of each individual donating blood, and the donor and his family will be guaranteed free blood replacement regardless of whether the village meets its 4 per cent quota.

Companies, groups and organizations can also arrange to have all their employees or members covered, including non-Arlington Heights residents.

For additional information on the village blood program or to make an appointment for the Aug. 11 donor day, persons may call Mrs. Bricker at the Municipal Building, 253-2340.

Article features highway department

The Wheeling Township Highway Dept. and its commissioner Arthur E. Olsen Jr., was the subject of a story appearing in the July issue of Rural and Urban Roads Magazine.

The Magazine is a publication for highway and public works officials and engineers and is distributed nationwide.

The article describes Olsen as a person who "tries to run his road outfit like it was his own business, meaning that he is up early every day and in constant touch with everything."

Nancy Smith wins Miss Peanut title

Eight-year-old Nancy Lee Smith of Arlington Heights was chosen the winner of the local "Little Miss Peanut" contest held Thursday by the Kiwanis Club of Wheeling Township.

She will be eligible to compete for the "Little Miss Peanut" title in a division contest. Judges then will select a girl to represent all Kiwanis clubs that will participate in the annual Kiwanis kids day peanut sale in September.

Nancy, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. King Jay Smith, 2003 Shenandoah Dr., received a $25 savings bond.

Laseke drivers get list of complaints

The main criticisms of the garbage service provided by the Laseke Disposal Co., as reflected in a recent Herald survey, have been pointed out to the disposal company drivers.

Leaving the lids off cans and cutting through yards were among the most common complaints discussed with the drivers at their monthly meeting last week, Arlington Heights Health Director Frank Charlton said.

"I think their reaction was quite good," Charlton said.

Seventy-two per cent of the 439 residents who responded to the Herald survey rated the Laseke service either good or excellent. However, many residents also included comments on how they thought the service could be improved, or particular problems they have had.
